Foot-Ball Song.

TUNE—At the Cross.

At the gate, at the gate,
Where we went to meet our fate;
And our men they were happy as could be;
For we knew that day
We would teach 'em how to play,
And soon we'd have 'em up a tree.

At the game, at the game,
Where we put their team to shame;
And their line like paper rolled away;
'Twas there on the field
That to us they had to yield,
And now we are happy all the day.

On the field, on the field,
Where to us they had to yield;
And our men went running round the end;
'Twas there we met,
And we wiped them up you bet,
And now we have money we can lend.

Oh, the beer, oh, the beer,
Yes, it made us feel so queer,
When we got home from the fight;
For we'd met our fate,
And had to celebrate,
If it took up the most of the night.

A New Rule.

It is always the way of this world, that the darkest cloud comes before the brightest sunshine. The merry bicycler had, for some time back, been hearing her title read in a muttering tone; whenever she passed too near some acidulated old soul too aged to ride a wheel. These mutterings had grown apace until the anathema was audible in the faculty meeting. Immediately the little cloudlet had increased to a storm. Notices prohibiting bicycling on the college walks were posted everywhere. All pleasure had left the cyclist.

That night the formerly jolly wheelwoman, who so often in the happy time gone by, had run over some unlucky pedestrian, and, as the hind wheel passed over his neck, cried "Sic semper tyrannis": I say, this bright, happy creature could not sleep for sorrow at the recollection of pleasures gone by. The morning came, she arose early, her swollen eyes being unable to sleep. "If I must tread the paths that my grandmothers trod, let me be about practicing, ere the student shall discover my awkward attempts at trying to reclaim a lost art." When she arrived at the college gate, what should meet her eye but a sign with these words:

"Bicyclists are requested to ride on the college walks between the hours of 9 a. m. and 6 p. m."

She could not contain herself for joy, she hobbled nearer in order to find out if her eyes had not deceived her, but no, she was correct. She stumbled along a few steps further, and saw another sign, which informed her that, in honor of the new rules going into effect, one Patsy Fay would give an exhibition on the Campus Martius at 4:15 that afternoon. Her joy knew no bounds, hopping, crawling, sometimes almost walking, she hurried home in order to mount her wheel by 9 o'clock, and inform her friends that there was to be a spark of pleasure left in that soul which the night before had been devoid of everything but grief.

The first sentence of this article says it is always the way of the world that the darkest cloud comes before the brightest sunshine. The converse statement, that the brightest sunshine comes before the darkest cloud, is equally true. If you don't believe it ask that acidulated old soul, who has no wheel and could not ride it if she had one.

Law Class Organization.

At half past one o'clock last Saturday afternoon the law class students of the class of '98, met for the purpose of organization. Prof. C. A. Graves was chairman of the meeting, he having been selected by the two sides. There were three officers to be elected—a president, vice-president, and secretary and treasurer.

For the office of president there were two names nominated. Mr. Wilson of Kentucky, in a short speech, nominated Mr. Van Astor Batchelor of North Carolina. The nomination was seconded by Mr. C. W. F. Spencer of South Carolina. Mr. Burr of Alabama, placed in nomination the name of Mr. Charles James Faulkner, Jr., of West Virginia. Mr. D. M. Hammat of West Virginia, seconded Mr. Faulkner's nomination. The nominations were then closed and a secret ballot was taken. Mr. Batchelor's election was the result. Upon motion of Mr. Burr the election of Mr. Batchelor was made unanimous, showing the good feeling between the sides.

D. M. Hammat of West Virginia, and W.C. Bouldin of Texas, were nominated for the office of vice-president. Upon request of Mr. Hammat his name was withdrawn, and Mr. Bouldin was elected by acclamation.

Mr. W. W. Keyser of Missouri, was unanimously elected to the office of secretary and treasurer. He was called upon for a speech and accepted the office with full sense of the honor conferred.

VAN ASTOR BATCHELOR.

Van Astor Batchelor, the president of the Law class of '98, was born Jan. 5, 1876, in Nash county, N. C. His youth was spent at his home, Nashville, N. C., where he secured his early training. At an early age he entered the Davis Military school of his own state, and later the Randolph-Macon academy of Bedford City, Va. With such preparation he entered the University of North Carolina, where he was graduated in the academic class of 1896. In September, 1896, he matriculated as a student of Washington and Lee university, and entered upon his study of law. He has ever been a fine student, and has won the esteem of his professors and fellow-students. He stands high in his class and is not only a representative student but a representative of the best.

Last year he managed the Calyx and made a wonderful success, considering the late hour at which the work was taken up. He is full of college spirit and such a man as should receive honors at the hands of his fellow students.

He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity, which has no chapter here, and also of Theta Nu Epsilon.

Washington Society.

An election of officers was held by the Washington Literary Society on last Saturday night and the following officers were elected:

Borden H. Burr, Ala., President.
Thos. J. Farrar, Va., Vice-President.

J. J. Winn, Ala., Secretary.
Chas. N. Roark, Ky., Treasurer.
Chas. W. Guthrie, Ky., Censor.
Mosby G. Perrow, Va., Critic.

Y. M. C. A.

The exercises at the regular afternoon meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association last Sunday were very enjoyable. At that time Dr. Quarles kindly gave us one of his intensely practical talks. No one present could fail to be impressed with the earnestness of the Doctor's appeal for "An early decision."

The committee in charge of the music will make a special effort to have this interesting part of our programs as attractive as possible. Mr. Auschutz will conduct this feature of the meetings.

So far the attendance has been gratifyingly good. Those who attend regularly find that they cannot afford to miss these regular meetings for united Christian effort. Although the attendance has been good yet we hope that many more of the students will find it attractive and helpful to attend.

The meetings are at 4 o'clock every Sunday afternoon and every student is cordially welcome.

The leader for next Sunday is J. A. McClure and his subject "Missions."

Chapel Exercises.

A good many of the students and a few of the professors are missing much by not attending the regular Chapel exercises at 8:40 o'clock in the morning. Coming as they do just before the busy part of the daily routine they strengthen and reassure for the day's duties. At present Dr. Wightman is conducting the exercises and has been reading selections which are particularly adapted to young men, for whom the Doctor has a strong love. Last week his readings were from the Proverbs of the Wise Man. This week he is reading from the Saviour's translation of the Decalogue.

Let's see if more of us can't get through breakfast earlier and avail ourselves of a real privilege.

A Pleasant Time.

The editors take pleasure in call-attention to what they believe is to be a real treat. On the 9th and 11th of October, Mr. Hawks, of Baltimore, will give two of his highly humorous lectures under the auspices of the college Y. M. C. A. Those who have heard him in Lexington will hardly fail to hear him again, and those who still have to hear him for the first time have before them a delightful evening. You can make engagements with the "calic." They will certainly want to go. A fuller notice will be obtained from the poster's, which are being distributed. A crowded house before will be a sufficient guarantee of a packed house this time.

Prize Story.

The Southern Collegian editors have taken up their work with great zeal and have made an unprecedented move. At their last meeting they decided to give a prize, not less than five dollars or its equivalent, to the writer of the best short story published in the Collegian. This is not given out of the funds of the Collegian; but by the editors personally. They want to encourage literary work among the students generally, the idea being to correct the impression that the editors want to monopolize the space of the Collegian for their own articles. They want the best magazine possible, and all articles submitted will receive the fairest treatment. All those competing for this prize will so signify when handing in their articles. This prize will be given provided at least six stories are handed in. For further information, see one of the editors.

A Bridgeport, Conn., woman has for the last three years wept over the grave of her beloved husband. We don't know exactly how she felt the other day when she found out that she had been spending her tears over the wrong grave, as we were never in the same position.

Collegian Editors.

E. C. Smith of Montana, and W. Kyle McClung of Virginia, were elected by the Washington Literary Society on last Saturday night as their two associate editors of the Southern Collegian. Great harmony prevailed and the gentlemen elected were the only ones nominated. It was understood that they were agreeable associates to the editor-in-chief, Mr. M. G. Perrow. This completes the staff of our most worthy literary magazine.

The erroneous opinion is entertained by some that THE RING-TUM PHI is pulling against the Collegian. Such is surely not the case as is evidenced by the fact that Mr. Barret and Mr. McClung are on both editorial boards. The two publications are thoroughly in sympathy with each other and with different interests they will both be successful. One is a college newspaper; the other a literary magazine. Let every student show his college spirit by subscribing to both and most especially by exercising his literary powers. You may not know what a genius you are until you try. The editors of the Collegian are willing and anxious to have contributions from the students and alumni.

Washington and Lee Versus Columbian University.

On Friday next Washington and Lee's foot-ball season will open with a game against the Columbian University of Washington. Now Washington and Lee is going to win that game, so all must go out and cheer the boys to victory. Every student must be there, if the team is to receive the support that it should have. Come out, bring your calic, or if you haven't one bring somebody else's, yell, sing the song which the foot-ball muse has composed for us, and you will not only encourage the players but make the game more enjoyable to yourself.

Learn to Sing.

Let everyone learn to sing the football song. The second verse is especially good, so learn it first, and practice it all next week, and above all don't get stage fright when you start to sing it.

Butterworth, '95, Yale's famous full-back, is back coaching the team of which he was once star.

The Foot-ball Meeting.

Nearly all the students followed the advice on the magnificent poster seen on the bulletin board Friday, the 24th, and came to the Newcomb Hall at 4 o'clock to hear President Wilson's address on foot-ball.

He said he knew nothing about foot-ball and was not prepared to give us a practical speech. Nevertheless he advocated the playing of the game and expressed his earnest desire that the team be a successful one. He emphasized the importance of regular practice in attaining the best results.

Only one thing met the disapproval of the boys, that was his promise to keep up the policy of the faculty in regard to the team going on trips. One reason the managers of our teams have so much trouble with finances is that our teams are obliged to stay at home and pay guarantees to visitors when the gate receipts do not pay more than incidental expenses. The only way a manager can make money is by a trip, and this opportunity the faculty denies him.

The faculty says if we have a good team they will let us go. One might as well keep a little bird in its nest and insist that it must not try to fly until it knows how. A team gets more experience and better practice by going on a trip than in any other way: above all they gain confidence in themselves. When they get confidence they can play ball.

A strong friendship exists between West Point and Harvard on account of a pleasant incident that occurred in connection with last year's foot-ball game. The cadets offered a guarantee to the crimson kickers to cover the expenses of a trip to West Point. It was accepted; but when the Harvard boys learned that their hosts could collect no gate money they insisted on returning the sum received. Not to be outdone in generosity, the West Pointers used the money to purchase a handsome loving cup, which is now one of Harvard's most cherished trophies.

There will be no foot-ball game between the West Pointers and the Naval Academy this year. The game has been opposed by the Superintendent of the Naval Academy, who says it causes ill feeling between the two schools.

The Maid of Athens.

Maiden of this college town,
Thou art dainty, fair and sweet,
Far too soon I found myself
Bent in suppliance at thy feet.

But alas! when I am gone
Soon forgotten will I be,
Other eyes will drink thy smile,
And no more you'll think of me.

Then adieu, O maiden fair!
Like the sirens e'en thou art,
But no longer shalt thou play
All so lightly with my heart.

—S. G. HAMNER.

Foot-Ball.

Manager Lisle presented a splendid schedule to the athletic committee last week which was ratified by them, and now only awaits the confirmation of the President to become assured.

It will not only promise enjoyment to the lucky ones who succeed in making the team, but its outcome will be of absorbing interest to every friend of the University.

It will furnish a stimulus to athletics, cause an awakening of college spirit, encourage competition for positions of 'Varsity making the men seek the places instead of the places seek the men. By coming into contact with the different sections, and into friendly rivalry with the foremost colleges of the South, our University will secure a far-reaching and practical advertisement.

If we take the Southern trip it is an object of both pride and interest to make it a success by returning home with the lion's share of honor and glory. If, we will all labor together, we can all enjoy yelling together.

Our first games are all on the home grounds:

Columbian University, Oct. 8.

Allegheny Institute, Oct. 16.

Roanoke College, Oct. 23.

After these games the team will leave for its Southern trip, playing the following schedule:

Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Oct. 30.

Central University, at Lexington, Ky., Nov. 1.

University of West Virginia, at Charlestown, Nov. 23.

The practice has, on the whole, been exceedingly good, and the men are fast rounding into prime form. We need some heavy men in the center, and with this addition the team will be a strong one. The following men have been playing on the first team: Campbell, Alford, Shields, Dixon, Powell, Burr, Michler, Oberlin, Webb, Muir, McClure and Snyder.

The second team deserves a great deal of credit for their work. If they keep it up there will in all probability be some changes in 'Varsity's line-up, several of the players fail to have a sugar trust combination on their positions.

Under Captain Lang's leadership and Manager Batchelor's direction, the following men are making us a 'Varsity: Fitzhugh, Capito, Bledsoe, E.; Bledsoe, T.; Lee, McClure, C.; Guthrie, Martin, Snyder, Tucker, Sloan, Graves, Lakin, Roark, Moore, McB.; McSween and Witherspoon.

Of these Bledsoe, T.; Lee, Guthrie, Snyder, Sloan, Graves, Witherspoon and Bledsoe, T., deserve especial mention. With next week's practice we should be able to make an excellent show in our first game, at which everyone is expected to be present, and to give their personal encouragement to the team.

Fraternities.

The numerous fraternities in our midst have been, to some extent, hampered in their fall ceremonies by the scarcity of freshmen. Nevertheless some have done quite well and are not bewailing the hard times. The following have appeared as newly fledged fraternity men:

Sigma Chi—J. K. Graves, J. Jones and W. O. Bonney.

Sigma Alpha Epsilons—J. T. Robinson, C. R. Robinson, W. P. Stuart.

Phi Kappa Psi—J. W. Johnson, H. L. Martin, A. B. Winfree, E. R. Preston.

Sigma Nus—Edwin Bledsoe, Tom Bledsoe, W. K. Keyser, Samuel Preston.

Kappa Alphas—H. St. G. T. Carmichael.

Delta Tau Delta—E. C. Smith, C. R. Blain, C. C. McNeill.

Mu Pi Lambdas—Winfield Liggett:

We also note that Kappa Alpha has been fortunate in having four transfers—Messrs. Palmer, Crebs, Perry Alford and Smith Alford.

A Generous Gift.

The Bicycle.

Did you ever hear of a bicycle? Did you ever see one? Did you ever learn to ride one? These three questions will bring in everybody. To appreciate this creation of the genius of the nineteenth century, you should be awkward and nervous and sixty years of age, and undertake to master the creature. It is likely that in less than a fortnight you would learn some interesting facts about it; I have, and I will tell you some of them.

It is the most efficient lemon-squeezer ever invented. Try it on yourself, and it will express more juice from your corporosity than you had thought there was in you. You will be convinced that you are three-fourths water when your clothing is saturated with the outflow from every pore.

It has the high art of the broncho or the mule, and more surely than either of them will initiate you into the mysteries of aerial navigation, with the experience of Darius Green and his flying machine. I suggest that you conduct your courtship of this kicking, flinging damsel where rocks do not abound.

John L. Sullivan, Jim Corbett nor Bob Fitzsimmons can equal it as a bruiser. It is not restrained by the amenities of the Marquis of Queensbury's rules. There is not an inch, nor a tissue, nor an organ of your body that it considers sacred. It strikes above or below the belt as pleases its own sweet will. Besides two sprained thumbs (if I had had any more they would have been sprained too, but they were all I had on hand at the time), I counted a round dozen bruises on my body at one survey; all the product of its dexterity. They were distributed from my head to my heels. Limbs and necks it occasionally shows its ability and willingness to break.

It is the most rapid and completely effective exhaust-pump now made. You will be convinced of this, when you first attempt to promenade with it up a hill; the very last particle of air will have left your lungs, and you will be panting in desperation for a breath.

Another of its accomplishments is the production of music. The conditions under which this is seen are simple and you can try them with confidence as to the result. Eat a hearty meal, embracing melons (cantalopes preferred), and then engage at once in a waltz with the bicycle up the heights of Brushy hill, and if the feline viscera, strung upon the violin, ever gave forth a more sincere and touching threnody of distress than will come from the tense nerves of your agonized body, then your experience will not be like mine. Your organs, played upon by the deft touch of this maestro will respond in a miserere, pitched, in a minor key, that will bring a crowd of interested, sympathetic friends (including your doctor) to stand awestruck around your bed.

There are many other interesting facts about this wonderful invention but I shall content myself with a final suggestion; it is the most jealous of beings. It does not brook a rival. When you are in its company, it demands that you shall concentrate on it your eyes, your ears, your thoughts, your affections, your desires, your hopes, your fears, your purposes, your all. I have tried to salute in the simplest way a friend, to glance aside one second, occasionally to wink; ah me! how I have been rebuked for such temerity. If your mind is troubled with lack of the power of fixed attention, put yourself under the tutelage of this teacher, and you will learn that you must concentrate at the peril of life or limb. There is nothing else that so fully engages the energies of both mind and body; indeed, it is an American and a German gymnasium combined.

The conclusion of the matter is, that you must give up the idea of mastering the bicycle by bending it will to yours, by changing its nature to suit you. On the contrary, it trains you, you do not train it; you must change, it does not, will not change. Humbly, patiently, perseveringly seek to mould yourself to it, until it becomes spontaneous, automatic for you to move in harmony with its nature. When the bicycle has thus mastered you, you will have mastered it.

SEXAGENARIAN.

One of the leading financiers of the town remarked the other day that Slicer's position is a case of grin and BARRET.

Seven Yale men passed last summer working as motor men in New Haven, in order to earn money to help them along at college.

The Princeton-Lafayette game, to be played early in November, will furnish one of the greatest gridiron contests of the year outside the games between the "Big Four." Barclay, Lafayette's star half-back, is coaching the Lafayette eleven at Easton, and is said to be putting lots of ginger into the work. Lafayette held the Tigers down to a tie game last year and will make a tremendous effort to drag Nassau's colors in the dust this time.
