Elrod nomination retracted, Landolphi new W&L president

By MIA WALLACE
Twist Champion of the Phi Staff

In an unprecedented action, the Washington and Lee University Board of Trustees announced yesterday that they have "changed [their] minds" about choosing John W. Elrod as University president. John Wilson's replacement will be none other than "Sexpert" Suzi Landolphi.

In a press release the trustees explained this unexpected change of plans. "Washington and Lee students are concerned with the relationship between themselves and the administration. They believe their student autonomy is being threatened. We want them to know that we understand their Generation X angst. We want the students to know that we're in touch, that we're...how do you say...cool cats. With this in mind, Landolphi seemed the ideal choice. She loves them crazy kids."

Landolphi's acceptance speech was originally scheduled to be held at Lee Chapel, but in a nod to the affection W&L students have for tradition, moved her appearance to Evans Dining Hall at the last minute. Landolphi stated that it was "way cool" to have the honor of holding an office originally held by Robert E. Lee. She said that she has

"lots of plans" for Washington and Lee. Landolphi plans to officially change Michelle Richardson's title to Dean of Fun so students won't have to learn her proper title. She then hopes to team up with Richardson to start a series of Condom Coffeehouses. Landolphi has already begun plans to convert Lee's former office in the basement of Lee Chapel to a branch of her chain of stores condom stores, Condomania.

The response of Washington and Lee students has varied. Although Evans Dining Hall was packed with students eager to hear Landolphi's acceptance speech, some students were unhappy with the announcement. When asked his opinion about the Landolphi presidency, Spectator editor Allen Gillespie said, "What? No, no, it can't be. Tell me you're kidding."

In an interview with the Phi, Elrod stated that he was "fine with Landolphi's taking the job." Elrod has chosen not to return to his previous position as Dean of the College. He instead plans to take over the presidency of Southern Virginia College for Women in a glorious and bloodless coup d'etat. Elrod says that working at SVCW will be a pleasant change of pace.

"No more whining about tradition!"

he explained, "Mimi and I can just relax and ride horses."

Elrod does, however, have more plans than just horseback riding. He says that the first item on his agenda is to officially change the name of the school to Sem. Elrod said, "Sem will fit much better on sweatshirts than Southern Virginia College for Women. Besides, it's shorter and our students will have a much easier time remembering it, plus by the time they graduate most should be able to spell it."

The trustees have accepted Elrod's resignation and have already announced his replacement as Dean of the College. Paul "Pee-Wee Herman" Reubens will take Elrod's office at the beginning of next year's school year.

When asked by the Phi to comment on his new position, Herman answered, "I know you are, but what am I?"

Herman also expressed excitement to be reunited with an old friend from the time he was in jail. In a completely unrelated story, the mere mention of which demonstrates questionable journalistic integrity, Herman and Phi convict/Executive Editor Dan Odenwald were cellmates.

Said Herman, "Coming to Lexington will give Dan and me a chance to catch up on old times. Old? That's the secret word!"

You're outta here!

Washington and Lee's Executive Committee introduced the new mass honor trial in Lee Chapel Thursday. All students were instructed to stand while the charges against them were read by special guest prosecutor, Bob Tompkins. After booting all the students suspected of committing a honor violation, Tompkins was found guilty of misuse of funds and a cocky attitude. His diploma was revoked. Current freshman EC rep Z. Taylor Shultz said he hopes to fill Tompkin's shoes someday.

Plagues hit Lex, arrest of Christ last fall term believed to be cause

By DAUGHTER OF A PREACHER MAN
Phi Member Who Feels God

The water fountains and bathroom sinks at the Lexington Police Department were emitting a red substance one police officer said was "blood" yesterday in the fourth of a series of possibly related incidents which began last fall.

"Honey, y'all know we just can't drink blood," said chief of police and friend to women everywhere Bruce Beard. "It doesn't get your hands real clean, either, you know what I mean?"

The incident occurs several days after swarms of unidentified flying and hopping insects filled the cells and offices of the police station. A convict who was arrested in a completely unrelated incident, said the insects ate all his delicious prison food.

"It was bad enough when they locked me up with that horrible scary person, Dan Odenwald, but then the locusts ate my eggs," said Jeffrey Dahmer. "I mean, a man's gotta eat, you know?"

It was unclear whether or not Dahmer actually enjoyed the bloody water.

Police analysts, working closely with Washington and Lee alumnus Pat Robertson, say these incidents may be linked to last fall's arrest of "Eric" Christ.

In a completely unrelated aspect of this story, Christ spent the night in jail with Dan Odenwald, future Phi Executive Editor and butt of Prof. Jennings' jokes.

"I guess it goes to show that you shouldn't mess around with our Lord," said Robertson, who added that he would be asking for funds on his weekly television broadcast to restore the "Hall o' Pedestrian Safety Plaques" which was mostly destroyed by the insects when they built nests among them.

Goatee said he was unsure about what steps to take.

"I mean, honey, in Egypt and all, I would have just let the people go," said Mustache. "But, honey, I don't have any slaves, and I've gone to confession and all."

A local minister called the incident "plagues."

"It's all there in the Word," he said. He cited the recent incident in which all the power was cut off to the entire city of Lexington, except the Sigma Nu fraternity house and the Graham-Lees dormitory, for three days. "Read your

Trustees vote to force ALL to live on campus

By NELSON M. QUIRKE
Phi Staff Writer

Starting next fall, all Washington and Lee students will be required to live in university housing full time.

W&L's Board of Trustees passed the universal housing requirement earlier this afternoon by a unanimous vote, then stamped their feet all at the same time, causing serious structural damage to the foundation of the James G. Leyburn Library. Dennis Manning, who will fill the newly created position of Czar of Freshman, Sophomore, Junior, Senior, Law School, Hill Dogs and Residence Life, said the requirement will take effect beginning next year.

The policy will destroy the local real estate market and will free up rental spaces in nearly every leased building in Lexington. Fraternity men will continue to live in fraternity houses, but the Board of Trustees also unanimously voted that they wish they could force them to live in Gaines Hall.

Manning said the policy will create a more unified housing experience. Junior Andrew Olmem disagreed.

"Once again the administration has decided to suppress the students' independence that has made W&L famous."

Because there is not enough housing for all students currently available,

The Ring-tum Phi booted from campus after 97 years for violation of White Book

By THE GIMP
Phi "Crippled Phat" Boy

The Executive Committee forced The Ring-tum Phi to stop publishing after this issue for violating section OPPKIBHJKY of the White Book by reporting on the mass honor trial held in Lee Chapel Thursday.

Phi Executive Editor Sarah Gilbert, was quoted as saying, "The Ring-tum What? I've never heard of any such publication."

EC President Kevin Webb said he regretted forcing the Phi off campus.

"I'm sorry to see them go, especially since they did such a good job exposing the misuse of funds by former EC President

Bob Tompkins. "However, they broke the rules and they must pay."

In addition to closing the Phi, Webb kicked all current members out of school.

Dan Odenwald was the only staff member who could be reached. This reporter spoke to him in Lexington City Jail. He was there on an unrelated charge. He said he plans to appeal the EC's decision.

Section OPPKIBHJKY of the White Book says that no campus publication can publish any details of honor proceedings.

Since the Phi published a list of the students removed from school, the charges against them, and the names of their pets, there was little question of their guilt.

W&amp;L students assaulted by Lex youths, police arrest suspects

By AMY FISHER
Phi Staff Slut and Gun-Toter

Washington and Lee students have always considered Lexington to be some sort of Utopia, where violent crime is not possible. On Friday, March 17, this vision was proven to be just an illusion.

That night, two Washington and Lee students were accosted on their way home from a party. Three Lexington residents, believed to be students at Rockbridge County High Schools, harassed and attacked the students using a slingshot, a pea-shooter, and several sticks.

According to the W&L students, their attackers stopped them in front of Sharks on Nelson Street. They began by calling them names such as "Dummy," "Puke Face," and "Dork." When the victims tried to ignore the taunts, their harassers revealed their weapons and demanded beer. When the students told their attackers that they had no beer, only a half-filled flask, the scene turned violent. According to the two victims, their attackers attempted to swing the sticks at them, used the slingshot to attempt to hurl small pebbles at them, and shot peas at them through their straw. After approximately two minutes of fighting, one of the attackers noticed that it was past their curfew and the three left, presumably to go home.

One student was hit in the back of the neck with a pea and was treated at the infirmary with Sudafed and Extra-Strength Tylenol, and a year's supply of birth control pills. The other sustained no serious injuries.

"I was terrified," said one of the victims. "Sure they were only sticks, but you don't understand. They were really big sticks. I mean, really big." His companion shared his fear.

"If you've ever been the victim of a flying pea, you know how I feel. It smarts, it really does."

The two students also voiced reservations about going out at night in the future.

One of them said, "It really changed the way I feel about Lexington. It's just not safe. I don't think I'll be walking around much more after dark, unless there's like, a really good band playing. Or if they have Natural Light."

Three teenagers were arrested Saturday morning and were taken to Rock-bridge County Jail, where they shared a cell with The Ring-tum Phi felon/future Executive Editor Dan Odenwald.

Odenwald said, "Yeah, they were pretty shady. Hey, what the hell are you doing writing about my arrest in the paper? That doesn't have anything to do with the story at all."

Washington and Lee head of security Mike Young advises W&L students to be careful when they are out after dark.

He advises students to avoid poorly lit areas, to try not to walk past Sharks, to walk in groups, and to wear turtle-necks.

Young said, "There's no sense in another student sustaining a pea-shooter injury like that. Remember, Lexington can be a dangerous place. Be careful and watch out for that Dan Odenwald."

Dean of Fun finds funk with Clinton

By LET ME SET YOU UP
Phi Match Maker

As the strains of Harry Connick Jr.'s "A Wink and a Smile" rolled through her University Center office around 5 p.m. one Friday evening, Michelle Richardson readied for yet another night on the town in Metro-Lex.

"I just haven't had time to think since I was on that Dating Game show," Richardson said. "I have men calling me at all hours of the day and night, trying to convince me that they're Mr. Right."

Richardson, however, has no desire to change her name to "Michelle Richardson-Right." As 5:03 p.m. rolled around, a familiar face showed at her door.

"Hi, Georgie!" she said. "Dosen't the pink jumpsuit flatter his eyes, Sarah?"

Ever since Michelle Richardson and George Clinton met during Richardson's appearance on Washington and Lee's would-be equivalent to "The Love Connection," starring Washington and Lee's would-be Chuck Woolery (or maybe that guy on "Studs"), she has been sleepless in Lexington. Weekend trips to Tahiti, or even the Mothership, evenings jamming with the Parliament Funkadelic, or just hanging around thrillin' or watching PCU on video, it has all been, in Richardson's own words, "kinda fun."

Richardson remembers that fateful day when she met the man of her dreams.

"I was on that 'Dating Game' thing," she said. "I had to choose between the Bachelor #1, Bachelor #2, and Bachelor #3. I chose #2 and the rest has been one big party."

Richardson said she chose Clinton because she liked his answer to the question, "What is your favorite body part?"

Clinton answered, with a groovin' lilt to his voice, "I want to do it to you in your earhole."

Richardson said she does not regret turning down the other two choices, who were Professor of History Jefferson Davis Futch and sophomore Chris Wick.

"They didn't have any good answers," she said. "Bachelor #1 just kept raving about how he would treat me just like Queen Victoria, whatever that means, and Bachelor #3 couldn't stop talking about how much he hated funk music, school spirit, and student activities."

Clinton says he likes Richardson so much because she's "truly a ***** spacechild-I just ***** about her."

When he heard her voice, Clinton said he had a "***** good ***** vibe" about Richardson.

"***** ***** ***** ***** *****" he said.

Richardson isn't sure yet how dating George Clinton will change her lifestyle. "There's only so much I could really change anyway. There aren't any places where you can get feathered extensions put in your hair in a place like Lexington." Richardson does admit that Clinton (or "My little funk muffin," as she calls him) has had some effect on her lifestyle. "I've been eating a lot of Lee-Hi cottage cheese. It's ***** funktastic, man!"

Clinton, the P-Funk God

Trustees decide all students should live in Gaines or Woods Creek

several students will live in newly created quarters beneath Lee Chapel, on the top floor of Lee House, and in a special "tent city" to be constructed on Wilson Field.

"The new 'tent city' will be named 'Wilsonville' to honor our departing president, John D. Wilson," said Manning.

"There may be confusion about the name, but let's face it, every fire hydrant here is named after somebody. "It was bound to happen sooner or later."

Asked how he felt about the naming of the new facility, retiring President John D. Wilson replied, "I'm deeply honored?"

According to Manning, the universal requirement may raise up to $800,000 of additional funds.

"Before students react badly, they should ask themselves just how many little faux-metal alumni dedicatory plaques $800,000 can buy," said Manning.

Junior Andrew Olmem disagreed. "Once again the administration has decided to suppress the students' independence that has made W&L famous."

Manning said he is of the opinion that although there has been "some scattered student opposition," the policy will be in the best interests of W&L's future.

Manning said that the new policy is comparable to four-year housing requirements at other universities. He said that it is rare for students to have the freedom and flexibility of living where they want to live for two years.

"Before the Wall came down, not only university students, but ordinary citizens, had almost no say about where they lived."

"They just lived where they were told, and they never complained. I expect no less of W&L's students," Manning said.

Junior Andrew Olmem disagreed. "Once again the administration has decided to suppress the students' independence that has made W&L famous."

Pearl Jam rejoices as they find out SAB contracted them.

SAB brings Pearl Jam to W&L

by LUDWIG VAN HALEN
Phi Music Reporter

The Student Activities Board has announced Pearl Jam will play the Student Pavillion March 31 in an attempt to convince students that it actually does have a clue when it comes to selecting bands.

Pearl Jam is currently touring in northern Virginia and was looking for a small, conservative, and generally backward college to play. "Although it's not out normal fare, it sounded like the description fit, so we went for it," said SAB Entertainment Director Drew Denbo.

Wayne Newton was also touring northern Virginia and gave Pearl Jam a run for its money for the SAB contract.

Students "strongly urged" their friendly SAB members to vote for Pearl Jam.

"Personally, I wanted to book Wayne Newton for the March concert, but the death threats influenced my decision in favor of Pearl Jam," said Denbo.

The SAB has been criticized in the past for its less than popular decisions regarding choosing bands. "I think the final straw was when they booked New Kids on the Block," said junior Kiki Moronos. "I mean, I liked them when I was young, but it's different now."

Senior Biff Lohser agreed. "Pearl Jam or Wayne Newton? Even though Wayne Newton is related to "Wayne" Night Owl Wayne, Pearl Jam kicks," said Lohser. The student body demanded the SAB take a moral inventory of itself in an effort to mainstream their attitudes toward music.

After an extensive review of its internal working structure that involved two tons of chocolate pudding, several barrels of whip cream, and a life-size poster of Roseanne Barr (excuse me, Arnold. Wait didn't they get a divorce?), the SAB emerged reorganized and invigorated.

"It was a lot like fraternity initiation, kinda of scary, kinda messy, and really gooeey," said SAB member Kris Swick. In a completely unrelated and separate incident, sophomore Dean Alanen was arrested Saturday night for being drunk in public.

He spent the night in jail with Jesus Christ who was visiting his little-known brother, Vinnie, serving time for grand theft auto. Pearl Jam was excited about the concert.

"Michael Stipe of REM said W&L was one of the best concerts they played, so we decided to give it a shot," lead singer Eddie Veddar said.

The SAB vowed to make a concerted effort to try to lure more attractive bands for W&L's listening pleasure. "If it turns out half as well as REM, then we should be doing great," said Denbo.

The spontaneous poetics of a Phi editor

This is an editorial about everything, about life, about God and the beatnik bothavista generational explosion of love, freedom, deep thought, poetry and everything good about the world. This is about dollar mugs from a vitamin manufacturer full of good, cheap wine and bottles of dark beer late in the night, smuggled in and out in backpacks, coat pockets, anything. This is about Biblical references mixed happily with sexual connotations until we wonder which is more holy. This is about DJDJ and deep discussions about nothing for hours. This is about making decisions, important decisions, late late at night at wits end and having them be the basis for the way 3000 people see me. Life, you know, is short and will ultimately end in happiness if you live it right. This is how I see it. God is there, there for you if you will just listen to him late at night and sometimes when you lie out in the sun alone with only the distant sounds of humanity to remind you of the world. This is what I have learned at Washington and Lee: respect the South, respect and understand that alcohol can be a benefit, you can learn to drink socially, or you can learn alcoholism, either one can come from a four- or five-year stint at the Grand Old School of the South. Jack Kerouac was all right and all wrong, had it right about meditating on the world, knew how to write a sentence like none you've ever seen, but he wasn't successful the way I want to be, the way this school has taught be how to be. I've learned the value of conservatism and a well-placed word of praise. Learned to flatter without lying, learned to tell the truth without pissing everyone off. Learned to be a lady when I could, learned to be hard-edged when I had to. And I have more patience than the day is long, than the night is cold, than — but you know the story has to start at the beginning, not at the end, and this is really the beginning, a beginning I have been waiting not-so-patiently for years, almost here, thanks W&L, thanks Robert E. Lee, you will have made it happen.

So I have earned what I could not buy, and maybe I will be the better for it. Maybe we will all have been the better for it. Maybe I made a difference.

But I never stopped loving. I'm the only one, but I never stopped, not even...and that is the reason I have gained from Washington and Lee what I could have gained nowhere else, given here what I could have given nowhere else, this is the reason, this is the right way to understand the world, or at least I hope.

(This is beat. You're not supposed to understand it all. Or any of it, for that matter. Just be, just listen to the rhythms of spontaneous thought. The best writing is done in a trance, the pre-Raphealites knew it, the religious bards knew it, Kerouac knew it.)

Quote of the Week...

"The best way to understand the rhythms of humanity is through the unalterable state of the universe late at night with several shots of Old Elijah Craig under your belt."

No one said this. It just sounded cool. But, hey, you can pretend you said it if you like.

Alex waxes almost poetic in an attempt to parody the practically un-parody-able

FAR MIDDLE Alex Christensen

Some people might think it's easy to parody yourself. I mean, comedy isn't really that hard, when you get down to brass tacks. As Dick Van Dyke told Richie's second grade class, "Comedy is the art of the unexpected." He demonstrated this by leaving the room and walking back in, then tripping. Then he, like, acted like a tight-rope walker except he was really right there on the little raised platform, and everybody knew that if he fell, he wouldn't fall very far. Boy, those second-graders were laughing like crazy. But then, they were being paid to...

So anyway, the point is, it shouldn't be very hard to come up with an amusing few paragraphs to lighten your miserable hearts, now full with the knowledge that you'll soon be leaving little Lexington and heading to exotic locales throughout the Southeast and Europe.

But nooooooo. That would be too easy. See, the thing is, I'm a little sick right now. Every time it gets to be good weather, I come down with fits of sneezing and coughing and term papers due. It's almost enough to make me believe in divine justice, if God was like, a real spiteful old codger who likes to watch good people suffer.

And now, a short poem, composed when I was eleven years old:

The angry crowd grew silent,
The officer took me away,
All because I painted the mayor in a little lingerie.

That's right, I was writing social satire when I was just a cute, little boy.

But why include it in your parody column? you ask. First, to show off the fact that I knew how to pronounce "lingerie" when I was eleven. But basically it's an excuse. I've been writing non-stop since I was eleven, and now, well, I just need a little break.

Say, I could do what I do on my popular radio show, "The Alex Christensen Program," currently broadcast on 91.5 FM WLUR Lexington from midnight to 2 a.m. every Friday night—no, not rock fads, no, not my well-worn Reagan impression—no, this time I mean the amazing new technological breakthrough called Interactive Song Search (ISS). This process is so high-tech that I can't fully explain it to you unless you've taken some advanced computer science and electrical engineering courses, but I'll try to give you a brief idea of how it works.

The deejay (stay with me here, I know the jargon can get confusing) puts in a CD and explains that the ISS is about to begin. Then he will hit PLAY on the CD player and listen to the first song, along with the teeming audience of rock fans. They are trying to find the song the deejay wants to hear that he doesn't know the name of, but he does know what album it's on. When a member of the audience thinks that the deejay has found the song he wanted to hear, that member yells out, "That's it!" Unfortunately, the process is still a bit rough, since the deejay is the only one who really knows what he wants, and he can't really hear people when they yell out, but...uh...think of the technology! Breathtaking, ¿no?

So, see, my idea is, I'll just start on a particular parody idea, and then when I think of another one, I'll just move on, and before we know it, the column will be done!

This week, my column will be about Pedro Wilson, the governor of California. I believe I have revealed here before that he and his compadre, Miguel Huffington, are really illegal aliens sent here to take over the government and drive first California, then the world, into bankruptcy and despair. Now, Pedro has come one step closer to accomplishing that goal, forming a presidential exploratory committee into whose accounts he can funnel his food stamp money and welfare checks. It's a heinous plot, and since I'm from California, it's my duty...

Y'know, the basic problem with Pat Buchanan is, he's a liberal panderer. That's right, you heard me. Pat Buchanan has sold out his loyal supporters and moved into the camps of the left, abandoning we good protectionist, isolationists without so much as a (Sarah Gilbert, Phi Executive Editor: "This column better be entertaining...or it's your a**!")...

I have a bad feeling about Phil Gramm. Ever since he announced that he was running for president, it seems like I've had a lot less money in my pocket. I remember this little mini-Depression started exactly the day after Gramm announced. Sure the stock market hit 4000 about that time, but, not by coincidence, that's also when I put a five-dollar bill in the change-making machine in the Graham-Lees laundry room and only got four quarters back. Imagine what might happen if Gramm were elected to the White House...

If there were any justice in this country, Cecil Andrus would already be President. I lived in Idaho for five years while he was the governor. While he had been President Carter's Secretary of the Interior, his Republican replacement had signed a devil's deal with the U.S. government allowing them to store nuclear waste at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory in Blackfoot. Andrus fought the ruling in court, lost, then personally stopped every shipment at the border on the grounds that the trucks transporting them were unsafe. He once turned back a truck because the light bulb in the glove box when I put a five-dollar bill in the change-making machine in the Graham-Lees laundry room and only got four quarters back. Imagine what might happen if Gramm were elected to the White House...mpartment was burnt out. This is not a man who would bother consulting the UN about invading Haiti...

Good night, folks! Thank you! I'm here every other Friday!

...when I put a five-dollar bill in the change-making machine in the Graham-Lees laundry room and only got four quarters back. Imagine what might happen if Gramm were elected to the White House...

Weaver: The man behind the Dream

GREEN LAND

Betsy Green

It was a dark and stormy night. The time had come for my interview with Richard Weaver. He arrived at our rendezvous point behind the cafeteria at Hollins College. He was wearing a sequined jacket with an excessive amount of zippers and one glove. After the Secret Service cleared away, our interview began.

Me: Which Jackson is your favorite and why?

RW: Rebbie, because everyone pronounces her name wrong.

Me: Kind of like our readers will?

RW: That's Ree-BEE.

Me: What's the deal with the cowboy boots?

RW: They're my way of expressing my Southern (Florida) heritage.

Me: I've noticed you usually don't wear socks. Do you wear socks with the boots?

RW: No. I like my feet to bond with my footwear to give that natural feel.

Me: Your hair: explain.

RW: It just grows there. I comb it sometimes...

Me: Do you have any styling tips for me?

RW: Use a brush with, um, bristles. And duck sauce! Just kidding. (Laughs aloud.)

Me: Is there anything special you sleep with at night?

RW: My picture of Sophia Loren. She's so hot! Kind of like the future Mrs. Richard Weaver, Lynda Carter.

Me: What supermodel is your favorite?

RW: Miss Crawford and I choose not to discuss our personal life.

Me: As a supermodel, does she have any super powers?

RW: Miss Crawford and I choose not to discuss our personal life.

Me: Aside from having dinner with me at our Xi Pi Xi semiformal, what was the best date you've ever had?

RW: Any time the girl, like, gives me stuff. Merchandise is so key.

Me: Who was the first girl you had a crush on?

RW: Tammy Meads! I was eleven. She was tall, taller than me. That was pretty much the appeal.

Me: How'd that work out?

RW: I'm not married or anything.

At least not in this country.

Me: What 's the biggest mistake you ever made? And it better not have anything to do with the Xi Pi Xi semiformal.

RW: Being nice to the Trident.

Me: Bitter, Snookums?

RW: No. I'll just give them my next album on eight track.

Me: What do you carry with you in your backpack?

RW: My secret key to life, my computer science book; my anthology of credit card statements; quills for writing; autographed copies of For W&L I Yell... just in case somebody wants one.

Me: Could you just call up George Clinton and say, "Hi, George. It's me. What's up?"

RW: He doesn't have a phone in his house. We speak telepathically. He's feeding me the answers right now.

Funkalicious, man.

Me: Do waitresses at Lee-Hi ask you for your autograph?

RW: No, my phone number.

Me: What women's clothing do you find sexy?

RW: Veils.

Me: If you were going to ask yourself a question in an interview, what would it be?

RW: Which do you like better, Raphine or Glasgow?

Me: Which do you like better, Raphine or Glasgow?

RW: Glasgow, because it's closer to Natural Bridge. I love Natural Bridge. It has a big-ass gift shop.

Me: What was the best thing you found at the dollar store recently?

RW: I found a compact disc made out of gum. I'm thinking of letting the Trident review it.

Me: Bitter, Snookums?

RW: No, as long as I provide historical references for the gum, they'll like it. It's all context.

Me: What do you wear to sleep in?

RW: My Sophia Loren pajamas.

Me: Did you ever own Underoos?

RW: I did indeed. They were Superman. I used to run around with my cousins wearing them. We only stopped recently.

Me: What's the coolest thing about me?

RW: You asked about my underwear.

He arrived at our rendezvous point behind the cafeteria at Hollins College. He was wearing a sequined jacket with an excessive amount of zippers and one glove. After the Secret Service cleared away, our interview began.”

Plant Care

Washington and Lee men interested in W&L women can learn about their proper care at a seminar on plants. Topics to be addressed will include fertilizers, soil types, and the amount of water needed for potted plants.

Image Consultant

A very busy group is looking for a spin doctor to revive tarnished image. Interested parties should contact the EC.

Betsy Green: More than you ever wanted to know

DREAM LAND

Richard Weaver

Betsy Green. Beat-poet. Subaru driver. Xi Pi Xi. Shell credit card holder since 1968. Fashion model.

What else could there possibly be to this woman? We find out.

Me: Who's better: Diana Ross or Martha Reeves?

Betsy: I like Diana Ross because she's better to sing along to while I'll driving along in my Subaru.

Me: So, it's like Rush, and someone asks you where you're from. What do you do?

Elizabeth: "Your dreams."

Me: What if they then ask you your major?

E. Green: I say, "I major in looove." Then I laugh ironically.

Me: Who's more talented: Lamar Villere or Chris Wick?

Betsy: I'm a bigger Lamar Villere fan because he came up to me at FD and told me he thought I was funny and was nice about the fact that I had no idea who he was.

Me: If you recorded a duet with Lamar Villere, what would it be?

Liz: "Hello, I Love, (Won't You Tell Me Your Name)," by the Doors.

Me: What do you think Chris Wick would think about the recording?

Betsy: I think Chris Wick can bite me.

Me: How do you like your Stop-In dogs?

Elizabeth Ann: I like my Stop-In dogs like I like my men: with mustard, relish, chili, and cheese.

Me: What is your fascination with the Wonderbra?

E.A.G.: I just like to say it. Wonderbra.

Me: What else do you like to say?

Lizzie: Letitia. Susong. Me gusta la lechuga. Equipaje... (Betsy is forced to stop)

Me: If you had to pick an area women's college to attend, which one would it be and why.

Lizmeister: Sem, because I would be valedictorian, and it would be an easy commute to

W&L.

Me: What would be your talent if you entered the Miss America pageant?

Miss Betsy: Sleeping with the judges.

Me: What's your favorite place on campus to hang out?

Elizabethan: The weight room in Gaines because then I can watch all of the anorexic girls on the Stair Master thinking, "Wow, now I can have low fat dressing on the side with the salad I'm having for dinner tonight" while I'm thinking, "Cool; now I can drink more."

Me: Imagine if there was no heaven... Isabel Ana Verde: That would suck.

Me: What's love got to do with it?

Greenie: What's love but a sweet old-fashioned notion?

Me: So, do you like REM?

Mas Verde: Kind of. But not like I like coffee. I like both of them, but coffee is a better color.

Me: Is Val-Pak really America's favorite mail?

Elizabethy: It's not my favorite mail. My favorite mail is sexually suggestive postcards. I love sexually suggestive postcards.

Me: The kind you buy at the W&L bookstore?

Bess: Yes, because you can charge them home.

I'm a bigger Lamar Villere fan because he came up to me at FD and told me he thought I was funny and was nice about the fact that I had no idea who he was.”

Goodbye All!

THE LAST WORD BY THE MAN

Well, I guess this could be something serious, or possibly even remotely so, but hey this is the Phi, nothing is for real here.

In a year as Phi sports editor, a position approached in power and influence only by the EC president, and approached in wisdom by none.

Allen Iverson.
I would say more terrible things about the EC, but this is a sports column, and besides, I don't want to be taking an early exit from the university (Mr. Willard, you do know that it is an egregious honor violation to say anything negative about the EC, don't you?).

In any case, I certainly hope that all those who are looking forward to any baseball this summer aren't holding any delusions about quality. Go watch a Generals' game, it'll be about the same skill level.

The NBA is playing basketball right now. Or, more appropriately, Michael Jordan is playing basketball and the NBA is playing basketball around him.

Allen Iverson.
The NCAA Tournament has been one of the most exciting in recent memory, that is, if you like Miami of Ohio. Jesus, come on! I lost the pool in the first round.

The games have at least been exciting, despite the fact that I threw five dollars (oops, I didn't say that...). Weber State carried the hopes of every horrible college in the country into their contest against the Hoyas.

The only reason they lost was because they were surprised that G'town player Donald Reid had not fouled out. Consequently, Reid scored on a prayer rebound and delivered the Morons into the Sweet Sixteen.

Allen Iverson.
Hockey...well this is the south and nobody gives a damn anyway.

I have some ideas for new sports that should catch on, especially at W&L.

I think that there should be a handle toss where contestants are issued handles of Beam, Southern Comfort, etc. and the winners are those who can't stand up at the end of the event.

Another intriguing event would be the pledge toss. Well, I think that one is pretty self-explanatory. Everything should be fine unless, of course, some naive freshman were to mention to the Hill what was going on. If this weren't such an honorable school, he would then be harassed until he transferred. Nevermind, none of that would ever happen here.

Allen Iverson.
There is one final thing I would like to mention. During the UNC victory over Georgetown last night, the announcers continued to rant and rave about how wonderful G'town guard Allen Iverson was.

With this column, I just wanted to see how many times I could possibly mention the ex-convict/basketball super freshman in one article.

Oh well, who the hell cares anyway. DOES ANYONE ACTUALLY READ THIS?!?!?

I hope all dogs on the Hill are shot during class tomorrow.

Sorry, for that outburst, but it is now 3 AM and I don't want to be here anymore.

Goodbye.

Really strange and bizarre Bookwalter nightmare

By READA BOOKWALTER
Phi Assistant Sports Editor

The greater metropolitan Lexington area is just not a haven for successful sports teams.

Besides our awesome Washington and Lee Division I sports machine, which continually turns out professional draft picks, and VMI, who played the North Carolina Tar Heels this year, where is our next biggest sports city?

The answer is Washington D.C., which currently boasts three major professional sports franchises.

Actually, "boasts" is not the correct word to use, considering the teams are the Redskins, Bullets, and Capitals.

The Redskins finished 3-13 last season, the Bullets are occupying the NBA Eastern Division basement, and the Caps are not exactly tearing up the NHL.

The amazing thing is, there are people who actually get excited over them. If you ever get really bored someday, turn on HTS.

When there's not a lawn bowling or a jai-alai match on, most likely there will be a Bullets or a Caps game on, or even worse, a Bullets replay.

During commercial breaks, a young man fills the screen, yelling, "Johnny O here, BIG BULLETS FAN!"

This man has guts. He is the only person I've ever seen who openly admits that he's a Bullets fan. At least he's honest, but the viewer has to question his mental stability.

Recently, Johnny O proved how big a Bullets fan he is by showing highlights of Patrick Ewing dunking over the Bullets in a promo for an upcoming Knicks-Bullets contest.

Maybe then you're wondering how a team of Washington sports figures (including the Georgetown Hoyas, who while presently are getting lucky in the NCAA Tournament, possess some interesting personalities and names) would fare against a squad of NBA All-Stars.

OK, probably not, but stay with me during this dream sequence.

Washington starts Juwan Howard at power forward, Don Reid at small forward, Allen "The Mad Bomber" Iverson at point guard, Chris "The Wanna-Be Mad Bomber" at shooting guard, and the NBA's perennial weight problem, Kevin Duckworth at center.

The All-Stars counter with Eric Montross at power forward, Charles Barkley at small forward, Muggsy Bogues at the point, Vernon Maxwell playing shooting guard, and His Shaquess, Shaquille O'Neal, manning the pivot, not to mention co-captain Sue Deutch.

John Thompson directs the Washington attack, while Gary Fallon and Verne Canfield coach the All-Stars. At the announcer's table are Dick Vitale, and of course, Johnny O.

The first half is a display of basketball at its best. Reid fouls out five minutes into the contest and is replaced by Othella Harrington, who fails to grab a rebound or score for the remainder of the half.

Iverson commits 17 turnovers, and Webber connects on 1-16 three-point attempts.

After Thompson grew weary of consulting a sun dial to time Duckworth's movement up the court, he yanks Kevin and inserts the "77" Romanian legend, Gheorghe Muresan, who immediately trips and falls.

The Stars fare worse. Maxwell is ejected after he jumped into the stands and fought all 15 of the people present for heckling him.

Shaq and Montross are both tossed for arguing after Shaq smashed a backboard over Muresan.

Shaq completes the performance by falling on his butt.

The Stars' Christian Laettner replaces Shaq, but is also given the hook after he deliberately stomped on Muresan's face.

Washington receives ten technical free throws as a result of the ejections, but Webber, normally a 95% free throw shooter, cans one of them.

"Webber's a PT player, babeeeee!" hyperventilates Vitale.

"BIG Webber fan!" Johnny O adds.

At halftime, Washington leads 10-2, and while the W&L marching band and cheerleaders entertain the fans who have come dressed as empty seats,

Fallon rants and raves at his team in the locker room.

"You're all pathetic!" he bellows. "My football team scored as many points in our first three games as you've done in this half. You absolutely reek!"

Incited by Fallon's speech, the All-Stars came out pumped to start the second half.

Bogues repeatedly dunked over Muresan and the All-Stars' Dennis Rodman, sporting a head of grass, collected 37 rebounds in the second half as the All-Stars roared back to within 17-13 with less than eight minutes remaining.

With the game tightening, Canfield and Fallon inserted their secret weapons, forwards Robert Hull and Cam Dyer, and center Mark Connelly, replacing Shawn Bradley and Will Perdue, who both fouled out.

Sparked by these first-round picks, the All-Stars embarked on a streak. Following Washington's Desmond Howard's dropped alley-oop pass from Heath Schuler, Rodman sinks the first basket of his career to push the Stars into the lead for the first time, 28-26 with 55 seconds left.

Hull fouls Webber, who with the pressure mounting, calmly steps to the line and bricks both free throws.

"I hate all of you!" bellows Barkley.

Washington received another chance after Barkley travels. Washington's Boubacar Aw fed the ball to a confused Muresan behind the arc.

As the buzzer sounded, Gheorghe heaved up the shot, which loads six rows back in the seats.

The Stars prevailed 28-26. A deliriously happy Bogues finished with 7 points to earn honors as the game's high scorer. "Yaaaahhh, what a game!" Vitale shrieked.

W&L tenured professor of English, Moses Malone, and assistant professor of public speaking Jason Kidd were impressed by the Stars' comeback.

"Shltbuiytsmptqk," Kidd commented.

"Moses say they did good," Malone mentioned. "I like the way they play. They play good like Moses do."

Fallon and Canfield were less enthused over the game.

"We deserved to lose," Fallon stated. "We would have lost to that poor excuse of a team if it hadn't been for Muresan. I didn't realize he was that lousy."

"I never want to see a performance like this again," Canfield mused. "Games like this make me glad I won't be coaching basketball anymore."

The nightmare is over now, and I'll go back to sleep. When I wake up, just maybe I'll turn on HTS and hear, "Johnny O here, big W&L Generals fan."

No one was injured in a plane crash at Wilson Field last week. Just ignore the annoying FAA guys.

Just the facts: The Guru is on patrol.

By OLD MAN GRANT
Phi Sports Guru

Wilson's football career celebrated: Michigan State University's basketball team is out of the running for the national title, but a previous MSU championship group is getting back together.

The 1952 college football national champion Spartans are reuniting to honor their former standout defensive back, John D. Wilson.

Yes, our university president will be the guest of honor at the ESPN televised-Chris Albert hosted event on May 1 to celebrate his retirement.

"That team was a tremendous part of my life and it is an honor to be a part of this reunion," said Wilson, a member of the Academic All-America Hall of Fame.

Rumor has it that Wilson's number "60/40" jersey will be retired during the ceremony, but organizers are mum on any possible tributes.

"John was the brick of that national title team and we will honor him in the appropriate way," said former Wilson teammate and co-captain of the '52 Spartans, Sue Deutch.

Hottle off to Atlanta: Newly crowned national 200 back champion Nathan Hottle will become Washington & Lee's first swimmer ever to compete in the Summer Olympics.

Hottle's performance at the Division III nationals last week earned the sophomore the automatic berth on the Team USA that will compete in Atlanta.

"Nathan's selection was a direct correlation to the scientifically enhanced training methods that we employ on our swimmers," coach Page Remillard said, we think.

Hottle was in his apartment Tuesday when he was informed by team co-captain Sue Deutch of his Olympic selection.

Farrar Becomes Lax Hall-of-Famer: Jim Farrar, W&L's Director of Alumni Programs and former lacrosse All-American, became the last member of the 1974 Generals to be inducted into the National Lacrosse Hall of Fame.

"Jim made it? Are you kidding me?" was the reaction of Hall of Famer Ted Bauer.

"I thought they had standards?" said Farrar's former partner on defense, Rob Lindsay.

For the last ten years, Farrar was the only member of that 15-1 squad not to be inducted into the Hall, located in Baltimore.

All other players, coach Jack Emmer, assistant Chuck O'Connell, the equipment manager, the three fans that inspired the come-from behind win over Towson State, a Ring-tum Phi sports writer, and 12 former Southern Sem cheerleaders had all received the honor.

The cheerleaders weren't actually used at W&L's games, but the committee thought "what the heck."

One member of the '74 Generals was happy for Farrar, sort of.

"Well, since he's standing in the background in that immortal photo of Teddy Bauer from the Hopkins game, I guess he deserves it," said former Generals' co-captain Sue Deutch.

Keenan takes basketball helm: Mike Keenan, coach of the St. Louis Blues of the NHL, has signed on to take over W&L's basketball program.

"Even though Mike has never coached basketball before, we're happy to have someone of his caliber agree to a long-term contract and commit himself to the rebuilding of the program," said Mike Walsh, athletic director.

Keenan announced he was leaving the Blues at the end of the season because of a clause in his contract that allowed him to pursue a buyout if the GOP ever regained control of both houses, John Travolta got an Oscar nomination, Weber State made the NCAA Tournament, Oil Can Boyd ever played baseball again, and a woman was elected president of W&L's Student Conduct Committee.

"Damn! Weren't we lucky!" said Generals' basketball co-captain Sue Deutch.

The university is not concerned about losing Keenan after just one season, like the New York Rangers and St. Louis did. Apparently Keenan can only pursue a buyout if every surviving member of Ken Ruscio's infamous 1990-91 freshmen "environmental hall" graduates by this June.

"Sucker!" said Walsh.

Ripken rolls on: Senior women's lacrosse goddess Nicole Ripken played her 114th consecutive game in which she scored a goal with one second remaining.

Yet, Ripken has continued to hear criticism that she is allowing the streak to affect her play. Some observers have claimed that she purposely holds the ball until the final second in order to keep the streak alive.

"That's absurd," said assistant coach Jami "Pour this in your shot glass, Jac" Daningsburg.

Ripken dismissed as possible evidence the recent game in which she held onto the ball for the final eleven minutes of the game, running circles around the field, then scoring with a second to go.

"If I didn't score with one second left, Keith would have nothing left to write about!" she said.

The Generals continued to express their support of Ripken and her streak in a statement from team co-captain Sue Deutch.

Dadio trial enters day 41: The double-murder trial of Terry Dadio took a dramatic turn Thursday with the testimony of W&L security guard Baner.

Baner testified to finding a bloody glove in the back seat of his Ford Bronco, the vehicle that Dadio and Brenda Davis used in an escape from police custody last fall.

Under cross-examination, the defense attempted to have Baner admit to being a sexist who hated Dadio and wanted all women to leave W&L.

One-hundred-fourteen freshmen women are scheduled to testify in Baner's defense.

Dadio, head volleyball and women's basketball coach, is being tried for the murder of her former lover J.C. "Kato" Coyne and Jami Daningsburg, assistant women's lacrosse coach.

Coyne, who was the assistant sports information director, had broke off the relationship after years of physical and emotional abuse by Dadio and had a restraining order against the former hoops star.

The prosecution intends to use a taped 911 call by Coyne as evidence of Dadio's threatening and abusive temper.

But according to Coyne's former boss, Brian Logue, "J.C. was a wimp, anyway."

Coyne and Daningsburg, a "friend", were murdered outside their Woods Creek apartments last October.

The defense alleges that Dadio could not have committed the murders due to injuries suffered during her basketball playing career at Lafayette College.

Judge Bob Ito Maria is expected to rule tomorrow whether the defense can have Dadio reveal her allegedly scarred knees to the jury.

The prosecution feels this will create too much of a distraction to the courtroom, but would like to see them, anyway.

Help, I'm trapped in a living hell. Will somebody help me! This is the only message that I can sneak out from this God-awful place! The Phi is holding me prisoner!

Go buy a life you
morons!
Love, the
