

Generals Tackle G.W. Tonight; Handlan Boosts Total to 1,970

Jay Is Third In National Scoring Race

The Generals of Washington and Lee will meet George Washington University in Washington, D. C., tonight in another Southern Conference battle. The Colonials dropped the Big Blue in a contest at the VMI Fieldhouse earlier in the season. The Comets will play their last game of the 1952 season when they travel to Morgantown, W. Va., to meet the University of West Virginia this coming Saturday.

Jay Handlan has boosted his total point record for his four years at W. and L. to 1,970 and has taken over third place among the leading scorers in all major college history. Handlan scored 28 points against the Roanoke Rebels Saturday night, as the Generals lost 82-77, to pass Sam Ranzino, of North Carolina State, and Tony Lavelli, of Yale, who had held third and fourth places respectively in the all time scoring. With two games remaining, Handlan has a good chance to pass the 2,000 mark when the Big Blue meets West Virginia on Saturday.

The Generals started out in fine style last Saturday night as they took the lead against the Roanoke Rebels and were out in front at the end of the first quarter, 25-18. They fell behind in the second quarter as the Rebels scored 25 points and took over the lead at halftime, 43-39. Fighting hard, the Gens pulled up even at 58-58 when the third period ended, but the Rebels slowly pulled ahead and finished the contest with a five-point margin.

Center Valalik, of the Rebels, was high scorer for the evening, with a total of 34 on 11 field-goals and 12 for 16 free-throw attempts.

Handlan Leads

For the Gens, it was Jay Handlan who led the scoring, racking up a total of 28 points on 11 field-goals and six for eight at the foul line. Ken Groenveld, freshman member of the Blue team, took second place scoring honors with a total of 10 points on four field-goals and two for two at the foul line. Charlie Top, Jack Osborne, Dave Hedge, and Jim Rich each got six points against the Rebels.

Jay Handlan was the victim of a leg injury during the Rebels' game, but it was termed as "not serious" and Handlan is expected to be in top shape for the game with George Washington tonight.

Batteries Rounding Into Shape For 22-Game Baseball Schedule

The Washington and Lee baseball batteries have been working for more than a week now, getting in shape for the coming season. Conditioning exercises have been the order from Capt. Dick Smith, coach of the squad. About 11 pitchers have been reporting for practice with three catchers. Very little throwing has taken place, but all have gone through a great deal of running and calisthenics.

Returning from last year's squad are pitchers Jack Eubanks, Bill Mauck, and Tyson Janney, all letterman. Brian Shanley and Steve Schlossman will be up from last season's frosh team, while about six freshmen round out the list.

Arnold Back

Bay Arnold will be back at the catcher's position again this season and will be aided in his chores by Warren Moody and Don Weaver as soon as the two finish spring football practice. Moody was catcher for last year's frosh nine, while this is Weaver's first baseball season at Washington and Lee.

Capt. Dick stated that the pitching staff will be better than average with men like Eubanks, Mauck, and Janney carrying most of the burden, but the factor deciding whether W. and L. will have a good overall team will be the hitting of its members. Last season, Smith went on to say, the only three hitters the team had were Bay Arnold, Dute Agnor, and Dave Waters. Agnor graduated last season, and Smith is looking for a man to fill his place both as a fielder and as a hitter.

22 Games

The Generals will have a 22-game season on the diamond this year with one single-day, double-header with West Virginia to be played here on Apr. 12. This has been done due to the distance between the two schools and the difficulty of playing a home-and-home series. The season will open with a home game with Massachusetts Institute of Technology on Mar. 25.

The Southern Conference is divided into the Northern and Southern divisions for baseball, with W. and L. falling into the Northern Division along with West Virginia, George Washington, Maryland, VMI, VPI, Richmond, and William and Mary. The Southern Division is made up of the nine schools in the S.C. which have

Wildcats Upset General Matmen With Default

Washington and Lee's matmen came from a 12-5 deficit to take a 14-12 lead going into the heavy-weight match, only to lose that and the contest to a visiting Davidson squad, 17-14, last Friday night in the Doremus Gymnasium. The Generals' Len Winslow was forced to default the heavyweight class because of an injury and the forfeit cost W. and L. their second straight wrestling defeat. The match definitely proved to be an upset as the Generals were favored over the fighting Wildcats.

In the 123-pound class, Howie Davis of W. and L. easily defeated Davidson's Murray, 7-0. The second match, the 130-pound class, came somewhat of a surprise, however, as Paul Weill was quickly pinned by Gene Craeen of the Wildcats. Sipple of the Generals and Reed of Davidson fought to a 2-2 draw in the 137-pound class.

In the 147-pound class, the Wildcats' Morely Vial and Watty Bowes were both running up high point scores when Vial pinned Bowes in 1:10 of the third period. This gave Davidson its widest margin of the night, 12-5.

The Generals then picked up three quick decisions, as Fred Staunton outwrestled Davidson's Buxton 10-6, in the 157-pound over Andrews in the 167-pound

GENERALIZING

By JAY GROSSMAN

My attention has been called to a letter written by Beth Clark to the editor of The Ring-tum Phi and printed on page four of last Friday's issue. Mrs. Clark voices her belief that the sportsmanship displayed by the Washington and Lee basketball team in the games with West Virginia and Roanoke "were the worst display . . . that has ever graced the court of any college anywhere."

Although the Roanoke game was possibly somewhat rougher than was necessary, I do not believe that the same was true of the West Virginia contest. I believe that Beth Clark was referring, as far as the West Virginia game was concerned, to the injury of Mark Workman. Mrs. Clark, basketball is no game for someone who is afraid of fighting for the ball. It gets rough under those baskets, and no rules can completely cut out that roughness. Occasionally players get hurt in any game. Many of the basketball fans who watched the West Virginia game and know the game of basketball said that it was one of the best contests they had seen all season. That night, they said (and this I was told personally by a student from Duke University), W. and L. looked like one of the better teams in the Southern Conference. The game was as clean as it could have been, I believe, and I would hesitate before I accused anyone of intentionally hurting another player before I was sure of what I was saying. I am of the opinion that you are not sure.

As far as the Roanoke game is concerned, certain factors added to the roughness of the contest. In the last few minutes of any basketball game, no matter where played, things get rough, but although I regret saying it, the officials let this game get out of hand. I do not put the blame on Coach Scotty Hamilton, and I feel that you have done him a great injury by stating that he "lacks the ethics and any sense of honor to say nothing of sportsmanship." Scotty was an All-American basketball player for that same West Virginia team against which you say he "condoned and even encouraged" unsports-
