

International Relations Week Opens Tuesday With Hoffman

International Relations Week will begin next Tuesday when the Honorable Paul G. Hoffman opens the lecture series in Lee Chapel with an address on "Interdependence; Fact and Opportunity."

Hoffman is managing director of the United Nation's special fund and was formerly chairman of the board of the Studebaker Corporation.

Mr. Hoffman is a member of the Ford Foundation, chairman of the Fund for the Republic, president of a committee for economic development in 1942-48, and continues as director of several corporations.

Wednesday night, February 10, Dr. George J. Stolnitz will speak at 8 p.m. in Lee Chapel on "World Population: The Scare and the Meaning." Dr. Stolnitz said that he "will spend 10% on scare and 90% on the meaning."

Dr. Stolnitz received his graduate training at Princeton under Dr.

Frank Notestein, noted demographer. He is a professor of economics at Indiana University and is currently on a year's leave as a National Science Foundation post doctoral fellow. He is spending a year with Yale's Cowles Foundation for Economic Research.

Lt. Col. Amos A. Jordan, Jr., a Far East specialist, will speak at 7:15 Thursday evening on "United States Military Assistance to the Underdeveloped Countries." Col. Jordan is a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy where he is presently a professor of social science. He took his graduate work at Columbia University and spent two years at Oxford as a Rhodes Scholar.

International Relations Week has always been the second week in February and the quality of past programs has been excellent. Professor John Gunn of the Commerce School said, "This sixth annual program should be one of the most outstanding and most interesting to the students."

The purpose of the week is to increase student interest in international affairs and to make them

Initiation Ceremonies Set By Sixteen Fraternities

With Hell Week finally completed once again, fraternities are ready to perform the ceremonies that will make active members out of all their pledges who successfully made the grade requirements. Only two fraternities are holding off their initiations until a later date: Sigma Chi and Phi Gamma Delta. They will initiate their pledges within a few weeks time.

Grade requirements have prevented many freshmen from being initiated. Some fraternities have only two or three pledges eligible for initiation, but others have as many

First Meeting Of Musical Cast Set for Sunday

The first reading of this year's SWMSFC Musical will be held on Sunday night. Steve Danzansky, author of the musical, said that the reading will be at 7:30 in the basement of the Student Union.

The reading will be preceded by an open meeting of the 95 members of the Production Company, all of whom are expected to be present. This group includes the cast, orchestra, directors, advisors, and technical men. Also present for the meeting and the reading will be the female members of the company from Sweet Briar.

Danzansky commented that the 95 members of the musical company constitute the largest number of students represented in any single campus activity at the present time.

At Sunday's meeting, parts will be given out to various participants in The Cannon's Mouth. The rehearsal schedule will also be given out at that time, calling for five sessions per week. This year the female members of the cast, who will come from Sweet Briar, will also practice five nights a week, thus giving them a better opportunity to be familiar with the entire show.

Danzansky revealed that the musical will be adapted from a book that George Kaufmann, who wrote My Fair Lady, used as a basis for one of his plays. The basic idea of the story is an account of the 1960 presidential election as run by an advertising agency.

Songfest on February 24

The annual interfraternity songfest will be held this year on February 24, chairman Hal Fischel announced yesterday.

The songfest, which is open to all fraternity singing groups, is sponsored each winter by the Interfraternity Council. Participants are free to sing whatever they choose, and a prize is usually awarded to the winning group.

Mr. Robert Stewart, assistant professor of music, will be the leading judge at this year's songfest. Stewart also judged last year's contest, along with Doctors Borden and Leyburn, and Miss Mary Monroe Penick.

Applications for participation in the songfest should be made to Hal Fischel at the PEP house. Fischel stated that further details concerning the songfest would be announced soon.

The contest will be held as usual in Lee Chapel, with the singing getting underway at 8 p.m. It is open to the public.

Harrell Is Elected 'Collegian' Editor For 2nd Semester

Succeeds Susskind in Humor Magazine Post;
Will Keep Much of Former Editor's Staff

The Publications Board yesterday elected Chris Harrell, an intermediate law student from Emporia, Va., to fill the unexpired term of Jerry Susskind as editor of the Southern Collegian.

Susskind resigned his position at the end of the first semester upon graduation from Law School to join a firm in Jackson, Michigan.

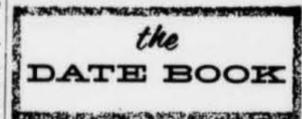

Harrell will edit the final two issues of the magazine, which will appear at Spring and Finals Dance weekends, in April and June.

Previously Harrell had served under Susskind as Associate Editor of the Collegian for the first two issues of the magazine.

Harrell announced plans to keep the current staff intact as much as possible for the remaining two issues, and follow generally the policies of former editor Susskind.

Harrell was elected at a special meeting of the Publications Board yesterday at the Student Union at 4 o'clock.

He mentioned the possibility of introducing promotional ideas to encourage more active contributions to the Collegian this year. He stated

There will be a meeting of all candidates for the varsity baseball team on Monday night, February 8, in the gym at 8:00. Coach Joe Lyles stressed that all positions are open and specifically urges freshmen to attend.

All second semester fees and dormitory rents and board were due on February 1, 1960. They may be paid in the office of the treasurer, Washington Hall 4, any day between 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m., or the bill may be sent home upon request. Please give this your prompt attention.

There will be an important Debate meeting next Thursday, February 11, at 4:15 in Payne Hall 21. All interested please be present because plans for tryouts and tournaments will be discussed.

There will be a meeting of the Home Edition staff on Monday at 5 p.m. in the journalism lecture room, Payne Hall. All present staff members and anyone interested in joining the staff for the second semester are requested to attend.

Shenandoah To Go on Sale Late Next Week

David Zinn, editor of the winter issue of Shenandoah, The Washington and Lee Law Review, announced that the magazine will go on sale at the latter part of next week.

The lead article of this issue is written by Mr. Randall Stewart, Chairman of the English Department at Vanderbilt University. The feature is entitled, "The Importance of Literature at the Present Time." Dr. Borden, assisting the editor for this issue, said, concerning the author, "Professor Stewart is a noted writer of American Literature, and his article is a perceptive argument for the dignity of literary scholarship."

Mr. Randolph M. Bulgin, instructor of English, has written an essay on Shakespearean imagery. The topic under discussion in Mr. Bulgin's analysis is the play, Romeo and Juliet.

Dr. Borden said "Shenandoah is presenting in this issue a short story by one of the most promising young poet-writers I have come across in a long time. He is George Garrett, and his story is entitled "Love's Cold Kingdom."

The issue also includes some previously unpublished poetry by Stephen Spender. (Mr. Spender visited Washington and Lee at the early part of the year. He is a noted English author.)

The "Book Review" section of the magazine has articles by Dr. Edward Turner of the Physics department, and Dr. Edward Hamer of the French department.

Practice To Begin For 'Romeo and Juliet'

Practice began this week in preparation for Romeo and Juliet, the second production of the Troubadour Theatre for the 1959-60 season.

John Towler, publication manager for the Troubs, stated that regular practices will continue until production actually begins on the Shakespearean tragedy.

The leading roles have not yet been publicly released.

'Help Week' Had Usual Pranks

By ROGER PAINE

As the Saturday sun rises over the mountains and hits the teeming metropolis of Lexington, many an occupant of the freshman dorm will breathe a deep sigh of relief. It is unlikely, however, that anyone will light up a cigar to celebrate the glorious termination of Washington and Lee's so-called "Help Week." If one listens closely enough tomorrow morning, he will be able to hear the funeral drums beating out a steady rhythm as the pledges who breathed one-too-many puffs of cigar smoke are towed up to Boot Hill.

But it is over, at least, and initiation is in sight. In a few weeks, when everyone is feeling more like human beings and less like Ubangi's, everyone might look back and laugh at some of the things that happened during this past week. To be sure, some of them are worth a laugh.

For example, Delt pledge Tom Andrew found himself dressed like a woman one day this week. That really isn't too bad at all, but when you have to make a speech on temperance in front of the ABC store, things get a little touchy. Of course, that sounds like fun more than anything else. Another Delt donned a ROTC helmet and a pair of shorts and directed traffic, while still others climbed on top of the immortal statue of Cyrus McCormick and sang fraternity songs. The Deltas had their traditional paddle race with the Phi Gams on Tuesday night. Those who are unfamiliar with this sport should know that a paddle race is a supreme test of balance. It is a relay race in which each man rests a paddle on the ground, places his forehead on the top of the paddle, and spins around it fifteen times. It is then his job to run to a given point and back again before another member of his team can take over. Although many an equilibrium was upset, the result of the race is contested by both sides.

The old stand-by of Help Week is, of course, the traditional scavenger hunt. There were few exceptions, if any, to this exhilarating sport. Most of the items required of the pledge specifically the hope of sponsoring a campus-wide humor-writing contest for the next two issues of the magazine.

Harrell, a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity, was elected over three other candidates who were interviewed at the meeting.

He is currently serving as managing editor of the Ring-tum Phi Friday edition, and has been a member of the Moot Court team. He is chairman of the University Cold Check Committee, and is also associate editor of the Washington and Lee Lawyer a placement publication of the Law School. He is a member of the Student Bar Association.

Ray Robrecht Parade Marshal

Ray Robrecht, a freshman law student, has been appointed Parade Marshal for the 1960 Democratic Mock Convention parade. The parade, expected to be one of the most colorful events of the Convention activities, will be held on May 2.

The appointment was announced by Warren Goodwyn, who is parade chairman of the convention and a member of the Convention's Steering Committee. Goodwyn said that due to the enormity of the job, it is impossible for him to handle it alone. He added, "It will be a difficult job, but I am sure that Robrecht can handle it."

Robrecht will be in charge of the general organization of the parade. In this, he will work closely with both Goodwyn and the various state chairmen in setting up the various elements of organization that will be necessary.

Robrecht was not available for immediate comment on his appointment.

Abeloff Names New Law Review Editors

William Abeloff, Editor of the Washington and Lee Law Review, Vol 17, No. 2, announced that he will have four associate editors for this semester instead of the usual three. This was necessitated by the fact that there will be 23 men on his staff for this issue, one of the largest staffs of recent years.

are unprintable, but a few highlights of the week were fairly obvious. Mr. Brady, grounds superintendent, was somewhat disturbed when he discovered that the Phi Gams had corralled a sheep in the west reading room of the freshman dorm, but allowed it to stay until the moment of unveiling.

Yesterday the hallowed KA log met its end when the Phi Gams completely devastated it by painting it purple and white, then burying it in shaving cream. The PIKA's then picked up what was left and carted it off. In that the southerners in this case, as in 1865, were hopelessly outnumbered, it is understandable.

Everything that has marked Help Week for many years, minus a few restrictions, took place at one time or another—cigar smoking in telephone booths, chair races, and endless housework. Somewhere beneath it all lies a reason, but I'm afraid it's buried too deep in shaving cream, squashed cigarettes and candy, tomatoes, onions, garlic, mustard, and peanut butter.

'Help' Week: Who's Kidding Whom?

For the past week we have observed with mute interest the proceedings of Washington and Lee's "Help Week." This appellation was derived four years ago when the IFC took measures to abolish hazing during fraternity pledge training.

It occurs to us now that the spirit in which these rules were produced is not the same as the spirit in which they are now being carried out. It has been our experience this past week to witness, in not just a few fraternities, the most flagrant violations of these rules.

These rules were not created out of an idealistic dream by some ivory tower hermit. They were borne out of the unfortunate experiences resulting from hazing on other campuses—and we don't need to be reminded of the "liver" incident at Southern Cal, or the drowning at MIT, both of which resulted in deaths. These rules did not say to "be careful" when you haze, they stated specifically that hazing was forbidden.

And yet, this year, as every year, there has been only reluctant lip service paid them. The process of "maturing," "shaping up," or "uniting," the pledge classes has taken on its usual gross debasements of person and character, a sadistic commentary on the intelligence and perception of Washington and Lee men.

Constructive work, scavenger hunts, and even harmless games intended to ridicule the pledges can be tolerated, and even encouraged and understood. There is a certain amount of such activities necessary for a freshman to prove his willingness and respect for the fraternity.

But the willful imposing of physical abuse and mental strain seems to us to be totally unwarranted, theoretically as well as realistically—theoretically in light of the nature of such proceedings, which are intended to prepare a man to become a member of a social organization, not a member of the Marine Corps Commandoes; and realistically in the light of the recent tragedies connected with such practices.

The blame lies with many sources. The IFC rules forbidding hazing were never accepted genuinely on campus. Though they were developed by the fraternities themselves for the benefit of the fraternities, it has been the fraternities themselves who have sought to destroy their effectiveness. The fault lies to some extent in the lack of proper enforcement methods or perhaps in the unwillingness of anyone to enforce them. Every fraternity has skeletons in its own closets, and is thus reluctant to expose any other violator.

If such is what the fraternities desire, then it strikes us as quite hypocritical that they ever developed rules forbidding hazing. But we contend that such rules are necessary and sound, and want only for proper enforcement to encourage their obedience. We look to the Interfraternity Council to provide such enforcement and encouragement, and to take its hands from in front of its eyes.

Delayed Rush: Showdown Comes in IFC Monday

The delayed rush program reaches the showdown stage before the Interfraternity Council this week. After over a month of discussion, revision and study, it has come out in the form of a half-semester program, with intensive rush periods at the beginning and end of the period, and weekly dates every Saturday night.

Its designers have done a conscientious job in presenting to the IFC a program which seems best of all the possibilities for delayed rushing programs. There has been constant adjustment and a willing effort to suit every interest.

Not Suited to Campus

It has been our belief, however, since the beginning of the discussion, that a delayed rush program was not best-suited to the interests of this campus. We have pointed to the isolation of the campus, the lack of available social facilities to compensate for the delay, and we have noted the success which the current program has had in the past.

It is our opinion that there has been no warrant for a change. The Commons, it is true, created a new facet of campus life, but judging from pledging this year, the proper adjustment has been made within the system itself. A change at this time appears to us not only dangerous, but unnecessary.

Social Organizations

We are inclined to favor a gradual reduction of fraternities to their basic social purpose. Such would be ideal. The University, however, has only made partial steps in that direction. There is now a freshman dining hall, but there have been no accompanying social or recreational facilities to accommodate those not in fraternities.

Until such time as this school is prepared to provide suitable social facilities such as those in other schools which have a delayed rush program, the idea seems a bit premature.

We have observed the effects of delayed rushing on other campuses. The immediate results have been a prolongation of the pressure placed upon both freshmen and fraternity. The ensuing bitterness have created an unpleasant air of tension among fraternities, and among the individual men. The expenses for rush week have been multiplied, and the resultant inconveniences have created a heavy burden.

Impression of Commons

We are aware that the Commons has left an impression, and will do so in the future. If and when the University affords means of accommodating its students socially, the change will be even greater. The rush program, however, must be geared to our present needs, and those are for immediate pledging. We do strongly recommend that the Interfraternity Council take steps to clarify and emphasize its current deferred rush program, which has never been properly stressed. With a better understanding of deferred rush, the option will thus be made more clear to the freshmen who wish to "look around more."

But this year's pledging indicates that freshmen still prefer immediate pledging, a program which seems well-adapted to our University.

Southern Dances Preferred By Lanin

W&L Attractions Include Gentlemanly Conduct, Beautiful Women

By HARVEY ALLEN and SUSAN SILBERBERGER

Lester Lanin had some interesting observations to make on the subject of Fancy Dress and on college weekends in general when he appeared at W&L last week.

Surprisingly, the noted bandleader seemed to find a lot more merit in W&L's dance weekends than do many of the students themselves. Lanin felt that in comparison with dances at other colleges, W&L's were better, in many ways.

On the subject of W&L men, Lanin said he found them to be among the "most gentlemanly of any found anywhere around the country. This is indicated," he said, "by the way in which they request numbers for me to play."

"Most college students come up and say, 'Play "Big D".' At W&L, they say, 'When you have time, or if you can get to it, would you please play "Big D"?'"

Beautiful Women

Lanin also mentioned "the many beautiful women," that always come to the dance sets at Washington and Lee.

In comparing big dance weekends at northern and southern schools, Lanin said that the ones in the south, particularly here, "show much more spirit." He personally felt that the south was "the most receptive to my music and the most enjoyable to play for."

The north-south comparison naturally led to an inquiry about dance sets in general, and whether they are as popular both here and elsewhere as they used to be.

Placement Notices

Mr. D. A. Mershon of the Lehigh Portland Cement Co., Allentown, Pa., will visit the campus on Monday, Feb. 8 to interview all seniors interested in the opportunities for a Sales and Sales Administrative career with Lehigh Portland. Men will be accepted for the training programs regardless of their military status.

On Tuesday, Feb. 9, Mr. Alden W. Hammond of the Irving Trust Co., will be on this campus to interview seniors who are interested in a banking career. Mr. Hammond will discuss opportunities for positions in Customer Relations, International Banking, Operations, Trust and Investment Divisions.

Representatives of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. will be on this campus Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 10 and 11, to interview any seniors interested in a career with the Telephone Co. All interested men are urged to make appointments for interviews with these men.

The Hapless Freshman

The freshman this year is a curious animal. He lives within an area stretching from duPont Hall to the Commons. He rarely descends from the Hill, and has little contact with upperclassmen.

His grades weren't particular impressive this year, and he has started his second semester with the trials of Hell Week. He doesn't like Hell Week, and if he had a choice, he wouldn't go through it.

But he has to go through it. To join a fraternity, he must go through Hell Week. And he must join a fraternity.

So our freshman goes to class and learns that his professor does not approve of Hell Week. God knows, the freshman doesn't approve of Hell Week either. But the professor exercises his right to display his disapproval in the form of pop quizzes, and other unusual projects.

Our freshman must suffer. And yet where does his choice lie? He has no power to alter his fate.

We, like the professors, don't approve of Hell Week. But we also don't approve when unfair advantage is taken of men who are helpless to alter the situation.

If the faculty on the whole wishes to take action, then their rights must be respected, and their proposals carried out. But the fault for Hell Week lies not with the freshmen, but with the fraternities and the blame and punishment should be affixed accordingly.

Lanin said that from his observations over the past 15 or 16 years of playing for college dance weekends, that "the number of dances given around the country is about the same." He went further to say that they are drawing about the same size crowds as before, varying from very small dances at the lesser colleges, to the really big dance weekends at colleges such as Princeton.

3,700 at Dance

Lanin recalled playing for one dance at Princeton that was attended by over 3,700 students. "The large crowds," he said, "are due to publicity, creating an incentive to come to the dances. Naturally a big band, given the advantages of full publicity, would draw a much larger crowd than a less well known band without the benefit of such publicity."

Concerning the type of music being played at these big dance sets, Lanin said that he finds "the students want music that is generally slower than students of twenty-five years ago." The requests then were for the "jazzier numbers."

May Cut Record

Many students and their dates at Fancy Dress Ball expressed disappointment at the fact that Lanin was not able to record the dance, as had been hoped.

Lanin replied that "it would be an honor to cut an album called 'Lester Lanin at Fancy Dress.'" This he hopes to do as soon as possible.

When it is done, the music might not be taken from actual recordings made at Fancy Dress Ball. Lanin said that he would take recordings made elsewhere and use them in a Washington and Lee Fancy Dress album, if that were the only way it could be done.

It stated that the fear of being called a "brain" or "weenie" caused many students to suppress their need for self-expression and many with much potential for intellectual development are forced by the ties of conformity and/or lack of self-confidence to remain permanently obscured and comfortably pocketed in with the rest of the "average" students who must never let it be known that they really like to use their minds.

To cope with the problem of the inability of students to write and spell correctly, Fairleigh Dickinson University has put a stringent rule into effect which says that every student whose writing falls below "college-level standards" will be required to repeat the first semester of freshman English, with stresses on composition. The student will not be allowed to graduate until he has passed the course.

Cagers Bow To Tigers, 72-70, In Final Seconds

W&L Faces Wash. College In Doremus

By AL CURRAN

A last minute follow-up shot by Hampden-Sydney's Bill Hardin was enough to break a 70-70 tie and give the Tigers a victory over Washington and Lee's Generals, 72-70, last night.

Coming from behind a nine point half-time deficit the Generals tied the score with 30 seconds remaining on a 25 foot jump shot by Ken Kowalski. The Tigers stalled the ball until Leon Hawker, high man for Hampden-Sydney with 20 points, took a long jump shot which bounced off the rim. The rebound went to Hardin who made the final shot of the game which gave the Tigers a final winning score of 72-70.

Outstanding for the Generals were Mal Lassman, who was the game's high scorer with 21 points, and Jack Daughtrey who scored 16 points, all in the second half.

(Not including Thursday night with Hampden-Sydney).

Tankers Meet American U; Face West Virginia Tues.

The Washington and Lee swimming team reopens the season this afternoon with a home meet against American University of Washington, D. C.

This will be the first meet between the two teams in the school's history, and Coach Cy Twombly expects A.U. to be one of the tougher opponents which the Generals will face this year.

American University was Mason-Dixon Conference swimming champion last year, and their team has shown considerable strength this year in defeating a better than average William and Mary team.

Coach Twombly reports that all of the team will be able to compete today and that the team as a whole is in fairly good condition. Robin

Dunlap and Skip Rohnke have been bothered by colds, but they will both be in the meet.

Tuesday afternoon the Generals face West Virginia University at home. According to Coach Twombly, West Virginia has a much improved team and will offer rough competition for the Generals. Last year W&L easily defeated the Mounties at White Sulphur Springs.

If the team can win these two meets, Coach Twombly feels that his team has a very good chance of going undefeated for the season. After the West Virginia meet only two more dual meets remain with William and Mary and Norfolk Division W&M supplying the competition. Going into the A.U. meet (Continued on page 4)

Matmen Face Duke and WVa.

Washington and Lee's wrestling team, after a three-week break for finals, will begin the second half of the season Tuesday afternoon with an away match at Duke.

In the past this has been a hard match for the Generals because of Duke's power and the fact that it is an away match. However, Coach Dick Miller believes that the Duke team this year is not exceptionally strong and that the two teams should be close to evenly matched.

The whole is equal to the sum of its parts

(But some of its parts are more equal than others!)

Even Euclid had to admit...

It's what's up front that counts

Euclid proved that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points. And if you'll walk a straight line to the nearest pack of Winstons, you'll find it the shortest distance to a really enjoyable smoke. It's the tobacco up front that makes the difference and that's where Winston packs its own exclusive Filter-Blend—a special selection of light, mild tobacco, specially processed for filter smoking. You'll find Filter-Blend gives Winston a flavor without parallel. In fact, it's axiomatic that...

West Yarmouth, Massachusetts. All these men have been on the Law Review for the preceding four semesters.

Each of the new associate editors will be in charge of a group of four or five men. Work has already begun on the selection of cases to be commented on by the various staff members and some have started preliminary research.

"Duke is not as strong as North Carolina whom W&L defeated 21-11 in the opening match of the season."

The only contest on the remaining schedule which would seem to offer trouble for the Generals is the match scheduled for February 13 with the University of West Virginia. West Virginia is believed to be quite strong this year.

Miller feels that if W&L can win over West Virginia, there is a very good chance of winning the remainder of the season's contests. This season has been the most successful for the grapplers in recent years as they carry a 3-1 record thus far.

An additional match has been scheduled with Hampden-Sydney on February 22 at Hampden-Sydney. This is the Tigers first year of wrestling, and they should not offer the Generals too much trouble. Last on the schedule for this year is the NCAA tournament which will be held on March 10, 11, and 12 at the University of Maryland, College Park, Maryland. In the tournament W&L will meet such teams as Penn State, Lehigh, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Iowa, and Illinois.

The line up for the Duke match will probably be as follows: Dave Montgomery, 123; Steve Cook, 130; Danny Dyer, who will be back in the lineup for the first time since before Christmas, 137; Sandy Merseureau, 147; Tony Brennan, 157; Kent Frazier, 167; Drew Danko, 177; and Graham Fulton, Heavyweight.

W&L has a clean 4-0 slate. Washington and Lee will participate in the State Meet to be held at VMI on February 26 and 27. Elliot Maynard, W&L's star breast-stroker, will represent the University in the NCAA swimming meet.

Maryland, in Doremus Gym. Washington has a 7-6 overall record with a 7-2 record in the Mason-Dixon Conference in which they are now second in the Northern division.

The Generals will have to stop Washington's Dick Callahan who has been high scorer all season. Washington plays man-to-man defense against which the Generals have been most successful this season. Game time is 8 p.m.

After the Hampden-Sydney game, Coach Bob McHenry said that he felt it had been one of the best team efforts of the season. He gave credit to all his players, and he said that the final deciding factor came on the foul line as 26 fouls were called against the Generals and only 12 against the Tigers.

Coach McHenry announced that Bill Buice and Steven Rutledge, outstanding freshman player last year, have returned to the team. However, Dave Beale has been forced to drop from the team because of poor grades. This means that Ken Kowalski will now see duty as both a guard and forward.
