

Miss Marjorie Norris

Miss M. Norris To Head Group

Miss Marjorie Norris, of St. Agnes High School in Alexandria, Virginia, was selected chairman of the 1965 SIPA Advisory Committee yesterday.

Miss Norris is the newspaper advisor of the St. Agnes Shearings. She was chosen at the adviser's luncheon held yesterday afternoon.

She succeeds Mrs. Nancy Broughton, of Thomas Dale High School, Chester, Virginia.

The chairman acts as co-ordinator between the committee and the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation, which sponsors the SIPA convention. The committee's main function is to offer suggestions on improving the convention.

Confusion High Here Because of Leap Year

May is always a hectic month for students in the journalism department at Washington and Lee. The week before the annual SIPA Convention is enough to put even the toughest journalist on edge.

This year, May will be an even busier month than usual. The students in the department must give a great deal of their time to covering the Mock Convention. Fortunately, this comes only once every four years and therefore no one has to go through the ordeal twice.

As if this wasn't enough to distract even the most ardent student's eyes from the books, just prior to exams, there is an extra, added attraction this year. The George Marshall Research Library is to be dedicated May 23. President Lyndon B. Johnson will do the honors with the add of former Presidents Harry S. Truman and Dwight D. Eisenhower. It will be a busy month, and one in a lifetime for Lexington residents.

Zimmerman Defeats 41 In Contest

'Him and Her' a Rocket Says Stymied Delegate

Two Rockbridge County, Virginia, delegates from Natural Bridge and Lexington have taken top honors in the annual SIPA Currents Events Quiz given yesterday afternoon.

Michael Zimmerman from Natural Bridge High School won with a top score of 68. Scoring a 66 was Christine Capito of Lexington High.

There were 42 delegates taking the test this year, ten more than last. In 1963, the winning score was 89.

Answers this year varied as evidenced by some of the incorrect conclusions.

Puppies Stymie Delegates

For Him and Her, the two Beagle puppies of President Johnson, the delegates wrote a movie soon to be released, a Broadway play just opening, Profumo and scandal in England, Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor, best selling book, by-words of prejudice in Life magazine, name for Russian spacecraft to carry man and woman to the moon, and prince and princess who ran off to get married.

Barbara Streisand was called a news reporter and cometator, a new star with a large nose, and a world swimming champion.

"The Deputy" was identified as a recent TV program starring Henry Fonda and Nikita Khrushchev.

Johnson and Johnson

Ken Johnson, the Houston Colt pitcher was noted as a distant relative of President Johnson.

Cathy May Baker, the 7-year-old girl who wrote President Johnson so that her grandmother could visit her, was variously listed as the daughter of Bobby Baker, a witness in the Bobby Baker trial, a stripper, an American swimming champ, a witness in the Jack Ruby Trial, the wife of Bobby Baker, a woman on the Atomic Energy Commission, and a nurse of the late President Kennedy.

Huff Tough Too

Sam Huff, brutish linebacker of the New York Giants recently traded to the Washington Redskins, was recognized as a golfer competing internationally, winner of the International Open, a senator running for President of the United States, a ballet dancer, a crooner, star of the Metropolitan Opera, and United States chess champion.

The movie "8½" was termed the high jump record and a nuclear cut-back plan.

Robert Moses of the New York World's Fair was made known as a composer of symphonies.

Pringle Wins Presidency By Nine Votes; Floyd Finishes Second In SIPA Election

The SIPA presidential candidates spoke last night at the dance—David Stevenson, Chuck Woody, Gil Pringle, Drew Babb, Mike Floyd and Audra Whitlow (not present.)

Will Succeed Anne Leake

By GUY UNANGST

Gil Pringle, a Manchester, Virginia High School junior, was elected 1965 president of the Southern Interscholastic Press Association this morning.

Pringle won by a plurality of just nine votes from five rivals, closest of whom was Mike Floyd, of Hartsville High School in South Carolina. Four hundred and nine votes were cast.

Chuck Woody, Drew Babb, Audra Whitlow and David Stevenson were the other official candidates, although votes were cast for Bill "Goo" Gossman, Clyde Twynke and Penny Les.

Pringle got 142 votes to 133 for Floyd. He is the second president to be elected from Manchester, the other being Jo Anne Parsons, 1958 SIPA president. He succeeds Anne Leake, of Albemarle, Virginia High School.

Pringle will be co-editor of his high school year book next year. He is a member of Quill and Scroll and the National Honor Society.

Floyd, one of two seniors running, writes a weekly column for the Hartsville Messenger. He has served as co-editor of the yearbook, is president of his high school's chapter of the National Honor Society and has had work published in the National Anthology of High School Poetry.

Audra, serving for the third time as an SIPA delegate, will be editor-in-chief of her high school newspaper next year. She won first place in district forensic spelling competition and will compete in state competition later this year.

She is a member of the Virginia All-State Band, president of her district Tri-Hi-Y, and a delegate to Girls' State.

Stevenson will be editor-in-chief of his high school yearbook. He is photographer for the school newspaper, a member of Quill and Scroll, and has competed in local and district interscholastic debates.

Babb, a senior, will be editor-in-chief of his high school newspaper and has been assistant editor of the yearbook. He is a member of Quill and Scroll.

Woody has been editor-in-chief of his high school newspaper and will next year serve in that capacity on the yearbook. He is Teen-page editor of the Richmond News-Leader, has received an Award of Honor from Quill and Scroll, and will be a delegate to Boys' State.

Meetings Keep SIPA Delegates Busy

Round-tables and short courses were again the heart of the SIPA Convention this year. Delegates to the convention could choose from 24 round-tables and 16 short courses.

There were round-tables for the staffs of newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. In addition to these categories, photography was added to the list of subjects tackled in the short courses.

The round-tables and short courses were held all day Friday and Saturday morning. There were 12 newspaper round-tables, four magazine round-tables, and five yearbook round-tables.

Four short courses were offered in both the newspaper and magazine fields. There were three photographic short courses and five yearbook short courses.

The round-tables were run by the delegates themselves, with a few exceptions. The advisers to the various delegations presided and kept things moving.

The short courses were run by "experts" in teaching and private business. Mr. Howard Hammersley manager of the photographic department of the Roanoke (Va.) Times and World News met with three different sessions.

Mr. James Boatwright, editor of Washington and Lee's literary magazine, Shenandoah, and instructor in English at the University, gave three short courses in magazines.

The yearbook short courses were given by Mrs. Pearl Hanson, formerly of Washington-Lee High School; Dr. Regis L. Boyle, Woodrow Wilson High School and Catholic University of America; and Frederick F. Hafner, with the University Press Division of William J. Keller, Inc., publishers.

The newspaper short courses were given by four members of the professional press. William G. Levarty, assistant managing editor of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, gave a course in newspaper design.

Other professionals participating were William Fishback, Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch; Horace Hood, assistant editor Roanoke (Va.) Times and World News; and Edward Backus, a member of the staff of the Journalism Press.

Interview Format Praised By Trussell In Chapel Talk

At a talk in Lee Chapel Saturday, Tait Trussell told SIPA delegates about the pros and cons of the question and answer format in news reporting. Trussell a Washington and Lee graduate, is currently the associate editor of Nation's Business, a magazine published by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. He addressed the students and their advisers shortly after 11 a.m.

Mr. Trussell said that a story presented in a question and answer format can be as dramatic as a murder trial and as authoritative as an official text. He called the delegates attention to the fact that more and more newspapers and magazines are rediscovering the question and answer format. Many newspapers and magazines make it a point to regularly publish interviews in this fashion. He went on to say that this is their way of competing with the host of interviews on television.

He explained how he had requested and was waiting for a time to interview then-Vice President Lyndon Johnson when the news came of the assassination of President Kennedy.

Childs Cautions Press On Lack Of Objectivity

By TIM O'KEEFE

The American press must meet the revolutionary change that is being undergone in every department of life, Marquis Childs, syndicated Washington columnist, told SIPA students yesterday.

Childs said that all communications media must become more objective in their coverage if they are to carry out their share of responsibility in this time of challenge.

Acting as a combination Cassandra and complainant in his talk Childs first posed these two questions to his audience. Do the news media give sufficient evaluation to the news they print? And just because some has made a statement, does that necessarily make it news?

He gave two examples of where the press had failed in both respects.

"It was just 10 years ago today that the Senate was wrestling with the problem of Sen. Joseph McCarthy and the way he had flouted the rules of the Senate and made a shambles of Senate dignity with his infamous 'hearings,'" Childs said.

"That all started with a casual radio talk by McCarthy in which he declared that there were 69 card-carrying communists in the State Department. Most news media gave that sensational play without evaluating the charge. How could a single Senator know this? What were his grounds for this sensational charge?"

"After a long conflict it was established that McCarthy did not have the name of a single card-carrying communist in the State Department. But by that time he had discredited three or four individuals by innuendo," he said.

"The question I would like to leave with you today is whether the fearful damage done by McCarthy might not have been avoided by another approach. It seems to me that we had an obligation to evaluate and to include that evaluation as part of the news report. That false statement made by that single irresponsible individual did incalculable harm," Childs said.

In 1960 the Democrats put a lot of stress in their campaign for the presidency on the "missile gap." The missile gap was a myth. It originated largely out of propaganda of the Air Force Intelligence, which had greatly over-estimated the Soviet missile capacity, Childs said.

The press made headlines out of the story but it was almost entirely without foundation. This also points out one of the unhappy aspects of political life today, he said.

"Big defense contracts have become entangled with partisan politics. You will hear the 'ins' asking to be re-elected this fall because they can do more for their state or district. They will be saying that they can get a new defense contract or keep an old one. "This kind of political pressure is bound to mean waste and needless expenditure. In my opinion the press has an obligation to challenge this type of campaigning," Childs said.

Marquis Childs, syndicated columnist, addressing candidates at a general session in Doremus Gymnasium yesterday.

Turning to the coming Republican convention July 13 in San Francisco, Childs said that Sen. Barry Goldwater could come close to getting the nomination on the first ballot.

Still, there is room for doubt that Goldwater will win the nomination. He has not stacked up too well in public opinion polls as the man who would run best against President Johnson.

"If Goldwater fails in his bid, he will have so much strength that he probably will be able to select the candidate himself. I believe that he will throw his support to Richard Nixon, who would serve as the party's best compromise candidate," Childs said.

Childs said he personally thought Lodge or Scranton would make the most effective candidates against President Johnson next November. But the chance that either will get the nomination is small, he said.

Marquis Childs has been a newspaper man for 40 years. During this time he has established a reputation as a specialist in the reporting of international and national news.

Childs was born in the Mississippi River town of Clinton, Iowa. He decided at the age of 13 that he wanted to be a newspaperman. He does not remember what prompted that decision. His father was a lawyer and his forebearers had been farmers.

After graduating from the University of Wisconsin in 1923, Childs landed a job with the United Press in Chicago. He resigned a year later to take his M.A. degree at the University of Iowa. In 1925, Childs returned to the United Press, this time in New York.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch lured Childs west in 1926. He took a job with the paper as a feature writer. He was soon covering stories all over the country. He was sent to Europe in 1930 and spent several months there studying and reporting the economic and social effects of the changing governmental policies in Scandinavia, Germany and the middle European countries. In 1936 he was named Washington correspondent for the Post-Dispatch.

Shortly before World War II he visited Mexico and studied that country's oil expropriation program. Several of his reports were "so hot" that an investigation of several prominent U.S. Senators was ordered. Childs was roundly denounced from the Senate floor by the affected senators, but he sued and won a full apology from all concerned. The Senators had charged him with biased reporting in speeches on the Senate floor.

During the war Childs saw much of the world. He covered events in England, Brazil, Sweden, and Bolivia. His now famous Washington Calling column was started during

SIPA Paper Printed Here On Campus

Lauck Has Received National Recognition For His Craftsmanship

The special SIPA edition of the Ring-tum Phi and the official activities program of the convention were both printed in a small shop on the W&L campus under the direction of a man known as "America's Baskerville Printer."

And in addition to the once-a-year chore of printing the SIPA materials, the five-man W&L journalism laboratory press crew turns out most of the campus' publications, posters and pamphlets.

C. Harold Lauck heads this crew of professional printers. Working under him are Lynwood Pullen, Edward Backus, Edwin Walker and Don Tabbutt.

The title "America's Baskerville Printer" was given Lauck several years ago as a result of national recognition he received for skillful use of Baskerville type.

50 Years With Trade

Since his middle teens, Lauck has been connected with the printing business and has built up a backlog of more than 50 years of experience. Next year he will begin his 34th year at W&L.

Following an issue of the school newspaper through the shop the first person concerned with the copy is the linotype operator, Lynwood Pullen. Setting type for campus publications, he must often act as proof reader and copy editor.

Next, the type goes to the skilled hands of Edward Backus, the print the war and is now syndicated in 130 papers in the United States. In 1945 he was appointed to cover the fighting fronts in Italy, France and Germany.

Since the end of the war, Childs and his wife have used their Washington home as their base. In the past 15 years he has made more than 36 trans-Atlantic flights, and has reported first hand almost every major diplomatic conference, international crisis and summit or near summit meeting.

Authored Best-Seller

Childs is also the author of many books, fiction and non-fiction. His latest, "The Peacemakers," is a novel about the time of crisis in top-level international diplomatic circles. Earlier books include his 1958 non-fiction best-seller "Eisenhower: Captive Hero," and others.

He has received many journalistic honors, including the Sigma Delta Chi award "for sustained insight in international affairs, firsthand reporting, and effective writing."

Classrooms and Printshop To Move Under Same Roof

The journalism department will be moving into a new building over the summer. Work began last June on the remodeling of Reid Hall, which will house of the department's facilities now located in Payne Hall and in the old print shop.

Under Reid Hall's new roof will be facilities for: (1) Classrooms and offices for basic instruction and research programs related to the mass media, public opinion and advertising. (2) Professional facilities including news, printing, advertising and film laboratories, wire room, radio and television studios and photographic studios. (3) Accommodations for professional seminars. (4) Offices for external services functions such as administration of the duPont radio-television awards and SIPA. (5) Specialized library and reading rooms and archives for audio-visual materials.

Printshop Will Move

Present plans call for the ground floor to contain a full-sized print shop. All the equipment formerly used in the journalism laboratory press will be moved to the new structure. The fourth floor will house several photographic darkrooms.

The second floor has been remodeled to include offices, classrooms, a library and conference room.

The third floor will contain a regular newspaper city and wire room, an advertising laboratory, film, tape and record libraries and radio studios.

The department eventually plans to broadcast from its own FM radio station. Long range plans also call for incorporating a television studio in the broadcasting facilities of the department.

W. W. Coffey and Son, local contractors, did the renovation.

The Department of Journalism and Communications this summer will move its facilities into Reid Hall, now under renovation.

Question Format Allows Control

swer format because it allows him to control the interview, according to Trussell. He also explained that David Lawrence, publisher of U.S. News and World Report, uses the interview as a means of getting something similar to a signed article by an expert.

Trussell told delegates of some of his experiences interviewing such people as the late Senator Robert S. Kerr, who was known as "King of the Senate." He gave the delegates some tips on preparing for an interview and told them how to select the best subject for an interview.

Studied Journalism

A Navy veteran, Trussell graduated from Washington and Lee as a journalism major in 1949. He has made Washington, D.C., his beat. After graduation he was a Washington correspondent for the St. Petersburg, (Fla.), Times. He once served on the editorial staff of Congressional Quarterly News Features. Before joining the staff of Nation's Business, he was a member of the Washington bureau of the Wall Street Journal and a reporter for the Washington Star.

Trussell is a member of Sigma Delta Chi, a journalistic society, and the recipient of the 1961 Loeb Special Achievement Magazine Award for distinguished business and financial writing. He is the author of "Income Taxes 1862-1962," a light history of the Internal Revenue Service; and he created and produced a documentary record album entitled "Best of Washington Humor." The Trussells and their two sons live in Washington. He is a third generation journalist.

Lee Offered First Course In Journalism

"Absurd," said E. L. Godkin of the New York Evening Post, when he heard that Gen. Robert E. Lee was planning to add a course in journalism to the curriculum of Washington College (now Washington and Lee University).

This was in the post-Civil War era, when journalism instruction was still an untested idea. It was in 1869, when Lee was president of Washington College, that the first Press Scholarships were established. The scholarships, 50 in all, went to "young men proposing to make printing and journalism their life work and profession."

Courses Suspended

But General Lee died in 1870, the Reconstruction brought hard times, and instruction in journalism was suspended in 1878. The revival of the courses was not again considered until 1921.

In that year, president Henry Louis Smith of Washington and Lee appeared before the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, and asked for help in re-establishing the courses of instruction in journalism.

SNPA Fostered School

Accepting this idea, the SNPA voted to foster a school of journalism here. Donations flowed in from newspapers and private citizens all over the South.

Journalism instruction was resumed under Prof. Roscoe B. Ellard in 1925. Two years later the school moved to its present location in Payne Hall, on the Colonnade.

Succeeding Prof. Ellard in 1930 was Prof. William L. Mapel. The present director of the department, O. W. Riegel, succeeded Mapel in 1934.

Courses in radio and television were added to the department when they became popular media of communication.

The completed forms for the paper then go to Don Tabbutt. All five men work in the small shop behind Washington Hall. Steps are currently being taken to expand the capacity for work which the print shop can handle and recently a new Linotype machine was added to the shop's equipment.

In the Inland Printer, the printing industry's leading trade journal, Lauck has been featured as one of the nation's top typographical craftsmen.

Some of his work was selected for the 1964 Commercial Printing of the Year Exhibition of the American Institute of Graphic Arts. The exhibition, which traveled throughout the nation, represented the work of some 200 out of 3,000 printers who entered.

Until recently Lauck also conducted classes for the journalism department, teaching journalism students the rudiments of type setting and printing and explaining the various machines used in production of printed materials.

This task is now being performed by Edward Backus.

Glee Club Entertains SIPA

The combined voices of Washington and Lee's Glee Club and the Longwood College Choir entertained an SIPA audience of about 800 in Doremus Gymnasium Thursday night.

The John A. Graham Brass Choir from W&L and the Longwood Woodwind Ensemble also participated in the two hour program, which began shortly after 8 p.m. Glee Club accompanist Warren Hopkins, a senior, was presented the complete piano score for Chopin's work and the music for Beethoven's sonatas. The gifts were in appreciation of four years of service.

The concert opened the activities of the 35th annual SIPA Convention. Anne Leake, president of the group, welcomed SIPA delegates and their advisers at the intermission in the concert.

The concert is an annual affair, and for the past two years has fallen on SIPA weekend.
