EC Will Examine Bank Rules

by John Cleghorn

After reviewing a report from the Cold Check Committee, the Executive Committee moved to begin informing incoming freshmen about local banks' policies towards bounced checks in a short meeting Monday night.

In other business the E.C. commended the editors and staff of the Washington and Lee Political Review on its first publication and also froze the finances of the Fencing Club, the Computer Club, and the Student Emergency Loan Committee until their monthly reports are heard.

Upon inquiry from senior Law Rep. Morgan Griffith about students' awareness of local banks' penalties for cold checks, Cold Check Committee Treasurer Randall Jacoby replied that many freshmen are ignorant of the workings of a checking account.

"I think it would be helpful to freshmen in understanding each bank's policy. They don't understand that they have to pay the banks as a penalty," Jacoby commented.

Senior Rep. Ken Lang then moved that a policy statement be included in the package for incoming freshmen. Executive Committee Secretary Bennett Ross remarked that cold checks are a matter concerning the bank and the student and that responsibility lies with the bank to inform the freshmen. After a short explanation by Griffith, E.C. President Eric Myers suggested that the banks be approached about the matter.

Senior Rep. Tripp Brower asked Jacoby if there were many second offenders. Jacoby responded that there were only a few and added that no revision needed to be made in the cold check policy.

Eric Myers remarked, "I think it's great," referring to the first issue of the Washington and Lee Political Review.

IFC Again Considers New Rush

By Scott Mason

The Inter-Fraternity Council, Tuesday night, resumed its tussle over the continuing debate of "deferred rush," a subject which has drawn the interests of the University Council and Student Affairs Committee and Executive Committee.

Dean Dan Murphy, assistant dean of students for fraternity affairs, indicated the suggestions were made at the Student Affairs Committee meeting held just prior to Spring break. Those proposals concerned intensifying a shortened first semester rush which would be preceded by an extensive orientation period for all freshmen. In addition to greater open contact between freshmen and fraternity members, this intensive early rush would, it is

W&L Applications Set New Record

Washington and Lee University received a record number of applications for admission to the university this year, according to admissions officials.

As of April 2, Washington and Lee's office of admissions had processed 1,602 applications from prospective students. Before this year, the largest number of applications had been in 1965 when the university received 1,599 applications.

The total of 1,602 applications represents a 17 percent increase over a year ago when the university processed 1,369 applications.

William M. Hartog, director of admissions at W&L, said the university has offered admission to 765 (or 48 percent) of the applicants. The university plans to enroll a freshman class of between 350 and 365 students this fall.

Hartog added that the university has a "significantly stronger pool of acceptances" in terms of academic quality as measured both by achievement and aptitude test scores and by daily academic records.

The average class standing among students who were admitted is higher than a year ago, said Hartog. The average class standing for those offered admission is in the 82nd percent-tile.

The mean Scholastic Aptitude Test scores are up 20 points from a year ago to 564 verbal and 611 mathematics. In addition, the students accepted this year have scored 17 points higher on the English achievement test than last year.

"To date, we have named 12 National Merit Scholars and an-anticipate that between 25 and 30 will be named in all," Hartog said.

Of the students accepted for admission at Washington and Lee, 60 percent are attending public high schools while 40 percent are attending private high schools. Forty-four states are represented among the 765 students offered admission.

William M. Hartog: "a significantly stronger pool of acceptances."

hoped, relieve much of the monotony which many believe afflicts the present system. Murphy said that the Student Affairs Committee finds it favorable to "get it (rush) over with" as soon as possible, and that these changes would allow that quick termination.

The IFC itself is taking no further action on any possible changes with the rush system until after hearing the results of the next Student Affairs Committee meeting which will take place on April 29. A general solution is expected to be made concerning next year's rush at that meeting.

Other factors which weigh considerably on any final decision entail the financial burden placed upon the fraternities during rush, as well as the academic burden on freshmen and all students. However, time, perhaps, is the greatest obstacle in solving the deferred rush issue. With just over a month remaining in the academic year, a decision must be finalized soon.

Editorial Opinion of The Ring-tum Phi

Single Sanction

The letter found at the bottom of this page deals with a rather touchy subject — the single sanction policy of the Washington and Lee honor system. Opinions on the single sanction rule run in either direction. Those who believe in it — the belief that a person gets only one choice if convicted of an honor offense — claim that single sanction serves as a deterrent of sorts for would-be honor abusers. Threaten the people with involuntary expulsion, they argue, and no one will cheat. But those who disagree with single sanction state that sometimes we should forgive our fellow students for honor violations and permit them to remain in the community.

Obviously, the single sanction rule is a complicated matter. While automatic expulsion does seem an effective deterrent for cheaters, it is also frightening to consider the consequences of convicting a person on a questionable honor offense. But under the system at Washington and Lee, we theoretically give the student at least one fair hearing — the option for a second hearing is also possible. This, in theory, should guarantee defendants of a fair hearing.

Over the past few years, there seems to have been an increase in the amount of students going public with their honor trials. Whether this is a reflection of students questioning the effectiveness of the Executive Committee to conduct a private honor hearing, or whether it reflects students enjoying a democratic process, we are not really sure. Of one thing we are sure, however. When discussing the single sanction rule, it is best not to either simply advocate or lampoon it. The matter is too complicated to try and place under narrow limitations.

Sunday, April 25, marks the first International Day at Washington and Lee University. The event will be sponsored by the Washington and Lee International Club.

First on the agenda for Sunday is a Chinese Opera performance at the University Theatre. The performance starts at 3 p.m. and reservations can be made by calling 463-9111, ext. 299. Chinese opera is a traditional type of drama and, as a rule, follows a folklore theme. Professor I-Hsiung Ju of the art department was instrumental in bringing the opera to the W&L campus. The opera will be the first of its kind at Washington and Lee, and is a rare opportunity to witness an ancient Chinese art form.

The opera will be performed by the Chinese Opera Society of Washington, D.C. The performance is entitled "The White Serpent" and tells of a woman who turns into a serpent and the man who falls in love with her not knowing she is a snake.

The opera will be followed by an "International Dinner" to be served at Evans Dining Hall. The dinner will be served from 5:30-6:30 p.m. and will cost $5 for non-contract students.

Following the dinner, a slide lecture will be presented in the University Library's Northern Auditorium at 8 p.m. The lecture is entitled "On the Road in China, November 1981 - March, 1982: a Historian's Observations." The lecture will be given by Dr. Roger B. Jeans, a W&L professor of history. A reception will follow with international hors d'oeuvres being served.

The club is also presenting an International Children's Art Exhibit. The exhibit will be on display from April 25-30 in the University Library's Lower Level One lobby.

Henry Baey, president of the club, commented that "the day will hopefully provide some awareness of different natures and cultures. We hope many students will be able to attend. If it turns out well, we hope to make it an annual event."

W&L Opens Up To Summer Scholars

Washington and Lee University will offer a month-long co-educational program designed to give college-bound high school students the opportunity to sample college life again this summer.

"Summer Scholars '82" will be held July 4 through July 30 on the Washington and Lee campus in Lexington.

This is the second summer in row Washington and Lee has conducted the program that involves a rigorous, college-level academic curriculum for students who will be seniors in high school this fall.

Dr. John F. DeVogt, professor of administration at W&L, is the director of the program.

During the four-week period, participants will take two academic courses that they choose from among 12 offerings. The courses include such topics as "Battles and Leaders of the Civil War," "Current Concepts in Biology," "Inflation," "Effective Writing," and "The Media, The Law and Society."

Applications should be made by May 1.

Single Sanction Policy Questioned

Dear Sir:

Having a few minutes to spare, I sat down at my desk this morning to read a while from a copy of Excelsior, the newly established journal of FOCUS. The first article I read was "Honor and Will" by John Vlahoplus and, while I continued reading other articles, in the back of my mind was the desire to respond to John's letter, and thus this letter.

The article deals with the honor system at Washington and Lee and supports the necessity of continuing a single sanction system. If a student is found guilty of an honor offense, this system requires him to sever his relationship with the university. John states that "honor cannot be measured by degree" because such a position would make honor a relative pursuit. On the contrary, John believes very clearly that honor "cannot exist beside dishonor" and that the tolerance of even the most insignificant act of dishonor would jeopardize the entire system of trust which we enjoy as Washington and Lee gentlemen.

While I have the greatest respect for John, I cannot help but object to the unbending principle which he espouses. As much as it pains me to admit the fact, I have suffered from that "failure of will" which John identifies as the root of dishonorable action. A case in point comes to mind that, while not having occurred at Washington and Lee, I think may prove helpful in illustrating my position.

Some five or six years ago I was visiting my grandparents on their in Southern Virginia. One morning my Grandmother gave me the keys to her car and asked me to pull it out of the garage for her in order to fill the gasoline tank. Unfortunately, I was so intent on looking over my shoulder that I neglected the front of the car while backing up and ended by smashing the front fender against the side of the garage. Well, needless to say, I was in a state of shock and terror at what I had done and was sure that punishment would be swift and severe. On the contrary, my Grandmother upon discovering what occurred comforted me and told me to simply let it pass. She even made me promise that I would not call home and tell my parents what I had done.

That may have been the end of the incident, however I continued to feel badly at having damaged my Grandparent's property. The next day, I telephoned my parents and told them (what I had been thinking) that they could pay for the damage and I in turn could repay them. Of course, my Grandmother quickly found out that I had broken my promise to her and was not a little displeased. But what did she do?

She could have made me leave the farm never to return because I had lied to her, had violated her honor. Instead, she again forgave me and comforted me. I have never again even told a "white lie" to my Grandmother and since that harrowing episode have enjoyed many fine days on the farm. I committed an act of dishonor against my Grandmother, but instead of banishing me from her sight, she acted upon General Lee's admonition that a gentleman, or gentlewoman, "Can not only forgive, he can forget."

The Christian scriptures tell us that when Peter inquired unto Jesus how many times he must forgive his brother, Jesus replied "seventy times seven" (Matthew 18:22). My Grandmother forgave me and while I am certainly a humbler man for having sinned against her, I also believe that I am a stronger man for having forgiven and loved.

John said that "honor cannot exist beside dishonor." When I embrace my forgiving Grandmother, I greatly wonder of this is the case. To be permanently ostracized, albeit privately, from any community for a weakness of will is a terrible punishment. It is a punishment that I am not so sure that we as gentlemen can or should exercise.

Sincerely,
Keith E. Goretzka '83

Exercises Conducted

Cadets from the combined Army ROTC programs of Washington and Lee University and Lynchburg College trained under sub-freezing conditions in late March with the Tactics Committee, 80th Training Command of Virginia's 80th, "Blue Ridge" Division. The exercise, part of the continuing series of W&L's Total Army training efforts, involved cadets, Army Reservists, Regular Army cadre, Army National Guard training support, and DA civilians at the Fort Pickett, VA training site. The FTX, ominously code named "Winter Storm," involved several phases of training. Even the logistical and administrative aspects of the venture served to educate basic program cadets who had never before lived in military barracks, observed the requirements of a training schedule and weapons security, or partaken of Army "chow."

The actual training commenced on Saturday, March 27, at 4:30 a.m. when the entire contingent of 60 cadets formed for cadre-led physical conditioning. After calisthenics, a two mile run, and clean up, the now awake cadets filed into the 80th's field dining facility for breakfast. By 0730, twelve M113 armored personnel carriers (APC's) had transported the cadets to a field location where they commenced training under the veteran USAR instructors.

Squads of cadets rotated through training stations which included individual tactical skills, movement techniques, mechanized infantry squad drills, and even some tracked vehicle maintenance instruction. All of this was in preparation for the main events: night and day operations by a mechanized infantry unit, performing attacks and defense.

W&L's Cadet Ranger element mounted its APC and "led the way" for the force which would conduct delay and defensive operations. After the five tracks of the defenders had rumbled off, the attacking cadets mounted their vehicles and proceeded into "enemy territory." The engagement was punctuated with mounted and dismounted ambushes and fire-fights, attempts at bypass and envelopment, and sharp skirmishes employing fire and movement by both sides. The staccato bursts of automatic weapons, explosive simulators, smoke grenades, and the whine and roar of the vehicle engines all added to the realism.

The final phase of the weekend's training on Sunday was a practical one in which teams of cadets cleaned and cleared billets, cleaned rifles and machine guns, and learned the finer points of washing down M113's.

Hill Expresses Hope For SNU

by John Cleghorn

Basing his optimism on what he calls "triad" of support, Captain Charles Hill, the faculty adviser of the Lambda chapter of Sigma Nu, hopes that the fraternity will be reestablished before the former members graduate, a goal that he says is rarely accomplished among fallen fraternities.

The "triad," which Capt. Hill speaks of is made up of assistance from the University, the National chapter, and the generosity of Sigma Nu alumni.

"The University gives the fraternities just enough rope to either pull themselves up or hang themselves," maintains Hill in describing the latitude of respect between the school and the fraternities which Hill says has been fundamental in the reorganization of the fraternity.

Other assistance has come from a major fund drive by the alumni which is raising money to repair damage to the house outside of the November fire. Hill is optimistic that the national chapter insurance will pay for the fire damage which is just under $25,000. The present stipulation is that no one will live in the house until the damage is repaired.

Currently a recruiting team from the national chapter here in Lexington is interviewing students who are interested in the reorganization of the fraternity. Their approach is somewhat unique in that old members may be readmitted if any outstanding debts have been paid.

Although Hill is being transferred away from Washington and Lee in August, Dean of Fraternities Dan Murphy will appoint new faculty advisers to continue the rebuilding process.

The current target date for the reopening of the house is tentatively set for next spring though much work remains to be done before that can happen. The attitude for the recolonization is optimistic for those involved and Hill describes the house as one with, "impressive potential."

Students Go Abroad

During the next few weeks Washington and Lee students will be watching Shakespeare's plays being performed at Stratford, England, by the Royal Shakespeare Company, and studying French grammar in the shadow of the Cathedral of Notre Dame.

All that — and more — will occur as part of Washington and Lee's series of spring term abroad programs.

In all, five different groups of W&L students will be in Europe this month and next.

The first university group on the continent will be Washington and Lee's Glee Club, which left Saturday (April 10) for a nine-day tour of Germany.

The 35-member Glee Club, directed by Gordon Spice, performed three concerts during the tour, appearing at the Catholic University of Eichstatt, the Schlosskirche (Royal Church in the Old Castle) near Bayreuth, and the University of Bamberg.

In addition, Glee Club members visited Munich and Wurzburg during the visit.

Four Washington and Lee professors will be taking student groups to Europe for studies as part of the university's six-week spring term abroad programs.

George Ray, professor of English, and eight W&L students will be in England, where they will concentrate their studies on British drama in performance. About four of the six weeks will be spent in London. Students will live in a bed-and-breakfast hotel within walking distance of the University of London, University College of London, and the West End theatre district. In addition to regularly-scheduled seminars, the students will see numerous plays, including several by the Royal Shakespeare Company during their stay.

Two of the six weeks will be spent touring by mini-bus in various parts of England, Wales and Scotland.

Robert Youngblood, associate professor of German, will have 12 students in Germany during the spring term. Headquartered in Bayreuth where they will live in homes with German families, the students will receive instruction in Germany from both Dr. Youngblood and members of the University of Bayreuth faculty.

G. Francis Drake, professor of romance languages and 11 students will spend the spring term in France. The students will live in private homes in Paris and will attend classes in French, contemporary French theatre, and contemporary French art.

C. Westbrook Barritt, professor of romance languages, will have eight students in Spain for the spring term. The students will attend classes five days a week in Madrid where they will live in private homes.

Cleveland Named 'Review' Editor

Gaines Cleveland, a second-year law student at Washington and Lee University from Gulfport, Miss., has been named editor-in-chief of the "Washington and Lee Law Review" for the 1982-83 academic year.

The editorial board selected Cleveland and other members of the 1982-83 staff last week. All are second-year students in the School of Law at W&L.

The "Washington and Lee Law Review" is a legal periodical published by the students under the auspices of the School of Law to provide a medium for scholarly discussion of important legal problems. Student editors are chosen on the basis of scholarship and aptitude for legal research and writing.

Other editors of the 1982-83 "Law Review" are:

Lead Articles: Stan Barnhill from Roanoke and Diane Carey from Pittsburgh, Pa.

Research: Gordon Stewart from Portland, Maine.

Managing: John Bloxom from Salisbury, Md.

Executive: Rod Clement from Gulfport, Miss.; Drew

Demaray from Birmingham, Ala.; Catherine O'Connor from Torrington, Conn.; and Pamela Ryan from Cortland, N.Y.

Note & Comment: Tom Egan from Chevy Chase, Md.; John Fishwick from Roanoke, Leigh Ann Galbraith from Brookville, Pa.; Tom Gruenert from Billings, Montana; Pamela Hasenstein from Leominster, Mass.; William Higgs from Mountain Top, Pa.; Mike Krancer from Villanova, Pa.; Alan Munro from Morristown, N.J.; Dave Natkin from Lexington, Va.; and, Tom Rattray from Owensboro, Ky.

As a service to our readers, the Ring-tum-Phi will print letters to the editor. All letters must be either double-space typed or neatly printed. We will print no letters that are unsigned. The author should also include a phone number he can be reached at.

Due to space limitations, some letters may be held back for a week. The editor reserves the right to correct any grammatical mistakes. Any letter judged libelous by the Phi editorial staff will not be printed.

All letters should be addressed to the editor and can be mailed to P.O. Box 899, Lexington, Va. 24450, or can be dropped off at Carolle Chappell's office or the Phi office (Room 206) in the Student Center.

The deadline for all letters is 4 p.m. on the Monday before publication. No letters will be accepted after that time.

Improving Netters Face 'Challenge'

by David Stuart

"We played as well as we could," said Washington and Lee tennis coach Gary Franke of his team's effort on last week's Florida road trip.

The team won two matches against Eckerd (8-1) and Stetson (5-4) Colleges but dropped three matches to Emory (6-3), University of Central Florida (9-0) and Rollins (9-0). The team has never beaten Emory but has always played them immediately following exams.

In a match Tuesday against Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, the Generals took two matches by default but it wasn't enough as they lost 7-2. The match was played on fast-paced indoor courts that VPI used to their advantage. Franke said the Hokies' "kicking serves" on the fast courts gave the varsity added problems in adjusting to the new surface.

The team's record is now 6-13, but all of the losses, except that to Emory, have been to Division I or Division II teams. The important matches to decide the Old Dominion Athletic Conference ranking have yet to be played. The squad will face a tough Hampden-Sydney squad today and Lynchburg Friday on the road.

Franke said that Hampden-Sydney and Lynchburg are a "real challenge" and "we need to be on the top of our game" to beat both teams. Improvement, rather than just wins and losses, is what Franke measures progress with, and he saw it plus a few victories on the Florida trip.

Craig Cannon defeated Emory's Ed Ryan (ranked 20th nationally in Division III) 1-6, 7-6, 7-6, and split sets with all-American Craig Perry of Rollins before losing 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.

Wes Yonge, number two on the team, won a crucial second-set tiebreaker after dropping the first set 6-1 and went on to win in Washington and Lee's 5-4 defeat of Stetson College at DeLand, Florida.

Charlie Kalocsay and Jim Irwin (numbers three and four) played well but singles victories were scarce as each posted only one win.

Freshman Andy Haring (number five) continues to be a consistent winner as he won two hairpullers in split sets, 7-6, 4-6, 6-3, at Stetson and 3-6, 7-5, 6-4 at Emory. Classmate Stephen Bendheim suffered much the same fate as Kalocsay and Irwin in singles, but it was a different story in doubles.

The doubles pair of Haring and Bendheim won three big matches and had close losses to the University of Central Florida and Rollins.

Co-captain Thad Ellis

Baseball Snaps Slump

by Andrew P. Hoppes

The Washington and Lee baseball team broke out of a disastrous mid-season slump last week to win three league games before losing to nationally-ranked Lynchburg on Tuesday.

After losing two games to Hampden-Sydney and one to Eastern Mennonite, the Generals rebounded to destroy Mennonite 17-0 and Maryville twice, 5-3 and 5-4. While raising their league record to 4-5 at that point, W&L played three straight games without committing an error and raised their team batting average 30 points.

In the 7-6 and 4-3 losses to Hampden-Sydney, the Generals led both times late in the game before the Tigers rallied.

Coach Jim Murdock noted, "If we could have called back three or four pitches in those games we would have won."

The Generals finally ended their slump in the second game of a doubleheader with Mennonite after losing the opener 8-7. "We got a little irate and came out and bopped them," observed Murdock.

Sports

W&L played a near-perfect game in the nightcap, ripping 19 hits and getting shutout pitching from Jim Brockelman and Jim Stanley. Thad Ellis and Jody Harris crushed homers for the Generals. "Even the substitutes got a couple of runs against them," said Murdock. The squad also played well in their 5-3 win in the first game of the double header against Maryville. Rich Hachenberg pitched well in picking up the win.

In the second game of the doubleheader, the Generals held a solid 3-1 lead, but then made some costly mistakes to allow the Scots to tie the contest at 3-3. At that point, a heavy downpour forced suspension of the game until the next day.

However, the wait was worthwhile for W&L. After a Chris Cavalline double, a Jeff Haggerty single and a walk to Kevin Golden, Dave Warrenfeltz ripped a two-run single to give the Generals an exciting 5-4 win.

In Tuesday's 3-2 heartbreaking loss to Lynchburg, the Generals took a 2-0 lead but could not hold off a late inning rally by the Hornets, the perennial ODAC champion and currently ranked third in Division III.

Jody Harris started a two-run first inning for W&L with a sharp single to center. After a Thad Ellis walk, Mike Walsh forced him at second, but Lynchburg threw the ball away trying to get Walsh, allowing Harris to score. Jeff Haggerty knocked in the other W&L run with a groundout.

Lynchburg tied the score with single runs in the fifth and sixth innings off reliever Dave Randall. He had replaced starter Billy White, who left the game

Golfers 7th At Va. Tech

by B. Scott Tilley

While most of the student body relaxed over spring break at home or at the beach, the Washington and Lee golf team was facing a tough field in the Virginia Tech "Gobbler Classic" in Blacksburg, Va.

Led by seniors Titus Harris and Jim Kaplan, with 36-hole scores of 149, the team placed seventh out of the 15 teams entered.

Whit Kelly's 156, Del Agnew's 158, Bruce Blythe's 161 and Bill Alfano's 163 also helped the strong second-day performance, after the Generals were bogged in tenth place following the first day.

The Generals had suffered a two-and-a-half week layoff since defeating Bluefield College to raise their dual match record to 6-0, and Coach Buck Leslie felt that this "hurt the team in the first round at Tech. I was really pleased that we came around the second day. We shot the second lowest round the second day, which beat a lot of Division I teams."

The team now heads to Hampden-Sydney College Monday and Tuesday to compete in the ODAC tournament at Wedgewood Country Club in Farmville.

Coach Leslie sees this year's tournament as a free-for-all. "It's wide open because nearly every team has played well and played fairly even so far this season. I don't believe anyone will be able to run away from the rest of the field. It will be a close, well-fought tournament."

Fallon To Moonlight

Washington and Lee head football coach Gary Fallon has accepted the head coaching job with the Roanoke Valley Express of the American Football Association.

The new position will not, however, affect Fallon's status with W&L as the AFA season will be over by Aug. 28, when Washington and Lee football players report for practice.

Fallon, 42, has four weeks to recruit 40 players and prepare for the team's first game, an exhibition May 15 against the Virginia (Arlington) Chargers in Lynchburg. Their first regular season game will be on May 29.

A 1962 graduate of Syracuse, Fallon, who has a 20-20 record in four years at Washington and Lee, played with the Minnesota Vikings for one season and then spent two years in the Canadian Football League. Before coming to Lexington, he was an assistant coach at Princeton for six years.

Fallon's contract calls for him to receive a base salary of $2,500 plus 5 percent of the home gate receipts. There are some additional attendance and performance incentives in the contract.

Generally Speaking But What About The Other Game?

by G. Bruce Potter

Just in case you forgot, the Washington and Lee lacrosse team did play two games last week.

Oh, sure, everyone knows they lost to the University of Virginia 22-8 in Charlottesville on Sunday. But they also eased by the College of William and Mary in the historical town of Williamsburg last Tuesday by a count of 15-10.

After jumping out to a quick 3-0 lead early in the first period, it looked as though the Generals also forgot about a battered William and Mary squad and began looking ahead to Sunday's match-up with the Cavaliers.

The Indians came back to tie the score at three and then played W&L even until the Generals scored four consecutive goals to turn a slim 8-7 lead into a safe 12-7 advantage midway through the fourth stanza.

Yet, there was very little doubt as to which team was the best on this overcast, windy afternoon. The Generals virtually dominated the game at both ends of the field but made some very crucial execution mistakes that kept the contest close. Their domination is emphasized by the fact that they won 21 of 28 faceoffs and picked up 60 of 93 groundballs.

Poor passing by the Generals and some outstanding goaltending by Indian goalie Randy Duke also helped keep the game a game, if that's what you want to call it. For example, early in the fourth quarter, Barry Waterman broke clear down the middle and fired a point-blank shot at Duke, only to have the Indian goalie make an incredible save.

However, the ball remained in the Generals' possession and Waterman found himself virtually alone in the middle again, but dropped a centering pass, and the Indians recovered the ground ball.

Washington and Lee goalie Ware Palmer twice tried to be a hero himself by keeping the ball and racing down the field. The first time, he was preparing to take a shot from about ten yards when the ball was stolen from him from behind. The second time, late in the game, he didn't even make it to midfield before having the ball knocked out of his stick and the Indians score a goal before he could get back to the net.

Surprisingly, Washington and Lee also dominated in an area they don't usually dominate — the fans. Even though the game was in Williamsburg, there were at least as many W&L fans as William and Mary fans. Then again, how can you blame the William and Mary fans when their team has a 2-9 record?

But some of the Indian fans, aided by a couple of six-packs, became rather boisterous. Midway through the third quarter, with the Generals holding an 8-4 lead, one commented, "I wish W&L would hurry up and score. I predicted they would get 15 goals — in the first half."

Later, another fan gave Washington and Lee the name "W and H-ll."

After several consecutive Washington and Lee mistakes in the fourth quarter, the same fan yelled, "You guys don't stand a chance against Virginia on Sunday!"

To which, a W&L fan retorted, "At least we play Virginia."

Heels Come To Town

by John Harrison

Defending champion and top-ranked North Carolina will come to town this Saturday to take on the Washington and Lee lacrosse team at 2 p.m. on Wilson Field.

Coach Willie Scroggs' explosive team features several All-Americans, including midfielders Doug Hall and Kevin Griswold, attackman Mike Burnett and junior goalie Tom Sears.

The Generals anticipate that a large turnout, perhaps in excess of 5,000, will be on hand to support W&L as it challenges the number one team in the nation. Two years ago, the Tarheels attracted 6,000 fans to Wilson Field for a 7-5 victory over the Generals.

W&L head coach Jack Emmer acknowledges that it will take a strong combination of vocal support from the student body as well as a supreme effort by his team to keep pace with UNC. "It's not often you get to play the top team on your own field. Hopefully, we'll get a good crowd. We're looking forward to giving it our best shot," said Emmer.

Over the break, the Generals had matches at William and Mary Tuesday and Virginia Sunday.

W&L was a heavy favorite against the William and Mary Indians and put 51 shots on goal but nevertheless was held in check before the Generals notched the last two goals for a 15-10 win.

At Charlottesville, the third-ranked Cavaliers were in the favorite's role. The final margin (22-8, UVA) was not expected, however, especially in light of the intense rivalry between the two schools.

With Ray Guisto accounting for two of the first three goals, the Cavaliers led 4-0 after 12 minutes. The score was 10-1 six minutes into the second quarter, and things never got much better for W&L, whose record fell to 6-2.

At halftime, Virginia held a 12-2 bulge and U.Va. coach Jim (Ace) Adams gave goalie J.B. Meyer (seven saves) the rest of the afternoon off.

In all, 15 different players scored for the Cavaliers. The Guistos, Ray and Rick, each accounted for three goals. Matt Rainis, Mike Carvana, and freshman Jeff Nicklas had two apiece as U.Va. built its record to 5-2.

The Cavaliers excelled in every department, including shots (54-33), ground balls (63-46), only losing in faceoffs (18-16, W&L). The Cavs forced the Generals into numerous ballhandling mistakes, taking W&L out of its offense and leaving the Lexington contingent at Scott Stadium stunned.

There wasn't much for General fans to cheer about once Ray Guisto opened to scoring at 4:08 with a hard, rising 25-footer. Virginia had exceptional success beating W&L goalie Ware Palmer from long range.

Emmer recalled Palmer in favor of sophomore Phil Aiken four minutes into the second quarter when the count had already reached 9-1. Palmer came back to start the second half then left for good with six minutes to go in the game. He allowed 14 goals and was credited with nine saves.

At the other end of the field, it took a couple of excellent individual efforts to get the ball by Meyer. Rich Schoenberg converted a loose ball in front of the net into W&L's first goal. John Sancilio dodged his defender in the midfield for the second.

Sancilio and John Doub scored a pair of goals each for the Generals, but the Cavaliers' tough close defense held the W&L attack to unassisted goals by Lee Heimert and Mike Schuler. The team's leading scorer coming into the game, Rob Staugaitis, was limited to one assist.

Entertainment

S.A.B. Releases Schedule

The Student Activities Board announced this week its schedule for Springtime entertainment, which includes some bands that should be familiar to the Washington and Lee student body.

The Skip Castro Band, which played Tuesday night in the Cockpit, was the first group in the schedule. The Nighthawks, a popular rhythm-and-blues band from the Washington, D.C. area, will perform this Friday at the Pavilion. The Hawks had originally been scheduled to play Friday night on Wilson Field, but the S.A.B. has since decided to switch the concert to

Rue To Speak

Leonard Lee Rue III, the most published wildlife photographer in the United States, will present a slide-lecture on the white-tailed deer on Thursday, April 22, at the State Theatre in Lexington.

Rue's appearance is being sponsored jointly by the biology departments of Virginia Military Institute and Washington and Lee University.

The program begins at 7 p.m. and is open to the public free of charge.

Rue, who was forced to postpone a lecture appearance in October because of illness, is the author of 16 books, including "The Deer in North America." His talk will focus on deer management and problems and will highlight the life habits of the white-tailed deer — the breed that is common to the Rockbridge County area.

Zollman's.

Following the Nighthawks on Sat., April 24, will be the Convertibles. On Tues., April 27, the new wave band Four out of Five Doctors will play in the Cockpit. Finishing out the April schedule of entertainment will be The Deal, which will play in the Cockpit on Fri., April 30.

May's entertainment is highlighted by the Spring Weekend, which will be sponsored jointly by the S.A.B., the Interfraternity Council and the Class of 1983. Spring Weekend is scheduled for May 7-8.

Preceding the weekend are two concerts. On Tues., May 4, the Dynamic Upsetters and the Princeton Tigeressions will play in the Cockpit. N.R.B.Q. is scheduled to play on May 5, but a location for the concert has not been confirmed.

On May 7, Robbin Thompson will kick off Spring Weekend with a free concert at the Pavilion. The concert will be B.Y.O.B. On May 8, The Producers will hold a free concert following the lacrosse game with Hofstra. The Producers will play on the Upper Athletic Practice Field.

On Tues., May 11, entertainment shifts back to the Cockpit for a concert by the Good Humor Band. Two other concerts in the Cockpit will finish out the Spring schedule. The Monarchs are scheduled to play on Sat., May 15, while the Michael Guthrie Band is set to perform on Tues., May 18.

Private Art Collection On Display In Dupont

An exhibition of paintings, prints, and drawings from the private collection of Ralph Grant opened yesterday in the duPont Gallery on the Washington and Lee University campus.

The exhibition continues through May 9. DuPont Gallery is open to the public without charge weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., and Sundays from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Grant is a designer for the carpet division of Burlington Industries. He lives in Lexington.

Grant's collection includes works by internationally known artists as well as a series of works by Philadelphia artists and another group of works by artists from the Lexington area. "The show at duP will include several different groups: photographs, op-art, landscapes, and some figurative works," Grant explained.

"A show such as this is an excellent opportunity in that it opens a private collection up for public viewing and makes it possible to share the works with a much wider audience," Grant added.

This is the second exhibition in a series of annual shows based on the works from local and area art collectors. Last year works from the collection of Washington and Lee chemistry professor Keith Shillington were featured in the first such exhibition.

Public Speaking Professor Awarded Summer Grant

Dr. Halford R. Ryan, associate professor of public speaking at Washington and Lee University, has been awarded a research grant from the Maurice L. Mednick Memorial Fund for study this summer.

The Mednick Memorial Fund is administered by the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges (VFIC), a fund-raising consortium of 12 four-year private colleges in the state, including Washington and Lee.

Ryan will use his Mednick research grant to pursue studies at the Lyndon Baines Johnson Presidential Library in Austin, Texas.

He plans to conduct research into President Johnson's voting rights speech, which Johnson delivered to a joint session of Congress in 1965.

In addition to examining various drafts of the speech and the contributions of Johnson's speechwriters to the final product, Ryan will view videotapes to assess Johnson's delivery and will investigate reaction to the speech as indicated by mail received at the White House.

"Conducting research at the LBJ Presidential Library is a superb opportunity since it provides access to information not available anywhere else," said Ryan.

Ryan joined the faculty at Washington and Lee in 1970. A graduate of Wabash College with a master's degree and a Ph.D. from the University of Illinois, he has recently published two articles dealing with presidential addresses. In one, he examined the fourth inaugural speech of Franklin D. Roosevelt; in the other, he addressed Harry S Truman's 1951 speech in which Truman spoke of the dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The Mednick Memorial Fund was created in 1976 after the accidental death of a young Norfolk industrialist. His family and business associates established the fund to perpetuate his name and to recognize his own strong interest in higher education.

The VFIC administers the fund to encourage professional development of college teachers and improve their competence through grants for research and advanced study and to assist highly qualified, needy students in their upper-class years in college.

Dr. Roger B. Jeans Jr., associate professor of history at Washington and Lee, used a grant from the Mednick Fund for research in China last year.

Alum Donates $25,000

Washington and Lee University has received a gift of $25,000 from William M. France of Lancaster, Ohio, to establish an endowed scholarship fund in honor of W&L history professor Charles W. Turner.

France, a 1958 graduate of Washington and Lee, is president of WHOK, Inc., which operates WLOH/WHOK, the radio stations in Lancaster. He is a past vice president of Society National Bank in Cleveland.

Turner joined the Washington and Lee faculty in 1946. A native of Fredericks Hall in Louisa County, Va., Turner received his B.A. degree from the University of Richmond

IAPCP Taking Applications

The International Academy of Professional Counseling and Psychotherapy (I.A.P.C.P.) is now accepting applications for membership from highly qualified undergraduate and graduate students.

The Academy is a multi-disciplinary, international organization dedicated to the worldwide pursuit of excellence in counseling and psychotherapy. It numbers among its members many of the leaders and innovators within the counseling and psychotherapy professions.

On The Academy's Advisory Council are many internationally renown individuals such as Dr. Aaron Beck (cognitive therapy), Dr. William Glasser (reality therapy), Dr. William Masters (sex therapy), Dr. Thomas Gordon (parent effectiveness training), Dr. Albert Ellis (rational emotive therapy), Dr. Hans Eysenck (research and evaluation), Dr. William Kroger (hypnosis), Dr. Nathaniel Branden (biocentric therapy), Dr. Joseph Wolpe (behavior therapy), Dr. Harold Greenwald (psychoanalytic therapy), Dr. Arnold Lazarus (multi modal therapy), as well as many others.

Requirements for student membership include a minimum of 45 undergraduate credits, a superior academic record (usually indicated by a minimum of a B average) and appropriate faculty recommendations.

Student membership in IAPCP should be of particular interest and benefit to individuals considering a career in psychology, medicine, social work, guidance or related mental health or health care fields.

For additional information and application materials, please contact The Academy, Student Membership Division, 2036 Blairmore Road, Lexington, Kentucky 40502, U.S.A., (516) 546-6646.

in the third inning due to an injury.

In the eighth inning, Lynchburg got the winning run off Brockelman. A single, stolen base, and another single brought in the crucial tally.

W&L refused to fold, though, and mounted a threat against the tough Lynchburg pitching in the ninth. With runners at the corners and two outs, Haggerty smashed a sinking line drive into center that was caught to end the game.

The loss dropped the Generals to 4-6 in the ODAC. In order to have any chance of making the playoffs, they must win all their remaining league games.

W&L travels to Emory and Henry for a doubleheader tomorrow and to Lynchburg for a rematch on April 27. The ODAC Championships are slated for May 1 at Salem Municipal Stadium.

Clifford Talks To ROTC

Retired Army Col. Robert L. Clifford spoke to a class of Washington and Lee University military science upperclassmen recently.

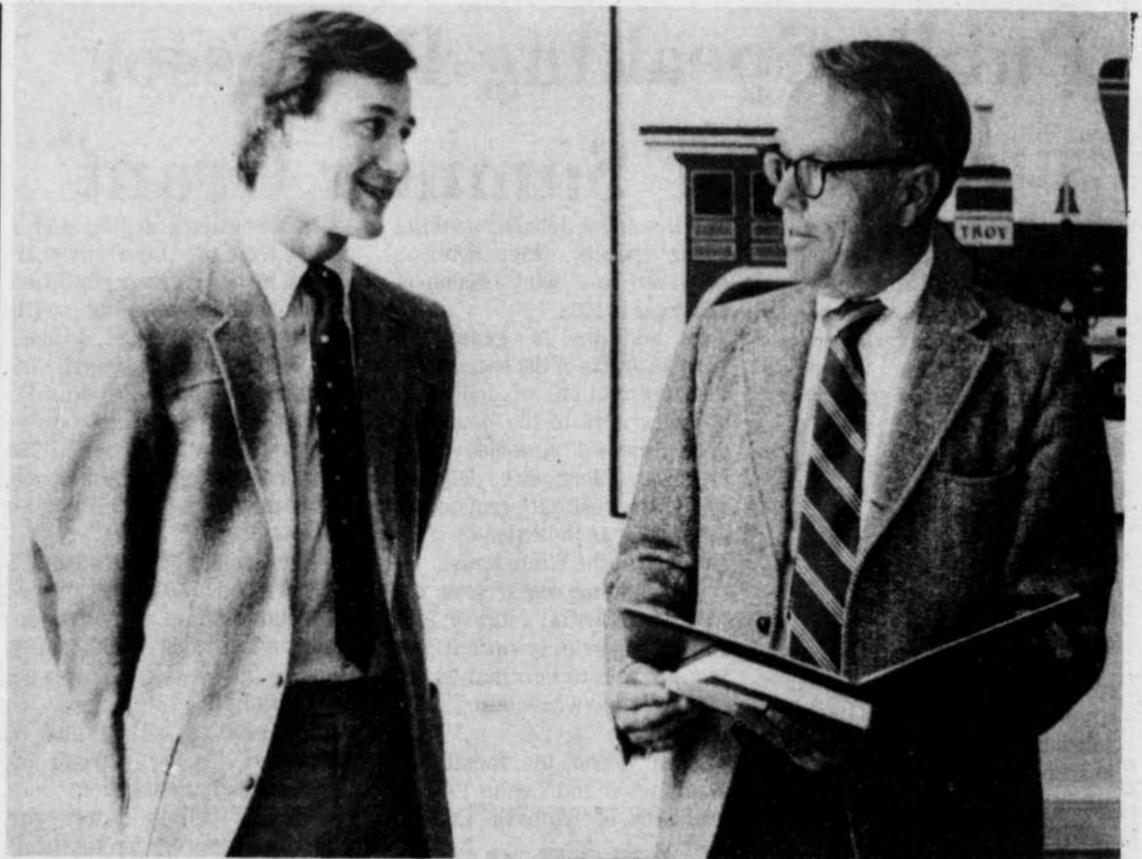

Clifford's lecture concerned the global balance of military power, spanning the issues of superpower confrontations, strategic and conventional weapons balances, economic warfare, and the ability of the Soviet Union to conduct "proxy wars" in the underdeveloped world.

Editorial Openings

The Publications Board is now accepting applications for the positions of Editor and Business Manager of The Ring-tum Phi and Calyx, and Editor of Ariel. Six copies of resumes should be placed in Carol Chappell's office in the University Center by 2 p.m., Wed., April 28. Interviews will begin on the following Monday.

Mr. & Mrs. Martin Given L-Burg Citations

Mr. and Mrs. James Bland Martin of Gloucester, Va., received the Lynchburg Citation Friday (March 26) from the Lynchburg Chapter of the Washington and Lee Alumni Association.

The citation is presented annually by Washington and Lee's alumni chapter in Lynchburg and is generally regarded as the most important honor a W&L alumni chapter can confer.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin were presented the citation "in grateful acknowledgment of the depth and enduring quality of their commitment to the achievement of the university's objectives."

Mrs. Martin served as a member of the Washington and Lee board of trustees from April, 1978, to last September. A past president of the Garden Club of Virginia, Mrs. Martin was praised for the "grace and gentility, vigor and vivacity" as well as the "singular effectiveness" she brought to the board.

Martin is a 1931 graduate of the W&L law school and is the retired founding partner of the Gloucester law firm of Martin, Hicks & Ingles. The citation referred to Martin's "willingness to serve whenever and wherever the best interests of his beloved alma mater are at stake..."

Last year's recipient of the Lynchburg Citation was Robert E. R. Huntley, Washington and Lee's president.

reported that copies of the magazine were distributed to fraternity houses, the freshmen dorms, and were sent to alumni presidents. Anderson also mentioned that the editors for next year had been chosen. John McGarry and Jay Robbins will return from this year's editorial staff and will serve with James Falk as editors-in-chief.

Vice-president Jim Averett suggested that the small deficiency expenses in magazine expenses could be covered by E.C. funds. The motion passed unanimously.

Myers also announced that law student Ken Terwilliger was the winner of the Law School Executive Committee elections for 1982-83 academic year.

PIE EATING CONTEST

On Saturday at half time of the lacrosse game vs. UNC, the Inter-Fraternity Council will sponsor the 4th Annual Pie Eating Contest. All proceeds from the event will benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.
