BY THE STUDENTS AND FOR THE STUDENTS.

VOL. IV.

WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1900.

NO. 4.

Wednesday Morning.

Dr. Quarles' lecture Wednesday morning was an arraignment of the English people, both in their political and commercial pursuits. He showed that while England stands second only to the United States in progress and civilization, and while it is the moving spirit of the great British empire, on whose possessions the sun never sets, containing as it does six millions of square miles and three hundred millions of people, yet it has assumed those vast proportions by wars of conquest, and rules two hundred and seventy-four millions of those people against the just consent of the governed.

The speaker then assured us that although himself an Englishman, he felt the responsibility of moulding young men and stood to arraign England of two great faults. First, she is today, and has been false the just principles of freedom and self-government. She has by force deprived and is now depriving many of this right. He then pointed to our own country as an example, and showed that when she began to use us for mercenary motives we rebelled and threw off the yoke of oppression. The Irish have this right. Guiana, in South America, is ruled in the same way. In Africa she rules a people who are in every respect her equal. In Asia she rules the Hindus, a people who were civilized before the English had emerged from barbarism, and whose language the English people haven't brains enough to understand. He then pointed especially to the treatment of the Dutch in South Africa, and declared that for purity of conduct and Christian manliness Paul Kruger has no equal in the British empire.

The second great charge is that she is guilty of the worship of mammon. She has become the great robber nation through greed. Her desire to increase her territories is not for purposes of civilization, but to increase her commercial power and enrich her people. If diamonds and gold had not been discovered in South Africa those people would have been free today. Again, it was declared that England is responsible for many of the troubles in China. The Opium war was the result of her mercenary greed.

The speaker then pointed out the cause of England's evil course as being her false Philosophy of Ethics, which is a lower form of Utilitarianism founded on the doctrine of Paley. This doctrine makes man do good only for the pursuit of his own happiness, and not for rights own sake as taught by the true philosophy.

Thus England has become unpopular. We were then warned that our own country is now entering upon a similar career, that England wishes us to follow in her wake, but that it is the hope of the speaker that our people will awake to their danger before it is too late.

Dramatic Club.

Among the prominent organizations in all of the colleges and universities of today is found a dramatic club. This is a feature of college life which ought not to pass neglected at Washington and Lee and it is hoped that a club will shortly be organized which will reflect credit upon the university.

There should be, and doubtless is, plenty of talent in college along this line which only needs to be developed. Everyone who has any ability in this direction and those who have tastes for such things ought to desire to cultivate the art, as it can certainly accomplish much good for them.

It is desired that those who are interested in this measure will meet on Tuesday, Oct. 16, at 4 p. m., in Dr. Quarles' lecture room. At that time an organization will be formed and some future plans determined upon. Let all be on time.

Volney M. Brown is studying law at the University of Texas and incidentally trying for the football team.

A hat that will be a comfort is our celebrated $3.00 hat. Joseph Auerbach, Hatter, Washington, D.C.

Attention Voters.

For the information of those students who are not residents of the state, and of those who are unacquainted with its laws in regard to voting the following will be of value:

Every man who has resided in Virginia for one year and in Rockbridge county for three months is entitled to vote here. This qualifies all students 21 years of age who were at W. & L. last year and have returned this session.

Those, however, who are registered in other counties in Virginia will have to secure a transfer from such county certifying that their names have been erased from the registration books of that county and this transfer they will present to the registrar of this election district. Secure this at once. Men not registered elsewhere in Virginia and from other states need not have such certificates.

They must register ten days before the November elections in order to vote. The registrar will be found at Moore's store on Nelson street, two doors below Gorrell's drug store.

Last but not least, you do not have to pay your poll tax nor produce receipts for former years in order to vote in Virginia.

As the congressional contest in this district promises to be a close one all students qualified to vote should do so.

Class '01 Meets.

The academic class of '01 held its first meeting of the year Thursday evening in Dr. Quarles' lecture room and elected the following officers: President, T. A. Bledsoe, Va.; vice-president, M. P. Andrews, W. Va., and secretary and treasurer, W. J. Elgin, Va.

The only other business discussed was in regard to wearing class caps, the general opinion of the class being against this custom as being rather too "prepish" for so dignified a body as the present senior class.

Florida Club.

Eleven of the orange and alligator push got together Thursday and organized themselves into a body social, and it is whispered political.

Key West was honored by the unanimous and uproarious election of Geo. G. Brooks as president. Mr. Tuten had presented the right of Mr. Brooks to the position in such a flowery way that the men from that land were unable to resist his eloquence. Mr. Brooks made things hum from the very start, and in order that he might have an opportunity of discussing the weighty matters which will be constantly presented for solution to this organization without the necessity of addressing himself as "Mr. President," the dignified and scholarly member from Palatka, J. P. Wall, Jr., was elected vice-president. There was a hard contest for the joint office of secretary and treasurer, but R. P. Daniels had so carefully canvassed the situation that he won out.

And then there were all sorts of motions, proposals and amendments. It is said that the Jacksonville member wanted to discuss the Capitol Removal question, and a gentleman from Bartow wanted to move W. L. U. to Florida. These unscrupulous reports were probably originated by one of the other state clubs, jealous of the progress of this one.

Out of chaos, which was the order of business for the 30 minutes succeeding the elections, two distinct ideas emerged; one was the appointment of a committee to formulate rules for the guidance of the club, and the other was a motion to adjourn, to meet whenever the president determines to make his next assault on existing conditions.

R. E. Brown of last year's law class is on the way to the Florida legislature, having received the Democratic nomination, which is equivalent to an election.

We claim originality in our neckwear. Joseph Auerbach, Men's Outfitter, Washington, D. C.

The habit of taking books and magazines from the library without permission has been carried so far that it has grown to be not only an endless source of trouble to the librarian but a cause of annoyance and inconvenience to the student body.

The librarian is responsible for all of the books and periodicals under her charge, and for that reason, if no other, students should draw books and magazines from the library in the proper way. Besides, she has several other things to do in addition to spending her time in attempting to trace up books which have been taken from the library without her knowledge.

Moreover, the library was not founded for the selfish enjoyment of any one student, but for the student body. In the regular order of things it was not intended that large classes in History, Economics and other departments should fold their hands and wait until one of their fellow classmen spent a week in reading an assignment from a book which he had no right to take from the library. The magazine tables also were not designed for a sort of snatch and grab game, permitting the man who first laid his hands on the periodicals to keep them. These magazines are bound and kept on file and used for reference.

If the practice of drawing books without permission is not discontinued, it would be well to start a subscription to purchase reference books and magazines for the few individuals who persist in taking them, at the same time making the request that the librarian should cease to be annoyed and the student body permitted to use the books in the library.

It would be a source of much pleasure and profit to have a series of popular lectures and concerts at the University this winter. It is also not improbable that it would add considerably to the financial support of athletics.

The plan is perfectly feasible. In the first place it would be necessary to correspond with a lecture bureau in regard to the expense and the itinerary of their speakers. The entire cost of the series of lectures and concerts could then be ascertained and season tickets sold to cover the amount, thereby abolishing all risk. Of course the price of the season tickets would depend on the number that could be sold, and if the students and town people would properly support the enterprise a number of platform speakers could be obtained at a small cost to each individual per lecture. The faculty would probably allow the Chapel to be used for the purpose and the expense would consist almost entirely in advertising. The surplus of receipts over expenditures could be devoted to athletics or to some other form of student enterprise.

An effort should be made to secure such a series of entertainments during the winter. It is hoped that it will meet with the support that it deserves.

One form of work has been neglected by the literary societies for several years, that is the joint debates. These debates have always aroused interest in the work of the societies and increased the friendly rivalry existing between them. As both societies are in a prosperous condition this year an effort should be made to resume this important branch of work.

Verily the players on the scrub team have their reward in the satisfaction which comes from the realization that they have done their duty as college spirit prompted them. They have also the enjoyment which every player finds in the game of football or baseball. But it seems nothing but fair that they should be given some reward more tangible and less abstract. In many universities the policy has been adopted of turning the second team over to the assistant manager of the first team, authorizing him to act as its manager and to arrange games for it with the second teams of other schools, or with teams unable to cope with the first team. Why could not this plan be adopted here? It would be followed by little, if any, expense, and would give the players who do not make the first team something to compensate them for their hard work.

Communicated.

Editor Ring-tum Phi:

Being recently appointed one of the committee to sell season tickets I wish to say through your columns that my labors so far have been quite successful. "Old" men and freshmen alike are showing a healthy interest in our college athletics and, as far as I have gone, considerable generosity in its support. I believe that the large freshman class of last year was one which exhibited better spirit in this respect than any class which has come to Washington and Lee for many years. When once possessed true college spirit is never lost, and this class may naturally be expected to "keep the ball a rolling." Again we have a large freshman class and may that of 1904 not fall behind its immediate predecessor in both enthusiasm and liberality.

I have never heard of anyone who afterwards regretted getting a season ticket, and more especially since the days of good management and home games.

A few say that they will wait till the spring and get a baseball ticket. Well, half a loaf is better than no loaf at all—but such should try (if they haven't got it) to create in themselves an interest in all our competitive games and thus become broadened out, not confining their interest to any single one.

Let every one buy season tickets and save money.

Washington Society.

The meeting Saturday night was without doubt the most interesting one we have had this year. Boogher declaimed a selection from "Locksley Hall," which was especially enjoyed by lovers of the sentimental.

The question for debate was, "Resolved, That China should be dismembered and divided equally among the civilized nations of the world." A great deal of spirit was shown by the speakers on both sides. Turner made a noble effort to prove the affirmative from a secular point of view, while Spencer argued from a religious standpoint. Glasgow and Moore made excellent speeches against dismemberment and were ably supported by the voluntary remarks of Wilson, Whipple and Ellis. Whether the judges were influenced by superior argument or by the greater number of men on the negative, we know not, at any rate they did not want to see a "breaking up of China."

PROGRAM—OCT. 20, 1900.

Orators—Ott, McDowell, Parks.
 Declaimers—Graybill, Hankins, Collins.

Debate—Resolved, That the world owes more to men of thought than to men of action.

Affirmative—R. R. Phelps, Woodson.

Negative—H. W. Hamilton, Miller.

Class of '02.

At a meeting of the class of '02 Friday afternoon the following officers were elected by acclamation: President, W. D. Cooke; vice-president, R. W. Crawford; secretary and treasurer, W. G. McDowell, Jr.; historian, W. J. Lauck; representative on the Calyx, B. D. Causey.

In response to the call for a speech the president-elect responded with that eloquence and taste so conspicuously displayed in his hosiery. The other officers responded with an admirable mixture of humor and pathos. The touching part of the treasurer's speech will come when the fees are due. With one voice the meeting directed the president to appoint a committee to draft a resolution expressing the sorrow of the class at the pusillanimity of the class of '03 in letting such a fresh freshman class run over them without ever a mile protest. The meeting adjourned in time to inspect the new element just discovered in the chemical laboratory.

The Kentuckians.

The Kentucky club held its first regular meeting Friday evening at the room of Mr. W. C. Young. About 14 prospective colonels were present. After a few minutes spent in discussing the state of affairs in Kentucky and consoling themselves in their voluntary exile from their native state, the meeting was called to order and a constitution and by-laws were adopted. The election of officers then followed. After considerable debate it was decided to hold this election according to the laws of Virginia, and as far as our reporter could learn there were no casualties. Mr. W. C. Young was unanimously elected president; Mr. G. N. Forrester, vice-president, and Mr. R. C. Lord, secretary and treasurer. Dr. Howe was also unanimously elected an honorary member of the club.

Collegian Prizes.

The aim of the Collegian is to encourage literary work among the students. The Santini Prize Medal, valued at sixty dollars, is awarded to the writer of the best essay or story published in the magazine each session. In addition to this, the management this session offers a second prize of $10 in cash for the best article of any kind, prose or poetry, of not more than four printed pages—no minimum limit.

Every student who has done or expects to do any literary work is urged to try for one or both of these prizes. Contributions cannot come in too soon or too fast for the editors. The manager is also ready to enter names on his subscription list as fast as they are presented to him.

All contributions should be sent by mail to the editor-in-chief, with name of writer enclosed in separate envelope, which will not be opened unless article is accepted for publication.

Grahamites.

Graham-Lee is starting out with fine prospects this year as is testified by the enthusiasm and conscientious work of her members. The meeting last week was unusually good. Several new names were enrolled and the program was a complete success.

Mr. Tuten, Fla., delivered a well thought out and beautifully written oration entitled "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," in which he pointed out the growth of this nation in the past, its position as a political and moral factor today, and the evil tendency which is leading it toward a policy of militarism and imperialism.

The debate centered around the question whether or not the state should support schools and colleges. Messrs. Daniels, Corbett, Oberlin and McCluer appeared as the champions of the American Free School system and broke logical lances with Messrs. White, Lord and Preston of the opposing side.

The debate concluded the exercises for the evening and after a few minutes of routine business the society adjourned.

Bradford Debating Society.

The debate Thursday night was on a case involving the question whether an infant on his avoidance of a contract, can recover what he has paid without returning the consideration he has received from the other party.

The cause of the infant was ably upheld by the well known firm of Tucker & Preston, while the adult in the case wisely chose as his counsel Messrs. McGuire and Wall. The debate was an excellent one, all of the attorneys displaying an accurate knowledge of the legal points involved, and careful preparation.

The court, consisting of Chief Justice Biggs and Associate Justices Woodson, Allan, Breckenridge and Shields, decided in favor of the infant, Justice Breckenridge dissenting, and this decision was concurred in by a large majority of the class.

Professors Burks and Vance then discussed the case, both concluding that it had been rightly decided, and the society adjourned to meet again next Thursday.
