Virginia Tomorrow

Tomorrow the Generals will attempt to return to the win column when they tackle Virginia for the first time this year.

Use a Little Judgment

Usually at a Virginia game there is a great deal of excess booing on the part of our spectators toward some of the Wahoo players.

Bad Day For Baseball

North Carolina State didn't seem to have such an outstanding team and I believe the Generals should have won.

Such Actions

Th Wolfpack's coach was a little hot headed at times and didn't seem to mind much walking out on the field to talk to Al Orth.

Hits Still Needed

In the North Carolina State game Tuesday, the Generals played a good game of ball in the infield but the hitting is not up to par yet.

We Lack Pep

The infield on our team seems to lack the old pepper that Captain Dick has been trying to drill into them.

Cy Pitches Well

Jack Jarrett had a tough day and it isn't very often that such a thing happens to Jack. The Wolfpack seemed to feel him out and chucked up several hits before he could get the old apple under control.

Some of the leading colleges in the country are having a lot of trouble trying to keep up spring sports at the expense of the students participating.

Grayson Hurls One-Hit Game

First Three Up Hit to Gain 2-0 Edge Over Staunton Military Academy

Washington and Lee's frosh baseball team gave Staunton Military Academy a second defeat last Wednesday on Wilson field by bringing in two runs in the first part of the first inning and then holding that lead for the rest of the game.

Howerton, Reiger, and Cooke, the first three men at the bat for Brigadiers, each rapped out a two-bagger to bring in the scores, but just when it began to look like the game was to be a walk-away, Smith, the Cadet pitcher, tightened up and struck out two men to retire the Blue and White.

Except for one time later in the game when Wright drove out a three-base hit for the Brigadiers, neither team seriously threatened to score again.

The battery for Washington and Lee was Grayson and Stephenson. Smith and Painter held the same positions on the Cadet nine.

Blanche is pretty terrible in spite of Irene Dunne, a fine young actress in our estimation. "Madame X," "Sin of Madelon Claudet," "On Trial" and other child-saved your-mother epics were all rolled into one to make this vehicle for Miss Dunne. The reviews were pretty nasty.

"Luxury Liner" is, we are happy to say, a good show. George Brent, Zita Johnson, Vivienne Osborne, and Frank Morgan, are the stars in this Grand Hotel of the ocean liners. When we say good, we don't mean excellent. The reviews placed it as just above par.

Play Presents Talent Change

Three New Faces to Be Seen In Latest Troubadour Production

The faces and figures of three newcomers will be seen behind the footlights when the Troubadours present their third play of the season, "Outward Bound," at the Lyric Theater on May 5.

Mrs. Richard Sale, Richard Sale and Lewis A. McMurrin are the actors who will be making their initial appearance to a Washington and Lee audience on that date.

In addition to these newcomers there will also be Miss Mary Monroe Penick, who appeared in the cast of "Peace Hath Her Victories" last spring, and the more familiar actors and actresses: Mrs. Shirley Hurt, Bill Hawkins, George Foster, Allen Harrelson, and Charley Mower.

Mrs. Shirley Hurt, who scored such a brilliant success in "Loud-er, Please," will take the part of Ann in the new show. Miss Penick will play the part of Mrs. Cliveden Banks, and Mrs. Sale will appear as Mrs. Midget.

In the masculine roles, McMurrin will take the part of Scrubby and Richard Sale the part of Reverend William Duke. The role of Henry will be acted by Bill Hawkins, who has appeared in both of the other Troubadour plays this year. George Foster, who took the lead in "Loud-er, Please" and a prominent part in "The Play's the Thing," will play the role of Professor L. E. Watkin, director of the Troubadours, stated that he thought that this play was very beautiful and adequate.

The flats for the stage are being completed now, and Stage Director Duncan Groner is rushing his work to have all the scenery in readiness for the rehearsals. The organization's workshop is also being fixed up and redecorated in order that it shall not be such a blot on the landscape.

You Can't Eat Medals

Detroit—(IP)—"You can't eat medals," has become a saying quoted by each and every athlete who steps over the line from amateurism to professionalism.

Until last week no one had challenged the statement. It seemed that eating a medal would be the next step worse than eating one's shirt.

Last week came John Lewis, one-time member of Detroit City College's track squad and one of the 1928 American Olympic team in the 400-meter event, to disprove that famous remark. Lewis, if it can't be said he is eating his medals, is eating on them. Unable to find employment, his funds about exhausted and his teeth in bad shape, Lewis wondered what to do. Then he thought himself of his medals.

Going to his big chest of medals, he selected three large gold ones and took them to a dentist. The dentist melted them, used the necessary gold for Lewis' tooth repairs and kept the rest as payment for the work on the athlete's teeth.

Outside Countries to Blame

Oberlin, O.—(IP)—Stories of atrocities against the Jews by the Hitler government are taken with a grain of salt—in fact, several grains—by Dr. Karl F. Geiser, head of Oberlin College's department of political science.

Dr. Geiser, who during the World War had to bear frequent charges of being "pro-German," thinks Hitler, if given a chance, will improve conditions in Germany. The professor says countries outside Germany are principally to blame for bringing Hitler into power.

This is a day of dawning denecies. The change is beginning to show in our personal conduct and better manners.—Rev. Ralph W. Sockman.

Front Row JOE MAGEE RECOMMENDED: Campus Merry-Go-Round The first appearance on our campus of a mild sort of bull sheet carried a perfect imitation of this column's style—which a child of two could very easily copy. Back Row is good satire and is heartily recommended by this department. Front Row envies the author of the Merry-Go-Round's freedom to say exactly what he likes. But admiration is not forthcoming for the inaccuracy concerning "Gabriel Over the White House." Reference was made to the characterization which Walter Huston enacts as being "entirely a fictitious one created by some obscure gentleman in Hollywood." May we point out that the book, "Gabriel Over the White House" was written by an Englishman? With reference to "Our Betters," with Constance Bennett, the writer stated that "a personal aversion to this animated clotheshorse makes me refrain from saying more about it." That's all very well—personal likes and dislikes being entirely legal—but it is hardly fair to dismiss what New York critics have agreed is one of the best plays written by W. Somerset Maugham and is the finest performance of Connie Bennett's career. Any critic of the movies is likely to run into a snag anent the comparison of movies with drama. The majority of pictures are frankly made for a moronic public, and it is next to impossible to take them seriously. But it is possible to point out some of the more obvious faults. This department has tried to do that to a limited extent—being limited in the first place because of reliance on critics and secondly, by censorship. This is not meant as a defense against the pink sheet but merely a somewhat belated explanation of the purposes of Front Row. Criticisms are given on the basis of what standard, recognized critics have to say about the pictures (and Liberty is certainly not included). The Merry-Go-Round is to be commended for an excellent imitation of this tripe, and for the editor's divination that perhaps after all the lack of crusading for better shows and less advertisements, and little or no definite panning, might be due to censorship and backslaps. Recommended: Campus-Merry-Go-Round. "Tonight is Ours," with Fred-eric March and Claudette Colbert, by Noel Coward (that "overly-publicized young playwright," to quote Back Row again) was adapted from "The Queen Was in the Parlour." As a play, it wasn't half bad. As a movie, Mr. Coward himself told this reviewer it was nothing but "Banana Royal" to him. To tell all, the movie has clever lines, good acting, and a very weak ending. If you like March, Colbert, and Coward, then you should enjoy "Tonight is Ours." Otherwise, you'll agree with Mr. Coward that it's nothing but "Banana Royal." Colonel Tim McCoy is with us again on Saturday in "Western Code." Recommended. "The Secrets of Madame
