Students Mention Possible Candidates:

Three University Party Members Lead Presidential Predictions

By THE TUESDAY STAFF

"Who do you think is the most likely candidate for the next president of the student body?"

In a weekend poll conducted by the Tuesday edition of The Ring-tum Phi, 22 of the 37 students interviewed indicated that they had an answer to this question.

Only 15 of the students had no idea who might be nominated, although candidates will not be chosen until April.

Of the possible candidates mentioned, Billy McWilliams, Phi Delta junior, was picked by eight of the students interviewed or 22 percent of the total students polled.

Next was Kent Frazier, a junior KA, who was picked by six students or 16 per cent of the students interviewed.

Third was Henry Harrell, Sigma Chi junior, who was selected by four students or 11 percent of the total students polled.

Independent

All three of the above mentioned men are in the University Party. The only leading Independent Party man to be picked by members of the student body was Jimmy Vann, Phi Psi junior, with two votes.

Other candidates mentioned were Frank Hoss, Delt law student and Dave Lefkowitz, ZBT junior, each of whom received one preference.

Fifteen of the students polled indicated that they did not want to commit themselves at this time or did not have a preference. This amounted to 41 per cent of the students polled.

The interviews were conducted by three members of the Tuesday edition during the past Saturday and Sunday. Students were interviewed in the Co-op, on the streets, at Doc's, or from names picked at random.

Party Liners

In other statistics of the poll, 50 per cent of the students who are members of the Independent party said that they would follow their party line. From students in the University Party, 55 per cent indicated that they would follow their party.

Twenty-seven per cent of those polled stated that they would vote for the man they thought was the most qualified for the office.

Twenty-two per cent of the total interviewed did not say on what grounds they would vote, or they would not answer the question.

Comments Quoted

Below are some of the typical comments and answers from those polled:

Buck Aiken, a Phi Gam senior, said he would like to see McWilliams be the next president of the student body, but that he thinks Harrell and Vann will get the nomination, although he believes McWilliams is the best qualified. Aiken went on to say that he thinks that whoever the University Party nominates will get the office, and that he does not believe there will be a break-up of the present political situation.

Billy Giles, SAE junior, commented, "I think it will be Jimmy Vann. He is more interested in obtaining the job and is campaigning harder than the others. I think he could win in the junior class but it is questionable whether or not he could carry the student body as a whole."

Tom Luthy, Delt sophomore, said when asked the question, "Who? Well, I can't think of anybody... maybe Harrell." When asked on what he based his choice, Luthy replied, "He's been primed, and Sigma Chi hasn't had anybody 'up there' lately."

A junior whose fraternity is in the Independent Party said that maybe it would be Kent Frazier. When asked why Frazier was his choice, the student replied, "Because he's a good man and has been recognized for what he's done. He can do the job."

Bob Rappel, Pi Phi, and ex-chairman of the Independents, said he thought it would be McWilliams. "He's got his personality in his favor, but it's probably Harrell's turn in the party's system."

Bill Loeffler, a Pi Phi senior, said, "I think it will be McWilliams. It's obvious that somebody in the University Party will get it." Loeffler favors McWilliams because of his past experience on the EC, but went on to say that there is probably someone in the Independent Party that might be just as good if he had the chance.

An anonymous sophomore in the University Party said, "Jimmy Vann is going to walk in. He's popular among his own party. I would vote for him, although I'm not in his party."

A different type of answer was given by Mac Patrick, Delt senior. When asked who he thought the next president of the student body would be, he said that he didn't know because it was not close enough to election time. Asked whether or not he would support his party's candidate, Patrick commented, "Yes. Because even though the other party may have a better man, I'll vote for our candidate because he is the underdog. Everyone else in the other party will vote for their candidate, so our candidate is going to lose any way. I don't want to make things any more lopsided than they already are.

If the parties were equally balanced, I would vote for the best man."

Thomas Williams, a senior, said, "I suppose it'll be Harrell. It's Sigma Chi's time and they have been preparing Harrell for this."

Henry Bilely, Phi Kap junior, said he thought it would probably be Harrell. "I think he's the best qualified and can carry the student body."

Ollie Cook, Beta senior, said that he thought Kent Frazier should get the office, but may not get his party's nomination. "He's a more all-round man."

Drum-and-Vibe Virtuosos To Play Saturday

By GEORGE HONTS

Lionel Hampton, "the master of the drums and the vibes," has been contracted to play for the afternoon concert and the formal dance on Saturday, Jan. 30, the second day of Fancy Dress Ball.

Merv Silverman, president of the Dance Board, received a telegram Monday from managers in New York, confirming that Hampton would appear. Silverman had also been in contact with New York by telephone.

Silverman said that Sarah Vaughan and Cozy Cole had been at first contracted to appear for Fancy Dress, but that Miss Vaughn has been invited to tour Europe, and has requested to be released from her contract. Silverman agreed, provided that Cozy Cole would be released also, since he did not want one without the other.

Silverman then requested Johnny Menthias, Ella Fitzgerald, Nat (King) Cole, or Lionel Hampton for Washington and Lee. The first three were not available, and Hampton was contracted.

Lionel Hampton appeared at W&L at Openings Dances last year. Both Hampton and Lester Lanin, who has been signed for the Friday night dance are being brought back by student demand.

Hampton's afternoon concert will be from 4:30 until 6 p.m., and the Saturday evening dance will be from 9 until 12.

Some of Hampton's critics have described his band as "having a brass section that goes high enough to shatter glasses; it sounds more like a marching band than one designed for dance music. The brass helps the rhythm by playing figures. Then, too,

COSTUMES ON SALE

Fancy Dress costumes will be on sale Wednesday and Thursday of this week from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. This will be the last opportunity for students to rent costumes before the Christmas vacation. Jan. 7 has been tentatively set as the closing date for costume rentals.

it has a saxophone section that is as rich, full, and warm as the reeds of the old Jimmie Lunceford bands, with which, at one time, none could compare."

Hampton's performance at the concert usually includes "The Swing" several times, plus a number during which Hampton dances on his drums.

Princeton Law Professor To Analyze Supreme Court

The development in the Supreme Court's power, and the change in its role in government, will be the topic of Alpheus Thomas Mason, Princeton law professor, when he speaks here tonight.

Dr. Mason will speak on "The Supreme Court: Temple or Forum" at 7:30 in duPont auditorium.

His visit is sponsored by the W&L chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, an honorary political science society. He is now engaged in a three-year study of the offices and powers of the chief justice of the United States. He holds grants from the Ford and Rockefeller foundations.

Dr. Mason has written four books on former chief justice Louis D. Brandeis, and a major biography of former chief justice Harlan Fiske Stone.

Bob Walters Scores for Kernels In 6-0 Victory Over White Cobs

Jack Groner's Red Kernels squeezed to a 6-0 victory over Bill Young's White Cobs in the annual Corn Bowl game held Saturday afternoon on Wilson Field.

Bob Walters, Phi Kap senior, scored the only touchdown of the day on a line plunge from the one foot line. The winning touchdown climaxed a 40 yard drive by the Kernels late in the second period.

The White Cobs started strong after receiving the opening kickoff and gained three first downs before being forced to punt. The Kernels blocked the punt and started what appeared to be a touchdown march.

The Cobs stiffened when pushed to their own one yard line and forced the Kernels to fumble. Worthington "Foggy" Brown recovered the loose ball for the Cobs to end the scoring threat.

The game was a see-saw match around the mid-field line until the Cobs fumbled on their own 40 yard line. The Kernels recovered the ball and began their touchdown drive.

In the second half the Cobs kicked off to the Kernels and then forced them to punt. The Cobs took the punt and then began their longest drive of the day.

The Cobs drove to the Kernels' one yard line, but the determined Kernels held. Three times the Cobs tried to get the big one yard—and three times they were stopped short. The Cobs did not threaten for the rest of the game.

The half-time "Greased Pig Race" was won by a Sigma Chi pledge.

Three Chosen to Vestry

Two faculty members and one member of the administration have been elected to the vestry of Robert E. Lee Memorial Episcopal Church. Dr. Francis Drake, professor of French; Dr. E. C. Griffith, professor of economics; and Mr. William C. Wasburn, Alumni Secretary, were elected at the annual meeting of the church's congregation last Tuesday.

Staff Meeting

Tuesday R-t P board will meet Friday at 2 in the Student Union.

Tryouts Set for 'Romeo and Juliet' and Musical

William Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet will be the second Troubadour production of the year, according to Troubadour publicity director John Towler.

Try-outs will be held Wednesday and Thursday of this week from 7:30 until 10 p.m. at the Troubadour Theater. The play is scheduled for March, but Troubadour director Dr. Jack Lanich, has planned early try-outs in hopes of getting as many people as possible to tryout for the play.

"The early weeks in January have not been a successful time for play try-outs in the past," the publicity director said.

"Everyone is invited to tryout and no previous acting experience is necessary. Freshmen are reminded particularly that they may hold any role this year," he added.

February Rehearsals

Rehearsals are scheduled to begin on Feb. 2, the first day of the second semester.

There are around 20 speaking roles in Romeo and Juliet. Meanwhile, tryouts for the SWMSFC musical show have been set for next week. Singing and acting tryouts will be from Monday through Thursday, from 7 to 10 p.m., in the Troubadour Theater.

Director Steve Danzansky said the theme of the show will be "relevant to the present day." It will be presented some time this spring.

Next Tuesday the casting staff will travel to Hollins for tryouts of the feminine roles. "We know a number of girls who are very interested, very talented...and pretty," said Danzansky.

Enid Starkie To Discuss Literary Influences

"The Influence of French Literature on Yeats and Eliot" will be the topic of Enid Starkie, noted authority on French writers, when she visits W & L next Monday. She will speak at 8:15 p.m. in duPont Auditorium. Tickets may be obtained from the English department in Payne 24.

Miss Starkie

Miss Starkie, now a visiting professor at Hollins, is also a lecturer in French literature at Oxford. She has taught at the Sorbonne and the University of California as well.

She came to W&L as part of the visiting scholars program of the University Center in Virginia, a cooperative organization of most of the colleges in the state.

Miss Starkie has a doctorate of letters from Oxford, is a member of the Irish Academy of Letters, the French Legion of Honor, and the Anglo-French Joint Government Cultural Commission.

She has lectured in numerous British and Continental schools, and is the author of numerous books on French literature.

She was educated at the Alexandra School and Alexandra College in Dublin.

Miss Starkie is the second guest lecturer in the Seminars in Literature series. Stephen Spender began the series with his visit to the campus about a month ago.

Crippled Johnson Now Has IFC-Purchased Scooter

Johnson finally has his wheels. Bob Feagin, Interfraternity Council president, announced at last night's meeting that a motorized scooter has been purchased for the crippled dormitory janitor.

The purchase was engineered by Harry Foltz, Phi Delta sophomore. Each house contributed to a $300 pool to buy the scooter.

The machine is in Roanoke, awaiting delivery. Feagin said that Johnson will get an operator's permit within a few days, and will then be able to drive it.

Rich Abernethy, chairman of the IFC's Rush Week Investigation Committee, announced last night that a set of written recommendations will be submitted at next Monday's meeting. The report is expected to deal with possible modifications of the rushing system.

Robertson To Address ODK Assembly Thursday

Walter S. Robertson, Richmond investment banker and Far East expert currently serving as a United States delegate to the United Nations, will address the 45th annual Omicron Delta Kappa "tap day" assembly here Thursday.

Robertson will speak at noon in Doremus Gymnasium before the entire student body and faculty. Following his address, an undisclosed number of students and several alumni will be tapped for membership in the national honorary leadership society.

Robertson, who has held important governmental assignments under three presidents, was named to the American UN delegation earlier this year, following his July resignation as assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs, a post he had held since March, 1953.

Tomorrow's Ballet Cast Features Andre Eglevsky

A multitude of nationalities will gather on the stage of Lexington High School tomorrow night when the Rockbridge Concert-Theater Series presents the Andre Eglevsky Petit Ballet. The performance will start at 8:15 p.m.

Eglevsky himself is a native of Moscow and the son of a colonel in the Czar's Cossacks. He joined the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo at the age of 14.

A W&L Graduate:

War, Prison, Hope--All Part of Bishop's Life in China

By MAC McCLUNG

The Rt. Rev. Lloyd Rutherford Craighill, retired Bishop of Anking, China, is a man who has served the Episcopal Church for 44 years, 31 of which were spent in China.

Yet he has remained warm, cheerful, and optimistic through experiences that would be the test of any man's faith. Such an experience was the two years of internment that the Japanese inflicted upon him after the United States' entry into World War II. He was released from internment in 1943, returned to the United States, and then returned to China in 1946, never having lost faith in those people whom he had served so sincerely.

With the overthrow of the Nationalist government in 1949, Bishop Craighill was forced to return to this country. He then served as rector of St. James church in southern Maryland from 1950 to 1956, at which time he retired to Lexington.

Bishop Craighill said, "I first learned to love Lexington when I attended W&L." He said that he had been back to Lexington many times; he feels that, because of its friendliness and beautiful surroundings, it is a most desirable place to retire. "I certainly have never regretted it," he stated.

A Native Virginian

A native of Lynchburg, Bishop Craighill is a 1912 graduate of Washington and Lee. He is a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity and Phi Beta Kappa. In 1943, W&L awarded Bishop Craighill an honorary D.D. degree. At that time, he was being interned by the Japanese, and the degree was accepted for him by his wife.

He was graduated from Virginia Theological Seminary in 1915. That same year, he left for China.

On the boat, he met a young woman, a Presbyterian missionary, Marian Gardner, who was also headed for Nanking to study Chinese. In 1918, they were married. Since that time Mrs. Craighill has been "a part of the team," as the Bishop would say, and has been a constant help in his work. While in Nanking in 1915-16, Mrs. Craighill and Pearl Buck became good friends.

In 1916-17 Bishop Craighill taught in a high school. In 1918, he went to Nanchang, a city of a half million people, where he supervised the development of two parishes. His regular church was St. Matthew's, but he also directed the work with the young people at the Pure In Heart Church.

His duties in Nanchang, besides those of every parish priest, included everything from a construction supervisor to a bookkeeper. In China, Bishop Craighill said, a missionary could not be concerned only with the normal administrative work and the teaching of the church doctrines and services. He also taught English, supervised youth groups, was a member of many diocesan committees, did relief work in normal times as well as those of flood and other disasters, raised funds, and kept accounts, among other things.

He also supervised the building of St. Matthew's Church. His church, he said, "was an effort to adapt Chinese architectural types to use in the Christian church." The outside was built according to temple forms, and the inside "in a form that would be both worshipful and artistic from the Chinese standpoint."

Built in the shape of a cross—according to Anglican specifications—the inside was decorated in ornately carved camphorwood which was engraved with Chinese characters in gold. On one side was the character that represented the virtues of Confucianism, and, on the other side, which represented the Christian virtues. "This," he said, "was the embodiment of the Christian idea in the familiar artistic form—an idea with rich association."

More important than this physical contribution, he feels, is the one made through his diocese.

Chinese Leadership

"The greatest contribution of the Diocese of Anking was in Chinese leadership. The Chinese church, which has been on its own since the Communists took over in 1949, is better off under Chinese leadership," the Bishop said.

Bishop Craighill, with his wife, did more than contribute his share in this work. He worked with the Chinese clergymen, and, in the early years, helped to keep things organized and functioning properly. In the later years, his work was more a supervision of these clergymen. Through them, who with time assumed more and more of the duties, he aided the furtherance of Christianity in China.

Bishop Craighill's sincere interest in and devotion to the Chinese people is seen in a statement he made when he returned to the United States in 1943, after the Chinese had been fighting, almost hopelessly, against the Japanese for six years.

"Despite any rumors the people in America may hear about the Chinese giving up, those of us who really know the Chinese people know they will not give up although they are under terrific strain and hardships."

A newspaper man, at the same time, said of him: "He would not talk about his experiences in a Japanese prison camp, preferring to tell of the gallant spirit and indomitable will to win of the Chinese people."

Life in Nanchang

Bishop and Mrs. Craighill experienced many happenings and changes during the 19 years they spent in Nanchang. The civil war lasted until 1927, when the Northern Army, that of the warlord government, was defeated by the Nationalists, who, at that time, were connected with the Communists.

Nanchang, a stronghold of the Northern Army, was besieged, recalled Mrs. Craighill, for two months during the fall of 1926—during which time no one could leave the ancient, walled city.

The Craighills, during the siege, were host to 200 refugees—most of whom lived in their basement. "It wasn't safe even to stand in front of a window," they said "for fear of being hit by a stray bullet."

Again, in 1937, at the beginning of the Japanese-Chinese war, they helped support a large number of refugees—about 2,000. Being of a neutral nationality, they opened the church facilities and compounds for housing purposes. These they took in with the same love and charity which was characteristic of all their work in China.

The last ten years that they spent in Nanchang saw an increase in modernization—a result of the new Nationalist government. The old walls of the city were destroyed, improved methods of sanitation were created, and electricity was introduced. Travel, which, before, had been done in sedan chairs, on foot, by small boat, or in wheelbarrow, was in buses over roads—a completely new addition to the province.

One time, Bishop Craighill, while on a bus heading for King Teh Cheng where he was to visit a church, came upon a group of bandits dressed as soldiers. On discovering this, the bus driver sped up. Bishop Craighill, the only foreigner on the bus, would have been an excellent source of ransom, and almost was. The bandits riddled the bus with bullets, one of which missed a tire by less than two inches.

After the Craighills left Nanchang in 1937 they went to Wuhu. With the impending threat of a Japanese-American conflict, Mrs. Craighill and the three children were sent back to the United States in January, 1941. Bishop Craighill remained in Wuhu until the time of his internment.

A Bishop in 1940

On St. Andrew's Day, 1940, the Rev. Mr. Craighill was consecrated a bishop. Only last Monday, Bishop Craighill celebrated the 19th anniversary of his consecration by conducting the St. Andrew's Day services at the Robert E. Lee Memorial Church, here in Lexington. As Bishop of Anking, he was in charge of the provinces of Kiangsi and Anhwei.

After he returned to China in 1946, he lived in Wuhu, where most of the diocesan work was done. He lived there until 1949.

The Church in China is divided into 13 dioceses, which now are controlled exclusively by the Chinese Church, one of the goals of the work done by missionaries such as Bishop Craighill.

The Chinese Church is known as the Chung Hau Sheng Kung Hwei, which is translated literally as "I believe in the Holy Catholic Church," taken from the Apostles' creed. Its official name in English is The Holy Catholic Church in China, although it is no longer an official member of the Anglican Communion.

The Craighill's contribution to the Church is not limited to their own work. Their sons, Lloyd and Peyton, both of whom are missionary priests, are also graduates of Virginia Theological Seminary. Lloyd, who studied Japanese when he was in the army, served his first term after ordination in Japan. He is now doing missionary work on Okinawa.

Peyton, who, like his brother and sister, was born and spent his early years in China, is now a missionary to Taiwan (Formosa). The Craighills' daughter, Katherine, is married to the son of Rt. Rev. William Roberts, retired Bishop of Shanghai.

Many other members of Bishop Craighill's family have become clergymen, one of whom was rector of Bruton Parish Church in Williamsburg.

To visit the Craighill's house is a fascinating experience for anyone. The antique Chinese furniture, tapestries, and ornaments show the gracefulness and beauty typical of Oriental art. The porcelain, which varies in age from that which is relatively new to that which is 800 or 1,000 years old, is sensitively designed and brilliantly colored. Even the cats, Gogo and Didi, meaning "big brother" and "little brother," give the appearance of being oriental.

It is all charming and fascinating, as are the lives that these two people have led.

Tempo Picks Up: Long Distance Phone Instructions Add to Convention's Authenticity

By BILL LING

The Mock Convention Steering Committee would like to take the opportunity to answer some of the questions that have arisen concerning the Mock Democratic National Convention that will be held on May 2 and 3. This is done with the hopes that those interested students will make inquiries of their state Democratic political leaders during the Christmas vacation.

The Mock Convention is more than a mere college game. It is a quadrennial simulation of the national convention of the party out of power. Each student at Washington and Lee is an active participant as either a member of a state delegation or as a member of one of the convention's working committees.

For a few days, at least, every member of the student body is a staunch advocate of some faction of the political philosophy of the party out of power. Student delegates do not vote, however, in accordance with their own personal preference.

Rather, by closely following the political activity of the state which they represent and by contacting their respective state party leaders, student delegates attempt to reflect accurately the candidate preference of each state.

In past conventions, many students delegations actually received their voting instructions by telephone from the real state chairmen.

There are, of course, many minute details that will have to be taken into consideration by each student serving in the capacity of convention delegate. Those serving as nominating delegates will have an extra measure of responsibility in seeing that the political feelings of their respective states are accurately portrayed on the floor of the convention hall.

The following are some questions which have recently been asked of the Steering Committee members:

1. When will actual operations get underway?

Much correspondence has already been carried on; the tempo should pick up after Christmas and will get fully underway after the exam period.

2. Who will lead the state delegations?

The majority of the state delegations will be headed by upperclassmen, with preference being given the senior academic and senior law students. However, genuine "political" interest will certainly be considered.

3. What will the responsibilities of the delegates and chairmen be?

The most important responsibility, of course, will be that of maintaining contact with, and representing accurately, the views of the state represented. Each state delegation will have to select campaign headquarters for the candidates (Doc's, R. E. Lee Hotel, etc.). Each delegation must bear its own expenses. The largest expenditures are the parade floats, participation of bands, floor demonstrations, and "entertainment."

4. Who should be contacted in the sundry states?

The state chairmen, if possible. Otherwise, any other member of the State Democratic Organizations and other influential members of the party.

5. What should these men be asked?

Who the delegation will support in the national convention, and whether they will give us their full support of active participation in our convention.

6. Will we represent our own state at the Convention?

Inasmuch as it is possible, but the necessity of providing delegates for all the states will mean that some students will have to serve as delegates of states other than their own.

7. What sort of publicity will the convention have?

Plans are underway for an extensive national press, radio and TV coverage. During the last convention, approximately fifty representatives from these news media had representatives in Lexington.

Editorial:

Handball or Blackball?

"If You Can't Beat 'Em, Ban Them." An appropriate headline for a pretty mess. The pretty mess? The mix-up on the status of the faculty handball team in intramural competition.

This headline came from the sports section of Sunday's Washington Post and Times-Herald. It was over a very short article from United Press International in which the recent banning of the faculty team was described in a humorous fashion which befits the situation.

The students have certainly demonstrated that they are poor losers, at least when the handball season rolls around. We think it's a darn good idea to have some intramural competition between faculty and students. One definite thing at Washington and Lee needs—and this is not only on the athletic level—is a stronger relationship between faculty and students. The two groups go their own ways in everything they do, not just in the things that should be separate.

The students—through the intramural program, its director and manager—could easily strike a blow for this better relationship if they could come up with a solution that would enable the faculty team to participate in handball competition.

Frank Parsons, faculty manager, wrote a letter to the Tuesday Edition last week. His letter makes the students look pretty silly. We think any reasonable student will admit that the handball ban is unfair to the faculty.

Let's get one step ahead of the game and come up with a reasonable solution to the problem. Maybe the intramural people would do something about this "blackball" system, or let the faculty team pay the intramural dues, or let the faculty team play in an end-of-the season game against the top team in student competition.

A Grain of Salt:

A Glimpse of a Renaissance In Huxley's Blunt Questions

By ROY FLANNAGAN

Questions. These are the by-roads to wisdom, but they are not the fashion in the school of the casual. However, there is nothing that exists which should not be questioned. If there are absolutes, or universals, intelligent questioning can only strengthen them, for, by their nature, they must stand in themselves for eternity.

In the classroom, not much can be sopped up by that exponent of the cool school, the passive sponge. For those who can sympathize with a teacher, how horrible it must be, after throwing out a point at one's class and asking for discussion, then to receive only an ebony silence, in which all breathing ceases.

The teacher, left standing in a foolish, anticipatory pose on his podium, has the option of either giving up and going back to his notes, or risking the deadly hush again. He usually goes back to his notes, and, I imagine, takes it out later on his children, dog, or test papers.

Contrary to the opinion of the campus "beats," the pupils who ask questions in class don't get higher marks because they get "in" with the teacher this way. Actually, this is one way of relating the lecture to one's own feelings, and hence making it more personally interesting. But, if the questions are intelligent, the teacher appreciates them as much as he would new discoveries in his field.

A questioner in a slightly different sense is Sir Julian Huxley, whose speech at the University of Chicago was quoted in this column last week. He calls himself an "atheist." For this word, I imagine he has his own definition, but his personal inquisition into the meaning of religion has led him to a stand which raised many conservative American eyebrows.

Huxley questions the kind of popular religion which hangs rings and riches on wooden carvings of the Virgin Mary all over Western Europe, sometimes in communities where men sleep in the street, and some starve.

But the positive side of Sir Julian's solution was left out of the A.P. account of his speech, and out of my column last week. It was printed in Time and Newsweek. And so, to do him justice, here it is.

In place of religions of fetishes (Do you wear a St. Christopher medal?), and intolerance (Are Negroes allowed in your Church?) Huxley's new religion: "... will believe in knowledge. It will be able to take advantage of the vast amount of new knowledge produced by the knowledge explosion of the last few centuries in constructing what we may call its theology—the framework of new knowledge produced by the with intellectual support.

"It should be able to define our sense of right and wrong more clearly, so as to provide a better moral support, and to focus the feeling of sacredness on fitter objects, instead of worshipping supernatural rulers. It will sanctify the higher manifestations of human nature in art and love, in intellectual comprehension and aspiring adoration, and will emphasize the fuller realization of life's possibilities as a sacred trust."

Don't I hear a Renaissance ring in the bell-tone clearness of this belief?

Chattanooga and Sewanee Topple Generals; Fauber, Dougherty Top Scorers

The varsity basketball team took its first road trip of the season and the results were disastrous. The Generals dropped successive games to Chattanooga and Sewanee by scores of 71-60 and 78-57, respectively.

The Moccasins from Chattanooga overcame an early nine point deficit to defeat the Generals. Led by substitute guard Fred Carter, the Moccasins pulled to within two points of the Generals at halftime, 30-28. At the start of the second half Carter poured in ten of his 23 points to push Chattanooga ahead for good.

Jack Dougherty was high scorer for the Generals in this contest as he scored 15 points, most of them in the first half. Roger Fauber also hit in double figures for the Generals as he scored 11 points. Mal Lassman, who led the team against Bridgewater, scored only nine points and saw only limited action due to a knee injury sustained in the game with the Eagles.

Depth and all around scoring ability proved too much for W&L in their 21 point loss to Sewanee. The Tigers placed four men in double figures with Sparky Edgin and Poochie Tomlin each getting 16 points. Roger Fauber was high for the Generals as he garnered 14 points, all but four of them coming in the second half. Frank Surface was the only other General to hit double figures, as he scored 12 points.

This week the Generals have two games. The first one comes this Thursday night when the Blue and White travel to Bridgewater and hope to avenge their earlier 62-59 defeat. Saturday night the Generals return home for a game with Emory and Henry, at 8 p.m. in Doremus Gymnasium.

Professional Football

The Baltimore Colts, with a surprisingly easy victory over the San Francisco Forty-niners, vaulted back into the role of favorite in the NFL's Western Conference. An amazing jinx, which had seen the Colts drop all eleven of their previous games in Kezar Stadium, came to a resounding halt with the Colt's 34-14 victory. The Colt veterans, led by the passing of Johnny Unitas and the brilliant pass receiving of Raymond Berry, Jim Mutscheller, and Lenny Moore, finally wore down the rookie-laden Forty-niners in the fourth period and romped away to victory. It must be noted that the Forty-niners were forced to play most of the game without the services of their great quarterback, Yelberton Abraham (Y.A.) Tittle who had been injured in the previous encounter with the Colts in Baltimore. When Tittle got in the game in the second half he led the Prospectors to an astonishingly easy touchdown.

In other action the Chicago Bears kept themselves in the running for a tie with the Colts with a 27-21 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Lions defeated the Cardinals 45-21 in the game of the week, while the Rams lost their seventh game in succession, 38-20, to the Packers. The New York Giants clinched the Eastern Conference diadem with a 48-7 annihilation of the fading Cleveland Browns.

Wrestlers Top UNC, 21-11

The Washington and Lee wrestling team opened its season on a happy note last Saturday night, as the Generals downed North Carolina University 21-11. It was the second straight loss for the Tar Heels who have never beaten a W&L wrestling team.

The best match of the evening came in the 147 pound class when Dick Albert defeated UNC's Cary McSwain, 6-3. The match was extremely close until the final period when Albert picked up two more points to give him the victory.

Co-captain Drew Danko was an easy victor as he won by forfeit, in the 167-lb. class. The other General Co-captain Tony Brennan did not fare as well, as he was beaten 4-2, by Pope Shuford in the 157-lb. division.

Other Washington and Lee winners were Dave Montgomery in the 123-lb. class, Steve Cook at 130, and Danny Dyer at 137. Dyer pinned his man in only four minutes.

In a preliminary match, the Baby Generals were crushed by North Carolina's freshmen, 32-0.

The wrestlers have two matches this week. The first is Friday night at 7:30 in the VMI fieldhouse against powerful Franklin and Marshall. Saturday the Generals take on Gallaudet at 7:00 p.m. in Doremus Gymnasium.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

By BILL LOEFFLER

Things Don't Change Much

It happened on Dec. 8:

1959—Washington and Lee's basketball squad halts its three-game losing streak temporarily. They don't play tonight. Students gripe about non-subsidization policy.

1958—The basketball Generals were on their way to a 15-game losing streak, having already suffered losses at the hands of William and Mary and Richmond. The fun was just beginning. Students complain about non-subsidization policy.

1957—December 8 was on Sunday. Nothing happened. Maybe it was just as well. Oh yes, students were complaining about non-subsidization policy.

1956—West Virginia, led by Hot Rod Hundley, who scored 28 points, defeated W&L's famed Five-Star General squad which went on to win 20 games and finish second in the Mountaineers in the Southern Conference. The Generals led the highly-touted Mountaineers 54-53 with only 10 minutes to play, but lack of bench strength led to the defeat.

1955—Students complain about non-subsidization policy.

1954—Students complain about non-subsidization policy.

1953—No complaints about non-subsidization policy. We still had athletic scholarships.

1952—The Generals, members of the old Southern Conference which included the present Atlantic Coast Conference teams, had an 0-3 record. Considering their schedule, it wasn't bad. The successive losses were at the hands of North Carolina, North Carolina State, and West Virginia.

1951—The Generals left for Lexington, Kentucky—a fatal trip. They should have stayed at home. Final score: Kentucky 96, W&L 46.

1950—Things weren't so hot this year either. The Generals dropped their basketball opener to High Point (yes, High Point) 82-69. Students want more subsidization.

1949—Generals compile fair record in football and basketball. Students want more subsidization. Things haven't changed too much in ten years.

Appearing with him will be Lupe Serrano, leading ballerina of the American Ballet Theatre, who was born in Santiago, Chile, and made her debut with a Mexican ballet group. She later joined the Ballet Russe.

Others in the performance will be Jose Barrera, a flamenco dancer; Tania Karina, a leading French Ballerina; and Ivan Allen, a member of the American Ballet Theatre.

Dr. Cole on Study Group For College Art Assn.

President Fred C. Cole has been named to a 13-member study committee of the College Art Association of America.

The group will meet in New York Dec. 11 through 13 to make preliminary plans for an investigation of the nature and aims of education in the visual arts at American institutions of higher learning.

A Ford Foundation grant of $13,500 has been made to the College Art Association to conduct such a study. The study committee will discuss major areas and problems which the survey should consider.

The editorial and sports staffs of the Friday edition of the Ring-tum Phi will not meet this week.

SPE Pledges Organize Confederate Roundtable

Three freshmen have formed the nucleus of a campus Confederate roundtable, which they hope will be the basis of trips and lectures on a Civil War theme.

They have gotten professor William G. Bean and six upperclassmen interested in their project, and plan to hold a meeting Thursday to allow more members to join. The meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the South Room of the Student Union.

The organizers of the group are SPE colony pledges Dan Balfour,
