

Fauber, Kowalski To Lead Cagers Against Bridgewater College

Sophomores Give Best Support On Young, Inexperienced Team

Washington and Lee's youthful basketball squad opens its 1960-61 season Dec. 1 at Bridgewater College, and if things turn out as indicated, W&L fans will be talking about the football team's success until early March.

The Generals, playing their third year under Coach Bob McHenry, face an 18-game schedule with little experience, even less height, and a questionable scoring punch.

Only two lettermen return from last season's squad which won 7 and lost 10, and which lost its first four scorers via graduation. Unless McHenry discovers a new sharpshooter, he'll depend largely on his veterans, 6-2 Rodger Fauber and 6-0 Ken Kowalski, to assume the point making burden.

Both boys are sophomores and both work most effectively as corner men, although Kowalski can shift to the backcourt with ease. Fauber played regularly last year until sidelined by an illness, and he averaged 8.8 points and 9.1 rebounds a game. Kowalski was a top reserve until Fauber's loss, when he became a regular and wound up with a scoring mark of 5.8 per game.

McHenry hopes each boy will score more by shooting more. Fauber displayed 48.2 accuracy from the floor last year, while Kowalski hit on 42.1 per cent of his field goal attempts.

There is another letterman available in guard John Kirk, a regular on McHenry's first 1-15 team in 1958-59, but scoring isn't Kirk's strong suit. He averaged only 2.4 a game as a starter. Even so, McHenry will look to the 6-1 senior to provide some measure of maturity to the starting five.

The Generals' other starters are likely to be 5-9 sophomore Brett Thackston in the backcourt and 6-6 freshman John McDowell at center. Thackston saw some action with the varsity last year, but he hardly rates as an experienced hand. He'll be the playmaker. McDowell is 6-6, the first of such size McHenry has had as a college coach, and that's enough to spell S-T-A-R-T-E-R all across his practice jersey.

Top reserves are 6-3 Steve Rutledge, 6-4 John Culley, 6-1 Dave Grogan, and 6-0 Dave Beale.

Rutledge may move into a starting forward role early in the season. A dislocated finger has handicapped him in pre-season practice, but he rebounds well and has a deft jump shot. Culley was the regular pivot man on the 1959-60 frosh team, and Grogan was top freshman scorer. Beale uses his pivot foot better than any player Coach McHenry has ever seen.

McHenry says he expects to run when he can, but he'll rely primarily on patterns off a single pivot. "We'll work for the percentage shots on offense and hustle like mad on defense," he summed up.

The Generals play nine games at home, and if they can

Coach Bob McHenry discusses an important play with the top five of the basketball team, John McDowell, Roger Fauber, Bill Ide, Ken Kowalski, and Brett Thackston.

McHenry Counts On 'Go Attack'

Here it is the end of November and another basketball season is upon us. The football team and coaches made all of us proud to be associated with Washington and Lee. We hope that we, too, can continue in their footsteps. It certainly will be no easy task.

What is in store for the 1960-61 Generals' opponents? We have a young team that will make up in hustle what it lacks in experience. The squad will consist of one senior, three juniors, nine sophomores, and a freshman. These boys have been going at it for six long weeks and are anxiously awaiting their first opponent, the Little Eight Champion of last year, Bridgewater. The Eagles have three of last year's starters back from the team that beat us twice, including Jim Reedy, a 27 point per game scorer, who is being pushed for Little All-American.

After we play Bridgewater on Thursday, we come home to cozy Doremus to host Norfolk William and Mary on Saturday. They too have

Matmen Tackle North Carolina In Friday Opener

By STEVE GUILD

The Washington and Lee wrestling team will meet its first opponent, the University of North Carolina, this Friday at Chapel Hill, N. C.

The team, while it has good depth this year and could easily fill any place left vacant by injuries, is composed mostly of juniors and sophomores, and the team's weakness will probably lie in this. Both star wrestlers Danny Dyer and Drew Danko left last year. Dyer was the team's strength in the 137 lb. class, while Danko was the team utility man, serving in practically any position he was needed. Coach Dick Miller commented that "with these two men on the team last year, we could be assured of two pins right off and that goes a long way in winning a match."

Even though the team is younger this year, Miller feels no uneasiness in placing what he calls the "two best freshman prospects I have this year" close to the starting lineup with the expectation that they will fill any of the vacant spots that might appear. Ed Jensen from Baltimore, Md., and Herb Smith, a Newport News boy, will probably see action in the 137-157 classes, although their definite positions have not been decided yet. Dick Albert, a sophomore from Tulsa, Okla., seems to the Coach to be "the upcoming utility man of the team."

In the heavyweight position on this year's squad are Graham Fulton who is the starter, backed up by Sam

Bloch, another sophomore. Miller feels that this is probably the strongest position on the team right now and hopes that they can make up for any deficiencies in some of the other slots. At the other end of the roster is Dave Montgomery in the 123 lb. position who equaled the team's record last year with a 7-2 tally.

Three sophomores who will not start or be on the team the first few weeks but are counted on to bolster the squad in the coming season are Bob Pagano, Tom Clements, and Jud Babcock, who all have been out for fall sports and have not had any specific wrestling practice yet.

Captain and senior Sandy Mercereau is expected to bring pins again this year as he did last season in the 147 lb. class. Kent Frazier, who will not be in the first several meets because of his upcoming Rhodes Scholarship tests, should be in line sometime before Christmas in one of the heavier weight classes.

The schedule for the matmen this year is about the same as last year's except for a few changes. The Generals will wrestle Pfeiffer College on

Galef Criticizes Grading System

The University's academic requirements could then be scaled according to this particular system. This system might tend to raise the overall average of the University, since there is no provision for credits that would result in the B and C minus levels. However, since the University at present does not penalize a student for having an average that might be lower than his report card grade might appear, there is little need to do it in the future.

In any case, the purpose of this particular change is to provide incentive for work accomplished, and not to offer further discouragement. This should certainly be the purpose of an institution devoted to both excellence and individual attention.

Perhaps this system would not be the most feasible one for the University to follow. However, there might be a method that would come closer to equating a student's record of achievement with his report card average. Some schools accomplish this by using the method outlined above. Others keep a factual record of a student's numerical average at the end of each semester that he has taken a certain course.

In any case, these plans accomplish one thing. They serve to curb the apathy that often exists among those students whose average "just misses" the next grade level.

Matmen Show Good Depth

Dec. 16, in a home meet, and North Carolina State has been added in place of Wake Forest, who dropped their wrestling program entirely last year.

Coach Miller thinks that the team's two hardest matches will be with Franklin and Marshall, which they take on in an away meet on Dec. 10, and West Virginia University, another away meet for the Generals on Feb. 16, 1961. These two schools have always caused considerable trouble for the Blue and White, and this year should be no exception, especially since both are not home matches. The one bright spot in the Franklin and Marshall picture, however, is that the Diplomats lost four of their best starters from last year, and this should give the W&L men an advantage.

As far as the rest of the schedule is concerned, Miller isn't making any predictions. He learned last year that this isn't always the best thing to do. He thought, as the rest of the team did, that New York University would be one of the tough ones on the schedule. As it turned out the Generals beat them by a sizeable year.

one of the states' leading scorers in Leo Anthony, who averaged 26 points a game last year. Included in their starting five are Bill McCraw, who stands 6' 7" and Bob Newton at 6' 6". Norfolk W&M is predicted to replace Bridgewater as the top Little Eight team in Virginia.

Our work is cut out for us in our first week of competition, but we think we are ready. I hope that many of you will come out and root for the Generals of 1960-61.

Commerce Fraternity Sponsors AIESEC Program

Students in Economic and Commercial science, is beginning its fifth year of operations in this country with the outlook for expansion to the Washington and Lee campus. Last year over 2,000 students from some twenty countries were exchanged including 150 American students who were placed in summer business positions in foreign countries. An equivalent number of foreign trainees came to the United States under the AIESEC exchange and were employed by such companies as IBM, New York Life Insurance Company, Allis Chalmers, The Schering Corporation and others.

AIESEC is an international student administered commercial traineeship and educational exchange program. AIESEC student-faculty committees solicit paid commercial traineeships for foreign students. These traineeships which are secured by the students of each participating college or university are exchanged on a one-for-one basis at an annual international congress in March. Thus if one University secures 10 traineeships for foreign students, 10 students from that school are entitled to go abroad as AIESEC trainees.

The purpose of AIESEC is to further international understanding and education—especially among future leaders of the world and business community. Each host country arranges educational tours social outings and other recreational activities for its AIESEC guests. For example, during the summer of 1960 foreign trainees in this country visited Washington and were addressed by Dr. Henry Wallich of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.
