Frosh Down Virginia Tech As Mefford and Craft Star

Brilliant Passing and Running Easily Down Goblets 19-0

COACH BOLEN USES TWO FULL ELEVENS

V. P. I. Makes Only One First Down In One-sided Contest

Showing a vast improvement over last week's performance against Richmond, the Brigadiers uncorked a brilliant running and passing game to score their first victory over V. P. I. in three years as they trimmed the Goblets 19-0 today on Wilson field.

Led by a brilliant backfield of Craft, Mefford, Dunlap and Allen, the W. & L. yearlings were unbeatable. They gained more than 200 yards through V. P. I.'s line, and completed more than ten forward passes.

Ochie Stars
Ochie, Parrish, Gooch and Brown played great ball in the line, while Bill Borries gave his best exhibition to date. Ochie was in nearly every play and was given a great hand when he left the game late in the last quarter.

Coach Bolen used two full teams, and each team marched through the Goblets with equal ease. The first touchdown came after a long sustained drive which featured nice running by Dunlap, Craft and Mefford and passing by Craft to Borries.

As the half ended the score was 6-0 in favor of the Brigadiers but from the start of the last half, W. & L. completely dominated the situation. Again they marched down the field, and early in the last quarter they managed to score again as Craft went through the center of the line for six yards. Mefford took the ball through the line for the extra point.

Intercepted Pass
Howard, substituting quarterback, intercepted a V. P. I. pass and ran forty yards to his opponents' 20-yard line. W. & L. continued to gain ground, but a last minute stand by the Goblets temporarily prevented the third touchdown. However, Allen intercepted a V. P. I. pass, and the Baby Generals started all over again. This time they were rewarded with the third touchdown as Craft tossed a perfect pass to Howard.

V. P. I. did not threaten once throughout the whole game, and made only one first down. It was only the brilliant kicking of their quarterback that kept the contest from becoming a slaughter, for he constantly outkicked Gooch by more than ten yards.

Next week the Baby Generals meet the powerful West Virginia freshmen at Beckley, West Virginia.

Sigma Upsilon Initiates Teacher, Five Students; Thirkield Is President

Five student pledges and one faculty member were initiated into Sigma Upsilon, honorary English fraternity, Wednesday night following a banquet at the Dutch Inn. Ben Thirkield was elected president of the fraternity and John Nicholson was named secretary and treasurer at the same meeting.

The new members are: Dr. L. P. Smith, George Logan, Morton Brown, Charles Clarke, Stephen Lee, and Deverton Carpenter.

After the election of officers committees were appointed to plan programs for the coming year and to discuss the advisability of the fraternity's sponsoring a contest to stimulate student interest along literary lines.

Deltas Hold First Dance Of Year This Week-end

The Delta Tau Delta's will hold their first formal dance of the year tomorrow night at their house on Lee avenue.

Randolph-Macon will contribute the largest number of young ladies with Hollins a close second. Music will be furnished by the Dixie Ambassadors of Covington, Virginia.

Campus Voices Approval Of Freshman Behavior

Survey Shows College Leaders Unanimously Declare Frosh Observing Rules Without Use of Last Year's Vigilance Committee

The opinion that this year's freshman class observes the rules and regulations that they are subject to, even though there is no Vigilance Committee, was voiced unanimously today by campus leaders in a survey by the Ring-tum Phi.

"The freshman attitude is no different this year than it has ever been," said Cy Young, alumni secretary and football coach. "I noticed no particular violations of rules. The boys speak, wear their caps, and in general, conduct themselves in the same way that previous freshman classes did."

When questioned concerning the practicality of his "no V. C." regulation, Amos Bolen, president of the student body and author of the freshman new deal, asserted that to date the plan had met with marked success.

"There have been several complaints for various offenses called to my attention," he said, "and while I don't say the freshmen are perfect, I found upon investigation that many transfers, who don't come under the same regulations, are mistaken for freshmen. This year's class is not at all together above reproach, but neither were any of their preceding classes. I am well satisfied that the abolition of the Vigilance Committee was a move for the best interests of the University."

Angus Powell, president of O. D. K., and head of the newly formed Freshman Assimilation Committee voiced an opinion similar to that of Bolen.

"I have not noticed freshmen doing anything conspicuously wrong," he stated. "They are remarkably similar to other freshman classes. I have, however, heard a few complaints, but no more than the V. C. heard last year. The offenses were so insignificant that the upper-classmen who reported them neglected to get the names of the offenders."

And all remains quiet along the dormitory front, it was disclosed. Bill Schuhle, head dormitory counselor, revealed that freshmen behave themselves as much as they ever did, and abide by the new regulation forbidding the playing of radios between the hours of eight and eleven p. m.

"In my opinion," he said, "the abolishment of V. C. tends toward a better spirit. The freshmen are freer and easier going now that we haven't got anything to scare them with, and they seem to behave themselves. I think that the true import of the passing of V. C. will be felt most in a few years. Right now, though, it seems as if the boys are put on their honor, and they behave like gentlemen."

Ed Jean and Ajax Browning, also councilors, seemed inclined to reason the same way that Schuhle did.

"I think that the freshman attitude has improved considerably," said Jean.

Browning, who is also secretary-treasurer of the student body, thought that the work of the Assimilation committee would outshine any efforts formerly made by the V. C.

"The new committee," he asserted, "is better fitted to cope with delinquent cases. It is by far the best system. Co-operation by upperclassmen is the essential feature of this new plan, and, to date, the violations of freshman rules have been so few that we don't need any co-operation. The situation takes care of itself."

No More Sunday Shows

Daves' Application Rejected As Violation of State, Town Laws

The town council, at its regular Thursday night meeting rang the death knell for the proposed move to inaugurate here the custom of Sunday shows.

The refusal came in the form of a denial of application for Sunday movies to Ralph Daves, manager of the New and Lyric theaters here.

The adverse resolution said: "The request of the Motion Picture Company to open and operate on Sundays is and the same is hereby denied as being in direct violation of the laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia and the ordinance of the town of Lexington."

Mr. Daves asserted that he would make no further issue of the matter at the present time.

W & L Breaks Into Print Again-- This Time in 'I Live in Virginia'

A realistic—sometimes satirical—account of life at V. M. I. in which continual references are made to Washington and Lee and to Lexington, is contained in "I Live in Virginia," a book by Julian Meade, which has just been published in New York. Meade spent one year at V. M. I. and is a graduate of Virginia.

"Some people protested that the good manners of the W. and L. students were affected," the author writes. "Not the manners of this fellow in a new brown suit, this genial boy with his straight black hair brushed carefully to combat the insuperable cow-lick on his admirably formed head! He was glad to have a visitor who was young enough to need no assistance in walking," Meade declares in the chapter on Rock-bridge county.

Meade also refers to "the gruesome skeleton of his (General Lee's) good horse, Traveler," in his account of the Chapel.

The book is in six chapters, each taking us to a particular county. From the chapter on Rock-bridge county, telling of Mr. Meade's visit to Lexington, is found: "Down the stone steps, at the side entrance to Lee Chapel, I paid a quarter to the shiny-

Services Here, At Stratford To Honor Lee

Classes Suspended From 9:15 To 9:45 For Brief Exercises

DR. TUCKER LEADS CHAPEL CEREMONY

Memorial Foundation Dedicates Lee Home on Anniversary

Brief memorial services will be held here tomorrow as usual to commemorate the sixty-fifth anniversary of the death of Robert E. Lee, president of Washington college, 1865-70. The exercises, to be conducted by Dr. Robert H. Tucker, dean of the University, in the absence of President Gaines, who will be at Stratford for the dedicatory celebration and the autumn meeting of the Board of Trustees, will begin at 9:15 in the chapel built by Lee in 1867, which now stands as a nationally famous memorial to him.

Classes will be suspended from 9:15 to 9:45 for the occasion. Attendance will be entirely voluntary, but all students are urged to take part in this tribute to General Lee. The first period will close at 9:15, and the second will begin at 9:45 and close at 10:30. The regular schedule will then be resumed.

The program will consist of brief devotional services led by Dr. Tucker. Excerpts from the minutes adopted by the faculty of Washington college at the time of their president's death will be read, and several of General Lee's favorite hymns will be sung, led by the Glee club. Prayer will be offered by the Rev. Thomas H. Wright, rector of the R. E. Lee Memorial Episcopal church, who will also pronounce the benediction.

W. & L. TAKES PART IN DEDICATION

On the occasion of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the death of Robert E. Lee, Stratford hall, historic home of the Lee family in Westmoreland county, Virginia, will be formally dedicated tomorrow as a national shrine by the Lee Memorial foundation in the presence of thousands of persons from the entire United States, and representatives of foreign countries.

Washington and Lee will be formally represented by Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of the University, the Board of Trustees, and the Board of Christian Work.

A. T. O. Scores Heavily To Win

Intramural Football Games Start; Phi Psi, Pi K. A. Triumph

The intramural football competition got under way Tuesday afternoon, when Phi Kappa Psi downed Sigma Nu, 6-0. Wednesday A. T. O. trounced D. U., 28-0, and Thursday Z. B. T. went down before the P. K.'s, 12-0.

A total of two hundred and fifty men have signed up for the tennis singles tournament, scheduled to get under way on Monday afternoon. Drawings will be posted on the bulletin board tonight. No schedule for the horseshoes tournament, which will also begin soon, has yet been drawn up.

A balance of $233.59 was left over from intramural sports activities last year. The athletic association has this amount on hand now, with football, tennis, and horseshoe receipts not in.

Work To Begin On Waterworks

Auxiliary System To Be Constructed With PWA Funds

Work is expected to begin within the next two weeks on Lexington's new auxiliary water system, which is being constructed by PWA funds. Preliminary plans are near completion, according to Hugh Rice, public works director here.

It is estimated that the new pumping station and filtration plant will be completed within six months.

The new auxiliary system will be built in two units, Mr. Rice said. A pumping station will be built on North river which will pump the water from the river to the filtration plant, to be located on the present reservoir property.

The filtration plant will consist of two sections, one having a capacity of 500,000 gallons a day, and the other 250,000 gallons.

The system will be used as an auxiliary only, Mr. Rice pointed out. So long as the supply of mountain water is sufficient to meet the needs of the city, the river water will not be used. The system, however, will be in readiness at all times in case of any emergency and after its completion there will be no danger of a depleted water supply for Lexington.

The project will cost $110,000, $49,500 being granted by the PWA and $60,500 as a loan.

Town authorities are also awaiting final decision on the proposed project to build a new town hall with PWA funds.

Unique Structure Doomed?

Lexington's celebrated covered bridge, which may be razed by the highway commission after the completion of the new concrete span this month.

For over two centuries the wooden structure has guarded the eastern approach to Lexington over the North river.

Lexington May Lose Its Historic Covered Bridge

Lexington's famous covered bridge, one of the few of its kind in the world, may be torn down after the completion of the new $85,000 steel-and-cement structure now being built across the North river. The wooden bridge, originally built during colonial times, has since been rebuilt several times, once after being burned in the Revolutionary war.

The new bridge will be opened for traffic late this month, it is believed. After it is opened, the state will cease to maintain the covered bridge, and may tear it down unless funds are given for its upkeep, it is declared.

Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of the University, delivered a plea for the preservation of the bridge before the Lexington Business and Professional Women's club in March, 1934. He urged that this be done as part of a movement to restore colonial Lexington. However, no definite action has yet been taken by the community to preserve the bridge, it is understood.

Melton Chosen By I-F Council

Elected Prexy Last Night; Graham, Barrett Other Officers

Howard Melton was elected president of the Interfraternity council at its initial meeting last night. Melton is a senior in the academic school and is a member of Sigma Nu fraternity.

Bob Graham, Kappa Alpha, was elected vice-president, and Ernie Barrett, Phi Delta Theta, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

At its meeting last night, the council also made preliminary plans for its participation in the Homecoming celebration to be held November 9. Again this year the council will have invitation cards printed for fraternities to send to alumni. The secretary-treasurer of the council will take orders for these cards from each fraternity the latter part of next week.

Coach "Cy" Young, scheduled to speak before the council last night on plans for Homecoming, was unable to be present. More definite plans for that week-end and for the year's program will be made at the next meeting of the council early in November. A student representative to the National Interfraternity Conference will be chosen at that time.

Swimming Team Faces Hard Task To Retain Tank Title This Year

With most of the mainstays of last year's Southern Conference championship swimming team having left school, Coach Cy Twombly will face a hard task in trying to build up another title team this year when the team reports for practice Monday afternoon.

Many of the promising freshmen from last year also failed to return to school this year to add more worries to Coach Twombly's brow.

With the reporting of both Freshman and Varsity candidates Monday afternoon, the chances for this year's team will be better estimated.

74 Autos Here

A canvass of the fraternity houses on the campus showed today that there are 74 automobiles in operation by the students in Lexington. This list, which contains exactly the same number as it did last year, is headed by S. A. E., with ten vehicles, and A. T. O. with nine.

Annual SIPA Meeting To Be Held Here Soon; 100 Delegates Expected

The eleventh annual Southern Interscholastic Press Association convention will be held at Washington and Lee on November 22 and 23, it was announced today by O. W. Riegel, head of the journalism department.

Over a hundred prep school journalists and their advisers from all over the south annually attend the meetings, sponsored by the Lee School of Journalism of the University.

A number of prominent speakers will be secured for the convention, and the usual contests and competitions will be held.

Hot and Cold

A cold spell, which caused vegetation to be blackened and killed, and a hot weather period, was the unusual weather enjoyed by Lexington and vicinity this week.

The first freeze of the season occurred on Monday morning when the thermometer dropped to 26 degrees. It was followed by a maximum temperature of 75 on Friday.

Over 650 Sign For Campus Tax

Figures Above Last Year's; Bolen Expects More To Sign

This year's campus tax subscriptions have far exceeded those of last year, according to Amos Bolen, president of the student body. While complete figures are not yet available, the present number is over 650, and more subscriptions are expected within the next few days.

A big drive was not begun after the completion of registration, but each member of the Executive committee has been soliciting individual students. This method has met with unusual success and will probably be continued in the future.

"If there are any men who have not paid their tax and wish to," said President Bolen, "we would appreciate it if they would get in touch with some member of the Executive committee right away. We appreciate the co-operation of the students and hope that even more will sign up in the next few days."

Students who receive their mail through general delivery should ask at the Post Office window for each issue of the Ring-tum Phi.

One Hour Limit on Bell Ringing Proposed by New Frosh Prexy

"The chapel bell will ring one hour and no longer following a football victory this fall," the newly crowned freshman class president, William Wesley, "Wee Willie" Grover, Jr., announced today.

"In past years," continued the illustrious Norfolk diplomat, "this nuisance has greatly irritated the townspeople. This year, in conjunction with my New Deal for freshmen, I'm going to see that the bell tolls for sixty short minutes. I have appointed the following committee to assist me in my achievements: Francis P. Gaines, Jr., chairman, John F. Coffman, William B. Rea, Jr., Earl V. Ebner, and Edmund R. Wiegandt.

"I have," boasted "Lucky" Grover, "the full support of the faculty in my new goal of abolishing all 'cutting up' on the beautiful Washington and Lee campus."

Soph Honor Fraternities Plan Change In Program

PAN and White Friars to Reorganize, Officers Revealed Today

MEETING CALLED THURSDAY EVENING

Plan to Reduce Initiation Fee, More Campus Participation

A definite move toward the reorganization of P. A. N. and White Friars, sophomore honorary societies, has already been made, officers of the two organizations revealed today. Plans for reduced initiation fees and for more active participation in student activities will be presented to the members of the societies at a joint meeting called for 7:15 o'clock next Thursday night.

The proposed reorganization calls for a fifty percent reduction in the initiation fee from ten dollars to five. The two societies, in co-operation with one of the other honorary fraternities on the campus, plan to sponsor a dance during the school year. Plans for taking a page in the Calyx have not been completed and will depend largely upon the funds which the two organizations have available. In addition, officers of the clubs plan to take a more active part in general campus activities.

New Club Threatened

A year ago the death-knell of P. A. N. and the White Friars seemed imminent when plans were made for the organization of a rival honorary society. The new club, however, never progressed beyond the formative stage, and new men were initiated into both P. A. N. and White Friars.

"Of the new men taken into the 'shine societies' less than half paid their initiation fees, according to officers of the clubs, and the activities of the clubs were therefore curtailed last year, the plans for the usual dansant at Finals being abandoned for lack of funds.

Election of Officers

At the meeting to be held next Thursday in Newcomb hall, the officers for the year will be elected, pledges voted upon, and the plans for reorganization discussed. Members are expected to bring before the meeting the names of new men to whom bids will be extended.

The two societies were originally organized to recognize each year the outstanding men in the sophomore class, but in the past few years both P. A. N. and the White Friars have degenerated into mere "shine societies," each taking a page in the Calyx and jointly sponsoring a dansant during the final set of dances, but even the dansant was discontinued last year. The only other activity of the clubs was the football game between the goats of the societies during the half of the varsity grid game at Homecoming.

A THREAT TO FRATERNITY SUPREMACY

Despite the increase of eighty-seven men over last year's enrollment, only a few more students have pledged fraternities this year than last. About 210 men have "put the button on" so far, as compared with about 200 for the same date a year ago, and indications are that their pledging is about over. This leaves us with an increase of about 75 non-fraternity men on the campus, a potent factor in student body affairs and the future success of the fraternity system at Washington and Lee.

In the palmy days of 1929 et ante twenty fraternities flourished on the campus. Then came the depression, which reduced the size of the incoming freshman classes and finally resulted in the elimination of one of the twenty. Now, with the return to pre-depression enrollment figures, all the potential pledges cannot be accommodated, and the size of the non-fraternity bloc is increased.

Several tendencies might result from this. As the omnipresence of fraternities on the campus decreases, future students may find less compulsion to belong. More freshmen in the future may find companionship and brotherhood outside the clubs and decide to save that $100 initiation fee. And eventually the non-fraternity men, realizing their strength, may feel that they deserve a larger portion of campus honors and offices and organize to gain that end. This year there are 400 of them, compared with 550 in the fraternities.

The fact that the fraternities have not noticeably expanded with the size of the student body is a matter of their own choosing. But if they are aware of the threat which the increase in the non-fraternity ranks presents they would be wise to do something about it. On the face of things it appears that they must either expand or lose much of their present power and prestige on the campus.

AN AMBITIOUS SCHEDULE FOR 1936

Thanks to Captain Dick, we have an ideal football schedule coming up in 1936. Besides retaining such "favorite foes" as Kentucky, V. P. I., and the University of Virginia, the schedule exhibits the great name of Army and provides a perfect excuse for a Washington week-end in a Thanksgiving affair with Maryland. The Generals and Duke will go to war again in Richmond—furnishing another good use for all those cuts you wish you had.

Washington and Lee students from New York, New Jersey and New England will be especially interested in the showing which the team makes against Army. It will give them some basis for discussing the merits of Washington and Lee football with their friends at home, and will make this University more talked-of in that section of the country.

Captain Dick has earned the congratulations of the student body, but it is undoubtedly with mixed emotions that Coaches Tilson and Young contemplate so heavy a schedule. Their machines have in two successive years out-gained and out-fought mighty Princeton, but the schedules of those years permitted them to point to important games. Next year they will all be important—and most of our present backfield will have graduated. Nor is there any considerable solace to be found in this year's freshman crop of ball-toters. If we only had one really nifty back for 1936! Oh, for a player like Clarence Parker—ohhhh!

RENAISSANCE HISTORY AND THE CURRICULUM

Notable among the gaping omissions from the Washington and Lee curriculum is a course in the history of the Renaissance. It seems hardly possible that a course concerning the formative period of our present civilization should be omitted, while other periods of lesser import are presented in detail. This, of course, is due largely to the slight demand on the part of the students, who beyond United States history choose their history courses with no more concern than the toss of a coin.

The fact that the Renaissance is so closely allied with the development of the arts, although it should be an incentive, seems to discourage many. However, the period should be equally interesting to students of government; for Machiavelli's methods are still prevalent today despite the loud denials of demagogues on both sides of the Atlantic. In the final analysis there is hardly a movement that does not find its genesis or at least its rejuvenation in the Renaissance.

It has been rumored that the history department is contemplating a two-semester course in the Renaissance and Reformation to be given every two years, alternating with ancient history. Besides its intrinsic merit, such a course would go a long way towards bridging that chasm between the ancient and modern periods of history, a chasm which exists, unfortunately, in the minds of most individuals.

ACCENT ON YOUTH

"Youth Movement," "Young Democratic Club," "college students," "campus ideas," "what such-and-such a university thinks about so-and-so"—phrases we hear at every hand. No longer is the emphasis on the old; no longer is progress squelched by the condemning "our forefathers never did that"; no longer are we pushed into corners and told to wait until we have reached hoary age to take an active part in life.

Because of all this, there is a tremendous responsibility for each of us to take up the challenge: to see, to hear, to know all we can about our country and its problems; to speak our fearlessly and act boldly where there is a need; to live our part in dynamic action for the good of all. That is the challenge to youth; that is the price we pay for the privilege of being something more than "future citizens;" that is the meaning of today's "accent on youth."—Campus Comments, Mary Baldwin College.

FISHING WITH BEEBE

By SOUTHGATE HOYT

I consider myself most fortunate to have had the opportunity of working with William Beebe in Bermuda this summer. Without any doubt, Beebe is the easiest person to talk to, the nicest to work for and the most entertaining to go around with for night-life. His personality is of such a caliber that one feels perfectly at ease as one meets him. His schedule for the summer months was to work all day and play most of the night.

His work this summer consisted, in a large part, in surface netting and dragging nets on the bottom. The object of the surface netting was to obtain every kind and species of living marine organisms. The kinds we collected near the surface consisted chiefly of very small fish, shrimps, many kinds of small crustacea such as copepods, and also many kinds of sea weeds that float near to or on the surface. The general term used to identify these is "plankton." The netting near the bottom or on the bottom brought forth many kinds of crabs and snail-like mollusks. We collected everything that could be taken from the bottom to the top. The object of this extensive collecting was to determine if there was any certain depth to which these specimens were especially adapted. We found that there were very definite bands or regions in which a certain few of the kinds were found, and they stayed within this fairly well defined region.

Our next work was to examine the contents of all the fish stomachs obtainable. An ad was put in the Bermuda paper asking the fishermen and sportsmen to save all fish stomachs and gills. The gills were for identification only, but the stomachs were examined very carefully. The contents were often too far digested to be of any real value, but in most cases they were very easily classified. An accurate record was kept of everything found as to the number and kind of each specimen and the kind of fish it came from. Many barracuda, tarpon and shark stomachs were examined.

Another very interesting experiment carried on this summer was a study of the effects of various light rays when projected in the water. We found that a light from a special type of 1000 watt lamp attracted the fish in great numbers. We replaced this lamp with an ultra-violet lamp and to our great surprise the beam of light (which had a slight halo of visible light on the sides) became one swarming mass of fish. As the beam moved from one spot to another the fish followed it. These experiments were conducted with the aid of Dr. Herbert T. Strong, New York color expert. Dr. Strong believes that the retinas of the eyes of fish living at depths of about half a mile are adjusted to ultra-violet light, so that these fish are able to see by what is to us invisible light. Dr. Beebe is planning to take an ultra-violet light down with him in his next descent in the bathysphere.

Dr. Beebe does all this work with the aid of a small staff. Mr. John Tee Van, his assistant, has been with Beebe for about twenty years. Gloria Hollister, the good-looking blonde secretary, is a very essential part of the staff. There are a few others that help off and on and do some of the art work. Mr. Tee Van has done a great deal of the work, and it is he who has charge of the collecting trips most of the time. I was just one of the staff and helped in everything from collecting specimens and examining fish stomachs to helping classify the catch. I was with Beebe five weeks, and I think I never spent a more interesting five weeks in my life.

There are many aftermaths of last week-end in Richmond, and word is received from Durham that Coach Wallace Wade has announced the indefinite suspension of three outstanding members of the Duke football team for what he calls "misconduct" Saturday night following the Blue Devil victory.

The suspended men are Frank Liana, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a letterman who plays end; Ike Eakins, of Evansville, Ind., sophomore center, and Joe Brunansky, of Beaver Falls, Pa., sophomore tackle.

Liana and Eakins played most of the game Saturday and were outstanding. Brunansky starred in the Duke games against Wake Forest and South Carolina, but was injured in the Gamecock contest and unable to play against Washington and Lee.

"I do not know when or whether they will be allowed to return to the squad. They positively will not play in the Clemson game Saturday," says Coach Wade.

Duke's Virginia-born all-American candidate, Ace Parker, whose injury in Saturday's game is more serious than was believed at first, will hardly be able to play in the Clemson game this week. Parker is a wonderful athlete and made an excellent record in his home town of Portsmouth before entering Duke.

Miss McCrum Installs New Service in Library

A new library service attempting to connect new books with names and events in the news has been inaugurated at the Carnegie library by Miss Blanche McCrum, librarian.

Various clippings from book review sections and front pages of newspapers have been posted on the bulletin board and have been commented upon by many students. This display will be changed from time to time.

THE EASY CHAIR

By COWL RIDER

This year the freshmen are enjoying more and better direct guidance than they have in the past. Bringing the student and the professor closer together is a part of this guidance and is, beyond doubt, one of the most important phases of adjustment which a student must go through. The purely traditional gap between professor and student can easily be bridged. It is being bridged more and more rapidly through modern progressive attempts to meet the student half way and through the student's astounding discovery that beyond So-and-so's forbidding exterior lies a sense of humor and a sense of justice. This sense of humor is our subject for debate today.

A sense of humor can bring two people together when they could meet on no other grounds. It can keep them apart when they have everything else in common. Some professors have a decided sense of humor which, when properly used, can create and maintain interest on the part of the students; can make an uninteresting course seem interesting, and can lighten the load when the going is tough. There is a form of humor, though, which ought to be watched since it is a dangerous weapon. Sarcasm is a sharp knife.

Sarcasm by a professor at a student's expense has caused a great many enmities to arise between teacher and pupil. Sarcasm wielded without care or thought is terribly unfair to the student for the simple reason that the student is in no position to strike back. He may, if he dares, but the professor and student will be on no friendly terms. A sensitive man cannot laugh off some of the things which a more hardened soul can nonchalantly toss off as inconsequential. To some it may sound strange that there are students who really fear and hate entering certain classes because they have strong dislike for the biting tongue of the professor. These students are in the minority but that is no reason why they should be disregarded.

Sarcasm blindly wielded can make a course harder than it actually is. It does not spur the student on to do better as is commonly believed. It destroys a balance of student-teacher understanding and respect which, in its ideal, makes for mutual esteem, pleasure and cooperation. Once a professor, meeting a new class for the first time, came into the room and saw a student with his feet propped on the seat in front of him, not an uncommon posture. The professor seated himself and without any preliminaries delivered a rather biting lecture on the impropriety of students who propped their feet on the backs of benches. The speech was not funny nor was it brilliant. If it had been, there would have been no offense. As it was, the student immediately took a dislike to the professor and carried that dislike through the course. Oversensitive? Perhaps.

You can call a man an uncompromising name and, depending on the manner of delivery, he will be highly insulted, or unimpressed, as the case may be. So with sarcasm.

It is very evident by this time that all this has been aimed at professors, though there has been no personal affront intended. All this may be making mountains out of molehills, but again it may be worth considering. There is nothing to be gained by making enemies of your student. Be he brilliant, mediocre, or very dumb.

FRONT ROW

Looking Backward

By MARTIN CRAMOY

The height of morose enterprise was M. G. M.'s super-colossal flop-ooz that passed by under the guise of a cinemovie with the title of "Bonnie Scotland," but which took place for the most part in Bonnie India.

Those of us who, despite the warnings of our better judgment, plunked down thirty-five cents last Saturday to see this epic trash learned that the powers that be in Hollywood still remember the lost art of pre-war movie making.

This pithy excuse for a movie picture was really two pictures. One can be called Laurel and Hardy in Scotland. The other, Laurel and Hardy in India. The whirring noise you hear comes from overseas and is the British Empire turning over in its grave.

The always excellent Robert Donat made his second appearance in Lexington in John Buchanan's thrilling spy story, "The 39 Steps" this week. The film, an importation from jolly England, was of the "It Happened One Night" variety and was well worth seeing. Madeline Carroll was gorgeous as the bewildered heroine, and Donat, though not in as good a role, played with the same skill that won him distinction in the "Count of Monte Cristo."

The best shot in the picture was Donat giving an impromptu speech before a critical crowd of Scotchmen while hiding out from the big, bad villains.

Enough has been said of the Ginger Rogers-Fred Astaire musical, "Top Hat." It was the one picture ever viewed by the writer that lived up to its advance notices.

Council to Sponsor Picture Next Week

Tickets are now being printed for admission to "The Human Adventure," to be shown at the Lyric theater next Thursday and Friday evenings at 7:30, under the auspices of the Christian council. Students and faculty members may obtain these from members of the Council without charge.

Comments on the film from all over the country have been very favorable. It is pointed out that the purpose of the producers of the picture, the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, has been to make a specialized subject intelligible and fascinating to the lay public as well as to the students. Educational and cultural groups have been almost unanimous in their praise of the film. "The Human Adventure" is being shown through the courtesy of the Christian council, which has paid the rental fees on the picture, and the management of the Lyric theater, which has offered the use of the theater without charge.

In addition to the showings Thursday and Friday evenings, a special show will be held at three o'clock Thursday afternoon for the students of the local high school.

Katherine Hepburn wielded her exotic charm gracefully in Booth Tarkington's "Alice Adams." The story was told simply, effectively, and without the usual sentimental trash that so frequently clutters up La Hepburn's pictures. Fred Stone is my candidate to take the place of the late, lamented Will Rogers, even though his role in "Alice" doesn't show it. Stone is essentially a comedian, not a tragedian.

The belated presence of "No More Ladies" at the Lyric last Wednesday gives us an opportunity that we've been awaiting for a long time. The picture was dull, lifeless, and, after twitching our blue noses around a bit, we found it improper. The last scene, which depicted the fading Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery rolling around on the floor and holding their sides laughing after that devil-may-care Montgomery broke down and cried, signified only one thing to us. And that one thing was a new high for impropriety in movies.

Editor and Librarian Tie For First Honors In '34 Essay Contest

Manning Williams, editor of the Ring-tum Phi last year, and John Nicholson, assistant in the library, tied for first in the Cincinnati Award essay contest last spring, it was announced here yesterday.

Both essays dealt with different phases of the American Revolution and were so closely matched in intrinsic merit that the judges could come to no definite decision as to which was the better. Therefore, both contestants were acclaimed winners.

The Cincinnati Award usually excites great interest at Washington and Lee, and each year there is a large number of participants. An essay, which must be submitted before May 1, and delivered publicly, is graded by judges who then select the winner.

Theater Guild Part Awarded Tom Coley, Last Year's Graduate

A part in the Theater Guild production, "The Taming of the Shrew," has been awarded to Thomas L. Coley, graduate of the class of 1935 and former library student assistant at Washington and Lee. Coley's picture with that of the rest of the cast is now posted on the bulletin board in the library.

Lynn Fontaine and Alfred Lunt are taking the leading roles in the production which will open soon on Broadway. While Coley was not active in the Troubadours when he was on this campus, he took part in a great many play readings in the library. Miss Blanche McCrum, librarian, said he showed especial talent at that time.

CAMPUS COMMENT

This column is still shrinking from its contact in the last issue with Landvoigt's effort to make the "Swing" appear as ludicrous as possible. That's what always happens when there aren't enough ads to fill up space. . . .

Short shots: The cider being peddled around the dorms. It gets hard awfully fast. . . . The words to "I Never Saw a Better Night" . . . If you're looking for some made-to-order clothes and things in top or overcoats, Mr. Meeks, who used to have the store where the Beauty Shoppe now rests, is canvassing the frats. The Fall shades are not so bad at all. . . . We see by our rival column, Between Sheets, which is supposed to be sort of an exchange, that we are being scooped again and again, which will never do. . . . Dr. Gaines smacking a ball around on his lawn with the grip end of his cane, but developing something of a slice. . . . The soothing air in the co-op due to the installation of that radio. . . .

Things are managed these days down to the minutest detail. In the biology lab for the 101 course they have an ingenious gadget. It is called a Paramecium Decelerator and comes in a little jar. The idea is that when attempting to study the elusive paramecium under the microscope the student generally has a hard time, since they tear about to beat the band. (The paramecium, that is.) This Decelerator is dropped under the slide's cover glass, and the protozoa slow down for inspection. A student wanted to try it, for his paramecia were devilish things and wouldn't stand still, so he put the Decelerator under the glass, then looked to see if they decelerated. They slowed down, all right. Th stuff killed every one.

To retain the interest of the highbrows, we commend (if you haven't read 'em) "God and My Father" and "Life With Father," by Clarence Day. They are written so a child could understand them and are the kind of books you'd like to write if you could. They're short, too.

What with the freshmen not having to wear green ties to the hops a lot of upperclassmen are afraid THEY will be wearing them next. . . . And then there was the Josph boy who said he liked these French telephones because he could hold them in one foot and talk with both hands. . . . The shrubbery at the foot of the campus is a decided improvement. If they would only start planting trees to replace the old ones which are going fast. . . . The most interesting sight on the campus is the building of the brick columns in front of the law building. No one seems to know just how it's done.

Letters to the Editor

BUT IS IT ART?

Dear Sir:
I was pleasantly surprised to read in the last issue of the Ring-tum Phi in the column conducted by Mr. Cowl Rider that the "Art Gallery" has attracted the attention of a student. However much I dislike to depreciate the intellectual curiosity of this worthy student who after gazing for two years at the sad countenance of the Virgin peeping over the gallery rail made the intense effort to climb the steps in the search of "art," I must admit that I believe the effort a useless waste of time and energy which had been better spent reading the comic pages (which seems to be all students read these days). To call the pitiful collection of bric-a-brac which clutters up the gallery of the Library "art" is either the result of ignorance, indifference or inordinate school spirit.

Two of the pieces, namely the oval panels representing Capri and Vesuvius, I can vaguely remember noticing on the walls of cheap barber shops. The majority of the pieces resemble the effort of countless maiden aunts of the hair-cloth sofa variety to wile away their waking hours during the reign of Victoria with atrocious copying of Watteau. If the vastly inferior work attributed successfully to Rubens, Veronese and Tintoretto is the work of a master, it was painted either in his infancy or dotage. It lacks form, color, design, or harmony, or any essential expression. Certainly no one can blame it on the man who painted the brilliant murals of the Doge's Palace.

As for the framing and mounting, I judge it entirely in tone with the trash it sets off. The piece of hardware near the steps is not worth mentioning. The only two possible paintings in the whole collection, the two Watteaus (?) are shut up in the Browning Room. I believe that most of us would be grateful if the Board of Trustees and the Librarian saw fit to dump the whole miserable collection into North River or better treat the freshmen to a bonfire.

Sincerely,
DIOGENES.

Big Blue Idle; To Meet Centre Next Saturday

SQUAD FREE FROM SERIOUS INJURIES

Lack of Reserves Is No Longer a Hindrance To Generals

With an idle week-end in store the Big Blue is slowly getting back in shape, and a rejuvenated Generals squad will meet Centre on October 19.

Having had two weeks in which to prepare for the "Praying Colonels," Washington and Lee will have had plenty of time to forget the unfortunate Duke incident, and be in the best condition possible.

Fortunately, the Generals left Richmond without any serious injuries, and every man on the squad will be ready to play next Saturday. In the meantime, Coach Tilson is polishing up the offense, and correcting any of the faults Washington and Lee exhibited last week.

With the reserves getting experience playing junior varsity football, lack of experienced reinforcements will no longer be a Big Blue weakness.

Graham-Lee to Organize, Select Officers Monday

The meeting of the Graham-Lee Literary Society, postponed from last week, has been planned for this coming Monday night at 7:30 in Washington College.

Invites Students

Students are cordially invited to attend the services of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, South, this Sunday morning to hear Dr. Forest Prettyman, former pastor here and one-time chaplain of the United States Senate.

Hospital Notes

Eight men from the University are confined to the Jackson Memorial hospital. Those suffering from colds are: Joe Payne, Drakes Branch, Va.; Jack Landman, New York City; Edward Gough, Louisville, Ky.; Paul Hervey, Cooper, Texas, and O. L. Taylor, Louisville, Ky.

The Generals Take a Rest This Week-end — Prepare For 'Praying Colonies'—Twombly's Headache And Basketball Dreams

Well, well, well, the varsity takes it easy this week-end, the JayVees go to Annapolis, the Brigadiers meet V. P. I., and it will be a quiet Saturday for all of the Washington and Lee sport fans.

It has always been Coach Tilson's hope to arrange the yearling, junior varsity, and varsity football schedules in such a way that the students can see one of their teams play at home every week-end.

The funny part of it is, that many former Brigadier regulars are cruising around school doing nothing when they could have gone out for their first love without even having to sign a pledge.

Will Rogers and Layton Cox, a couple of sophomores that haven't been noticed much this year, look like they might be fine material for next year's outfit.

While the Brigadiers did not look exceptionally good against Richmond, they picked up a lot, and acted like a ball club against the JV's.

Prospects For Wrestling Good

Footballers Will Return To Wrestling When Season Opens In January

Wrestling prospects are bright this season with the return of twelve Washington and Lee monogram men and seven grapplers who won their freshman numerals last year.

With practice now in full sway, this year's team shows great promise for a successful season on the mat, and the bone-twisters are hard at work getting themselves into shape for the approaching season which begins in January.

Among the old men to see action this year are: co-captain Roland Thomas 118; Frank Crew and John Taylor 126; George Lowry and Dave Basile 135; co-captain Glen Shively 145; Bob Holland, Carl Arenz and Herman Levine 155; Marty Kaplan 175; Eddie Seitz 165, and Hugo Bonino at heavyweight, are at present devoting their time to their gridiron duties, but at the end of the season they will report for wrestling.

Last year's freshman class donated some good material to the squad in Chet Palmer 118; C. W. Hay 135; Calvert Thomas 145; Chris Nielson 155; Chester Shively 165; Harry Meeks, 175, and Al Szymanski, heavy, are also engaged in football practice at present, but they will don tights and match grips as soon as the season is over.

Ran Tucker is managing the squad this year, and Ollie Colburn is junior manager. The weekly intra-team bouts will begin early in November.

A twelve-mile flight for one dollar is offered by the pilot of the huge monoplane which has been circling over the campus here for the past few days. The plane, which will be here until Saturday, uses a field three and a half miles from Lexington along the Staunton road.

Twenty-one Jay Vees Leave For Annapolis To Meet Navy Team

This afternoon Coach Tex Tilson and a squad of twenty-one men, composing the Jay Vee football team, left for Annapolis, where they will meet the Navy tomorrow in their initial contest of the season.

The team has been drilling hard all week under the tutelage of Coach Cy Young, who has been assisted by Pat Mitchell. All players who did not play in the Duke game will make the trip.

The starting team will probably be as follows: center, Will Rogers; guards, Bernie Jones and Charlie Sweet; tackles, Al Szymanski and Porky Dickinson; ends, Bill Fishback and Tony Young; halfbacks, Layton Cox and Shad Sharretts; quarterback, Kit Carson; fullback, Roger Williams.

Gridgraph Will Be Used To Show Football Games

The Gridgraph will function for the Centre, V. P. I., West Virginia and Maryland football games this fall, Captain Dick Smith announced today.

The gridgraph, which presents a play-by-play account of football games, will be operated in Doremus gymnasium by the Washington and Lee Monogram club. John Taylor is chairman of the committee. The admission is twenty-five cents for each game.

Sports Staff Predicts Winners in Week-end's Big Games

With the Generals idling, football interest this week-end is centered on several Southern conference games, and also some games of national importance. Many upsets have already occurred this season, and it is probable that other major ranking teams will be defeated by lesser opponents.

V. M. I. tackles and should down Richmond, while V. P. I. is fighting hard to gain a victory over an alert eleven from William and Mary.

In the East, a Holy Cross team is favored to beat John Harvard, but not without difficulty. West Virginia journeys all the way to Pittsburgh to be beaten by the Panthers.

Out in the mid-west, two great teams clash, Minnesota and Nebraska. Both are power-houses, and even though Minnesota has a slight edge, the Cornhuskers are well fortified.

Notre Dame, Alabama, Ohio State, and Duke hold decided edges over their opponents Saturday, but North Carolina and Kentucky will be pressed hard.

Predictions by the Ring-tum Phi sports staff are as follows:

- V. M. I. over Richmond. V. P. I. over William and Mary. Navy over Virginia. Holy Cross over Harvard. Kentucky over Ga. Tech. North Carolina over Maryland. Minnesota over Nebraska. Pittsburgh over West Virginia. Notre Dame over Wisconsin. Alabama over Miss. State. Ohio State over Drake. Duke over Clemson.

Campus Tax Addresses—Check and Correct Them

Leave Necessary Changes In Box At Journalism Room

Below are printed the names and mailing addresses of subscribers to the campus tax. If you are not getting your Ring-tum Phi the reason is probably that the files of the campus tax committee has your address incorrectly or incompletely listed. Now is the time to change it.

Students whose present mailing addresses do not agree with the ones given below should write their name and complete address on a slip of paper and drop it in the box which will be placed tomorrow on the outside door of the journalism room. Further failure to receive the paper should be reported to Frank Crew, business manager.

Students who receive their mail through general delivery must ask at the window for their paper. Otherwise, they will not receive it.

tees, and twenty students who will act as ushers. Dr. Henry Louis Smith, president-emeritus, Gov. George C. Peery, '97, and John W. Davis, '98, are also included in the list of Washington and Lee men to be present.

The exercises will start with the invocation by the Right Rev. Bishop H. St. George Tucker of Virginia. Gov. George C. Peery will make the address of welcome, and the dedicatory address will be delivered by Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, editor of The Richmond News Leader and author of "Robert E. Lee." The benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. Giles B. Cooke, age 97, the last surviving member of Gen. Lee's staff. The Confederate leader's favorite hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," will be sung.

The historic mansion, birthplace of not only General Robert E. Lee, but of two signers of the Declaration of Independence—Francis Lightfoot and Richard Henry Lee—and fifty other famous members of the Lee family, will on this day be offered to the people of the United States as a debt-free national shrine.

A speakers' stand has been erected in front of the new stone steps. This exterior staircase is one of the important original features of the house which disappeared 100 years ago. It is restored on its original lines, and with the new roof of gray shingles, the restored windows with their trim of Spanish red, effect a striking change in the exterior of the house.

Places on the speaker's stand will be reserved for the ambassadors and their aides of England, France, Italy, Austria, Holland, and Spain—nations with whom the names of various Lees were so prominently associated in the early days of the New Republic.

All participants in the dedicatory exercises will meet in the great hall at Stratford. With members of the national advisory board leading the way, the group will march down the grand stairway.

Maj. Buford Rose, commanding officer of the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, has announced that 150 of that famous regiment will make up the guard of honor. Dr. Gaines and Paul M. Penick, treasurer of the University

103 Students Employed Here Under NYA Grant; All Positions Now Filled

Washington and Lee has assigned students to all of the 103 jobs available from the funds granted by the National Youth Administration, it was announced today by the office of the dean of students.

The quota of 103 allotted the University this year under the N. Y. A. is approximately the same as that allowed by the P. E. R. A. last year.

Most of the work being done here, according to the dean's office is of a clerical nature, although some students are assigned to highly specialized research work.

At V. M. I. 73 cadets, approximately twelve per cent of the corps, have been assigned work under the Federal grant.

Civil Engineers Meet

Virginia Military Institute will be the scene of the fall meeting of the Virginia section of the American Society of Civil Engineers, it was announced yesterday by Colonel Robert Marr, professor of civil engineering.

The session, which will begin tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock, will be marked by a meeting of the society, a review by the corps of cadets, the Richmond-V. M. I. football game, golfing, and an inspection of the old and new highway bridges at Lexington.

The business meeting of the society will be at 10:15 tomorrow morning, after which Major General Lejeune, superintendent of V. M. I., will formally welcome the delegates to the Institute.

Lexington Celebrates Fire Prevention Week

Leaflets and window cards have been distributed throughout Lexington this week by J. W. Seal, fire chief, in connection with the National Fire Prevention week.

Lexington has been fortunate, according to Chief Seal, in not having any fires of serious consequence for some months, and it is his hope that through careful inspections and by taking every possible precaution, fire losses may be kept at a minimum here.

Christian Council Plans Hike To Mountain Top

The annual hike of the Christian council to the top of House mountain is scheduled for Sunday afternoon, October 18, weather permitting, according to David Basile, secretary of the council. Transportation will be furnished to the base of the mountain.

At a meeting of the council, held last night in the home of Dr. Morton, faculty adviser, a program of work was decided upon for the coming year.
