

Lee Assembly Plans Finished

Classes to Be Dismissed For Thirty-Minute Devotional Program

The program for the special assembly to be held in Doremus gymnasium Friday in remembrance of Robert E. Lee was completed today.

The assembly will be opened with the processional, followed by the University Hymn. Reverend Oscar de Wolfe Randolph, D.D., former Rector of the R. E. Lee Memorial Episcopal church, will lead the congregation in prayer after the singing of the hymn.

Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of the University, will read the Minutes adopted by the Faculty of Washington and Lee upon the death of Lee. After the reading the congregation will sing General Lee's favorite hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," followed by the benediction.

The commemorative assembly will begin at 9:15 and will last approximately half an hour. All classes will be dismissed in order that the student body may attend the services.

Dunaj Suffers Blood Poisoning

But Touring Tigers Win Over Pi Kappa Phi Anyway

Making their debut under new management, the Touring Tigers barely eked out a 6-0 victory over Pi Kappa Phi today, when Harris, in the third quarter, caught Jean's ten-yard pass over the goal line.

With the absence of their all-intramural player, Dick Dunaj, who is sick in the hospital due to blood poisoning, the Tigers lacked their old vim and vigor. Pi Kappa Phi completely outplayed them and was far ahead in the matter of first downs. Clark Winter was the outstanding man on the field. He got away for several long gains, and caught many passes.

Cy Johnson, new leader of the independent team, played well, as did Ed Jean and Charley Bones. This victory put the Touring Tigers in the quarter-final round.

Dunaj is expected to be out of the hospital in time for the Davidson cross country meet Saturday.

Lauck Is Lauded For Good Work

W. and L. Printer Highly Praised by Press Group For 'A Look Back'

The following story appeared in a recent issue of Linotype News: "So pleased were the delegates to the thirteenth conference on Printing Education, at Detroit, last June, with the brochure, "A Look Back," designed, Linotyped, composed and printed by C. Harold Lauck in the journalism laboratory of Washington and Lee university, for distribution at the conference, that the conference adopted the following resolution of appreciation: "Whereas, the members of this conference have received as a keepsake a very beautifully prepared brochure designed and printed in the journalism laboratory of Washington and Lee university, Lexington, Va., therefore be it resolved that the gratitude and the appreciation of this conference be and it hereby is expressed to Mr. C. Harold Lauck, instructor in printing, Washington and Lee university, Lexington, Va., for conceiving and executing the idea of printing and distributing to members of this conference a reprint of the address, 'A Look Back,' the story of the Vollbehr collection of incunabula, delivered by Mr. Frederick W. Ashley, chief assistant librarian of the Library of Congress at the eleventh conference on Printing Education; and also to his wife, Ida Baskerville Lauck, for her assistance in the project." The brochure was bound by Mrs. Lauck."

A Lowry Comes Back

G. W. Lowry, all around athlete from Clinton, Oklahoma, comes by his ability rightfully. His brother, Ed, was captain of the 1928-29 basketball team which went through the most successful season in the Generals' history.

They were known as the point-a-minute team and averaged that total every game played except for two, and one of those was a 31-30 defeat by Kentucky, the lone defeat of the year. George started to go to Oklahoma A. & M. but the lure of Lexington was too great, so he is now found continuing the athletic history that his brother started.

Daring Frosh Explorers Crawl Through Mud of Geology Cave

Crawling through mud, walking in water knee deep; squirming through passageways barely wide enough to admit a small man; these were the activities which the more adventurous members of Monday's geology laboratory group were engaged in.

Led by student assistant Rockwell Boyle, the group visited the local caves and had its lesson in an underground classroom. Amid the dripping of limewater and fused flashlight illumination, the class discussed groundwater.

Immediately after the class period an excitement-seeking group of eleven freshmen and Mr. Boyle descended to the level of the creek bed, hoping to secure freak limestone formations and other curios of mother Nature. Due to recent heavy rainfall the red clay in the cave was a thick, gooey mud, which oozed through the fingers of the boys as they crawled along the floor of the cave, at times, on their hands and knees. On the return trip, from the creek, the group chose another route, and was thereby compelled to wade, knee-deep, in muddy water.

Although the students were so covered with mud, upon the completion of their adventure, that their best friends would not have known them, the trip was counted a valuable experience, both for its geological value and its excitement.

The same trip is taken every year by the geology classes, but the cave always holds new wonders. The cave, through constant use, has been almost completely stripped of its beautiful stalactites and stalagmites and has been adorned with the signatures and initials of a horde of students.

Heavyweight Boxers Renew Ring Rivalry In General-Terp Tilt

Steve McCaw and Louis Martin, two old rivals, fought it out again Saturday when Maryland and Washington and Lee played on the gridiron.

Martin and McCaw's rivalry dated back to two years ago in boxing, when Martin won a decision over Steve. Last semester, McCaw swore revenge, and while Martin beat him in a duel meet, the Maryland boy got full satisfaction by rendering Louis a crushing defeat in the finals of the 175-pound class in the Southern conference.

With the goings hot in the game Saturday, McCaw was sent in at guard against Martin. For ten minutes they fought tooth and nail, and at the end the honors were even, neither giving an inch.

That game marked the end of a glorious rivalry, and at the finish, both men were smiling.

The committee in charge of the freshman military ball at the University of Minnesota plans to attach dance tickets to the necks of five white mice which will be released at strategic points on the campus.

Once Again Hope That Springs Eternal Is Justified

Rain was falling steadily Friday night when the Ring-tum Phi went to press, just as it had been pouring all day and as it appeared it could rain for weeks and weeks. The campus was gloomy—football prospects for the morning, as far as the fans were concerned, appeared hopeless.

Dr. Stow had said there might be a break in the storm before the game, yet he was doubtful. But optimism was running high in the Ring-tum Phi office, nevertheless, with the prediction of a decisive victory over Maryland already in the forms.

Then one of the many editors around the stone, with a burst of genius extraordinary, suggested putting in the "ears" the prayerful prediction "Fair Weather Tomorrow." The campus looked at it with scepticism, but not without hope.

And sure enough, by one o'clock the sun was out, and it shown off and on during the whole afternoon, climaxing a very satisfactory day for football fans with a beautiful sunset.

For once a wild chance was well taken.

Troubadours Plan Play-writing Contest

"Although there has not been a definite deadline set as yet for when the plays should be turned in to either Charlie Mower or myself," he continued, "the Troubadours would like to have the plays turned in as soon as possible, or, at least, before the Christmas vacations. If they are turned in early enough, the writer will be permitted to rewrite the play with suggestions from the reading committee of the organization."

Mr. Watkin added that there would probably be an additional prize of five dollars given to the author of the play that will be adjudged best among the three by the audience.

Send home a subscription to the Ring-tum Phi.

Flunk Insurance
A company at the University of Missouri has organized flunk insurance. If a student who holds one of its policies "busts" a subject the company gives him sufficient to pay for summer courses. Similar insurance holders at Ohio State are reported to have collected between $75,000 and $100,000 on "busts."
