New Science Building

Economics Building and Dormitories

A wealthy business man of Chicago, whose name is withheld, has signified his intention of giving to the University a large and handsome building to be devoted to the departments of Physics and Engineering. The work of erection will be pushed to completion as soon as the plans are drawn and the contract let. It is reported that the building will cost $30,000 and an additional $7,000 will be donated for the equipment.

The building will be erected in the rear of Newcomb Hall facing in the opposite direction, will probably be of brick, and of the same general style as the main building. The location of the building at this point will lead to a change in the building plans of the University due to a suggestion from Mr. Theodore C. Link, a prominent architect of St. Louis, who was sent by the Chicago gentleman to draw the plans for the science building. Mr. Link's view was that there should be no rear to the college buildings, but that they should face the railroad as well as the present campus, and the grounds between the present buildings and the railroad improved. This suggestion will be adopted, the new buildings will be along the crest of the hill, and Mr. Link has promised to lay out a suitable roadway through the grounds which may be made the basis for further improvements.

The gift of the building was brought about by a correspondence of President Denny with the Chicago gentleman as the result of the interest he had manifested in the University at the time of the raising of the Wilson Memorial fund, although he did not contribute at the time. President Denny reopened the correspondence some time ago, with the above gratifying result.

The plan is being considered of building a Wilson Memorial building for the department of Economics by borrowing the necessary funds and providing for their retirement by creating a sinking fund from the income of the Wilson fund. It has been definitely decided to erect a modern-equipped dormitory and the plans are already prepared. Both of these buildings will probably be completed within the next few years.

Easter German

Brilliant Social Affair

One of the prettiest dances given in Lexington in many a day was the German given by the Cotillion Club on Easter Monday.

Powdered hair and painted cheeks not only made the dancers look a little better than their very best, but these or something else seemed to make everyone enter into the spirit of the occasion, and certain it is that for all who were among the fortunate dancers, it will long linger as a pleasant memory.

The German was lead by Mr. J. W. Bagley with Miss Rosa Tucker of Lexington, assisted by Mr. W. D. Conrad with Miss Ethel Greiner of Philadelphia.

The other couples were Mr. Smiley with Miss Adderton of North Carolina; Mr. Pipes with Miss Janney of Leesburg, Va.; Mr. Ross with Miss Haskins of Lexington; Mr. Pancake with Miss Claytor of Bedford City, Va.; Mr. Arbuckle with Miss Jordan of Lexington; Mr. Gibbs with Miss Davis of Mt. Jackson, Va.; Mr. Shields with Miss Dunlap of Roanoke; Mr. Steves with Miss Gwendolen Howe of Lexington; Mr. Bledsoe with Miss Martha Moore of Lexington; Mr. Osburn with Miss Butler of Rockbridge Baths, Va.; Mr. Wise with Miss Turnbull of Lexington; Mr. Grasty with Miss Frazier of Staunton; Mr. Dawson with Miss Turner of Lexington.

Among the stags were Messrs. Price, Haw, Burks, Moore, Harvey, Stephenson, Bledsoe, Lamar, Turner, and Captains Peyton, Bernard, Cabell and Carter and the first class of the V. M. I.

The German was chaperoned by Mrs. George H. Denny, Mrs. Hunter Pendleton, Mrs. E. Morgan Pendleton, Mrs. Samuel B. Walker, Jr., Mrs. William R. Vance, Mrs. James W. Kern, Mrs. George C. Marshall, Mrs. W. Le Conte Stevens, and Mrs. David C. Humphreys.

At 12 o'clock refreshments were served, after which the German was turned into a hop which was kept up until 2 o'clock.

The music was furnished by the V. M. I. band.

Randolph-Macon Debate

The Randolph-Macon debate has been definitely arranged and the date fixed for May 15. The preliminary debate to choose the men to represent the University will be held during the early part of the coming month. Messrs. Ralston and Wisman will represent the Washington Society and Messrs. Harvey and Day the Ganham-Lee. From these contestants two men will be chosen to represent the University.

It is intended to make the day a gala affair, having the field day exercises and the Liberty Hall memorial services during the morning and afternoon. The Randolph-Macon Woman's College, of Lynchburg, has been invited to spend the day here, and while no definite assurance has been received, it is expected that they will attend in a body.

Harry Lees

With the spring term the candidates for the Harry Lee crew began active training, and not for several years has there been as determined a set of men trying for the crew. Possibly this is due, in some measure, to the fact that a new cedar boat has been ordered for their use this year, which will make the race more nearly even. Or it may be that each man has ambitions of his own to win from the fine crew that the Albert Sidneys are sure to get out; but possibly a better reason for this aroused interest is the fact that boating is itself now looked upon as about the best form of athletic sport at W. L. U. We might add to this, too, the fact that the four best oarsmen will again have the opportunity of winning a race from the Va. Boat Club in Richmond.

It is impossible at this time to make any forecasts as to who will pull the several oars. Of last year's crew, Trundle and L. C. Payne are trying for stroke. In addition to these, Sterrett and A. F. White are possibilities. Of the new men Moss, Meredith, Johnston, Wilson, and Kellum are good men. Glasgow and McPheeters are good oarsmen, as they have had experience heretofore. Sampson and McCrum who have had experience as coxwain unfortunately have grown a good deal, but still they may run Huse and Ben Preston a hard race for the place.

An Urgent Need

One of the most pressing needs in the student-body is some form of cooperation with the business managers of the various student enterprises. At many colleges there have been formed Student cooperative associations for the purpose of patronizing business men who support student enterprises.

The business management of the Calyx has recently had its attention very forcibly called to the need of such an association at Washington & Lee, in its efforts to secure advertisements for this publication. In order to start a movement of such a nature thereby securing better results for the future managers of such publications it would call the particular attention of the student-body to the advertising columns of the Calyx, which makes its appearance the latter part of each month.

Among those who have patronized the Calyx most liberally are proprietors of the two student billiard parlors, and L. G. Pettigrew, and H. O. Dold, as well as all the prominent business men of Lexington, and Mr. James E. Irvine of Charlottesville.

As the 1903 Calyx is costing in round figures $1,000, the management is absolutely dependent upon the support of advertisers secured and had it not felt assured of the hearty cooperation of every student in the university, the management would not have felt justified in assuming the tremendous risk which it has incurred.

All students and professors who have not as yet handed in their names as subscribers, should do so at once, as the management has to specify the number of copies to be published within the next week, and does not feel justified in ordering a larger number of copies than has been subscribed for. By notifying either Mr. Gill or Mr. Conrad, or by dropping a card to the "Calyx, Box D," any subscriptions will be attended to at once. Those who have subscribed but desire extra copies should take this opportunity of securing the same.

Arrangements are being made to have Mr. N. Floyd Featherstone of Washington, give an entertainment in Chapel in the early part of May. He is spoken of in the highest terms by the press.

EDITORIAL

The letter printed elsewhere in this issue from John N. Lyle, Esq., the organizer of, and an officer in, the Liberty Hall Volunteers, is very timely and brings up for consideration a matter which should have received favorable action many years ago. A committee from the literary societies has been selected to consult the faculty in regard to appropriate memorial exercises and it is hoped that some decision may be reached by which the memory of those who so distinguished themselves and their Alma Mater in the years of civil strife, may be perpetuated. The suggestions embodied in the letter as to fitting exercises are excellent, although it might be well to have some one deliver an appropriate oration also each year. The mere setting aside of a Liberty Hall Volunteer day without any services befitting it, signifies nothing. This matter has been up for consideration before. There is no reason why favorable action should be longer delayed.

It has been evident for several years that the literary societies have not been fulfilling their mission. Although a small percentage of the student-body has done faithful work in the societies, and have received beneficial results, the number of such men is exceedingly limited, and to the great mass of the students the societies are absolutely without interest, or where it is present it is evidenced in a weak or sporadic way. Speaking in general terms, the work done in the societies is not good, the debates are not carefully prepared, and the oratorical efforts are not what they should be. The public exhibitions of the work of the societies are far from a University standard, and it would be more conducive to the reputation of the University if some of the representatives sent to contests abroad were retained at home.

The causes underlying this state of affairs are difficult to ascertain. It may be due to a general apathy upon the subject. It cannot arise from a fraternity spirit as fraternal life is not of such a concentrated form here as to effect in the slightest degree the literary societies. Its cause does not lie in athletics. It is not due to a lack of good material both within and without the societies. The primary reason governing the situation probably owes its origin more than anything else to the fact that the societies hold their meetings on Saturday night. Under our lecture system the man who works as he should has Sunday as his only day of relaxation and recreation. Many good men are doubtless prevented from joining the societies by the fact that they are conscientiously opposed to Sunday study, and for these men Saturday night is generally the only available time for doing Monday's work. To the man with no conscientious scruples Saturday evening is a time of general recreation, and it may be remarked that there are other places more pleasant than a literary society hall. Of course there are men who do nothing but blear their eyes with books but he need not be considered. It is also true that there are men who controvert by their deeds this "Saturday night theory" but there can be no doubt that it is a strong factor in bringing about the present unfortunate state of affairs. If the date of meeting really does influence the situation it would seem that we are as far as ever from a solution of the problem. For obvious reasons any other night in the week, without some compensating advantages, would result in less interest and smaller attendance. The only remedy for the situation and the one that should be adopted is for the faculty to exercise a supervision over the work of the societies and give credit on the A. B. degree for work in debating and oratory. Such action would be much more logical than the present method, although we strongly favor it, of giving credit for gymnasium work. The standard of debating would be raised and an incentive to thorough work given. More men would join the societies, their benefits would be more generally diffused, and public exhibitions become more satisfactory. The credit giving system has been adopted in many institutions, and in many places literary society work has been made compulsory. This branch of university training is of prime importance and we cannot allow it to deteriorate. We respectfully recommend the matter to the faculty for consideration.

LIBERTY HALL VOLUNTEERS

Memorial Services In Their Honor

The letter which is printed in full below has been received by both literary societies, and a committee appointed to confer with the faculty in regard to what action should be taken —

WACO, TEX., April 4, 1903.

To the President and Members of the Graham-Lee Society, W. & L. University, Lexington, Va.

Dear Sir:

The faculty has given the students of the University a field-day in May and named it in honor of the Liberty Hall Volunteers of which I was the organizer and first lieutenant. This action, I believe, was the result of my repeated appeals to the trustees and the faculty to appoint a day in memory of the company. After the day was named, I wrote to Prof. A. L. Nelson, who was one of its captains, to get the faculty to prescribe a memorial service, and suggested the following which will take so little time as not to interfere with the sports of the boys.

- (1) Call the roll of the company.
- (2) Have a salute fired by a survivor of the Rockbridge Artillery, or a descendant after the survivors are all dead. (For this latter purpose one of the pieces taken to the war by that famous company could be easily gotten and kept on the University grounds.)

I don't think this suggestion has been adopted by the faculty—"Old Aleck's" modesty may have kept him from proposing it. If nothing has been done, I appeal to the Literary Societies to take the matter in hand, jointly. This would be appropriate as the members of the Liberty Hall Volunteers and of the Rockbridge Artillery were nearly all members of one or the other of them, and they would be honoring their alumni.

I have written this to the President and members of the Washington Literary Society. Won't you kindly appoint a committee of conference and get up some kind of exercises for the day.

Young gentlemen! it was out of regard for the L. H. V.'s that the faculty gave you the day. Can't you give one half-hour of it to the memory of those old soldiers who fought for the "Consent of the governed" in America?

I understand the V. M. I. celebrates "New Market Day." If for one battle, in which the cadets took part, a day is devoted, how many weeks should be given to the commemoration of the twenty-two pitched battles and numberless skirmishes in which the L. H. V.'s distinguished themselves and shed glory on their Alma Mater.

Respectfully,

JOHN N. LYLE,

First Lieut. L. H. V.'s

LAWS NOTES

At the session of the moot court on Wednesday was witnessed the sequel to the case of Chappell against Trent, which was tried in this court some time ago. No mention was made in the RING-TUM PHI of the case at that time, but it may be remembered that an entire day was devoted to the trial, the classes in the law school being suspended on that account, and that much interest was manifested in it. The trial began at nine in the morning and the evidence was completed by seven o'clock in the afternoon. The argument of counsel occupied the time from eight p. m. until about midnight, when the jury retired to consider their verdict. The question in issue was the validity of a certain paper purporting to be the will of Richard T. Chappell. Gibbs, Reeves and Shields represented the devisees, and Harvey, Combs and Chevalier the heirs. The facts made out a close case, and it developed afterwards that the three votes in the jury room were ties, but a decision was finally reached in favor of the validity of the will. The defeated side then moved for a new trial. The grounds for the new trial were that one of the jurors knew personally two of the important witnesses in the case whose character for veracity was a material issue in the trial; that this personal knowledge of the witness influenced his decision in the case, and that he used this personal knowledge in the jury room which had the effect of influencing other jurors in their decision.

The question was thus presented whether the affidavits of jurors under the circumstances could be admitted to impeach their verdict. Reeves contended that the settled law in Virginia is against such admissions, and numerous authorities were cited in support of this view. Harvey, on the other hand, argued that while as a general rule such affidavits should be excluded, yet the Virginia court recognized that there were exceptional cases when public policy demanded that the affidavits of the jurors should be allowed to set aside the verdict, and that the facts above, presenting an overt act not due to willful misconduct but to a mistake of law on the part of the jury, would bring this case within such an exception. No opinion was rendered at this term of court.

Mr. Robert M. Hughes began his course of lectures on Admiralty last Wednesday. The course will include about ten lectures on this subject.

GRAHAM-LEE

The regular proceedings of the Graham-Lee Society last Saturday night were interrupted early in the evening by a call for a joint session with the Washington Society for the purpose of considering certain arrangements connected with Randolph-Macon debate, and other important matters.

After adjournment of the joint session the newly elected president and vice-president, Mr. Crawford and Mr. Moffett, respectively, were inducted into office. Mr. Crawford then favored the Society with an able effort on "Southern Character." Mr. Huddle followed with a much-enjoyed voluntary oration in which he strongly set forth the glories of good citizenship.

The question of making the ability to read and write a necessary qualification to the exercise of the right of suffrage was well argued, both in the affirmative and in the negative.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moore entertained the Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity last Thursday evening.
