Toynbee To Teach During Second Semester, 1957-58

■ DR. ARNOLD J. TOYNBEE, world-famous British historian, lecturer, author, and philosopher, will teach at Washington and Lee as Visiting Scholar-in-Residence during the second semester of 1957-58. This will be Dr. Toynbee's first prolonged stay on an American campus. Announcement of his coming was made in February by President Gaines and Dean Leyburn.

Dr. Toynbee's visit is in accord with Washington and Lee's belief in personal teaching and with the University's desire to bring great minds, in person as well as in books, to the college community for personal association with students and faculty. His weekly lectures and discussions with selected upperclassmen will receive primary emphasis during his stay at Washington and Lee. In addition, several public lectures and speaking engagements at other colleges and universities in the area are planned.

Although the historian has not visited Washington and Lee before, he has collaborated with Dr. Edward D. Myers, head of the University's philosophy department, in the compilation of an atlas and gazetteer to supplement his ten-volume Study of History. This supplementary material, incorporated in one book to be published as Volume XI of the series, includes an historical atlas never before compiled and data on many historic places which are not found in an ordinary atlas. The volume will be of general importance, therefore, as well as valuable to students of the Study of History.

A graduate of Oxford University, Dr. Toynbee has been a prolific writer and lecturer, his interests embracing three general areas of scholarship: Greek and Roman culture and history, the contemporary world situation, and the inter-relationship of ancient and modern cultures in his theories on the purpose and meaning of history. Topics of published works range from Japan to Turkey, from Russian tactics to Christian ethics, and from "Greek Civilization and Character, the Self-revelation of Ancient Greek Society" to "An Historian's View of American Foreign Policy."

From 1925 to 1955, Professor Toynbee was director of Studies at the Royal Institute of International Affairs, and Research Professor of International History at the University of London. He has continued his writing and lecturing since his retirement, and during 1956 and 1957 he and Mrs. Toynbee will travel extensively throughout the world.

DR. EDWARD D. MYERS, head of Washington and Lee's philosophy department, visited with DR. and MRS. ARNOLD J. TOYNBEE at their home in London, England, during preparation of Volume XI of Toynbee's "Study of History," on which the two professors collaborated.

Faculty

Dr. Sensabaugh Appointed New Academic Dean

■ WHEN THE 1956-57 COLLEGE year opens, Washington and Lee will welcome a new academic dean. He is Dr. Leon F. Sensabaugh of Birmingham, Alabama, professor of history, chairman of the Division of Social Sciences, and director of the Evening School at Birmingham-Southern College. Dr. Sensabaugh will succeed Dr. James G. Leyburn, whose resignation as dean was announced last October. Under a special George Washington Professorship, Dr. Leyburn will continue his teaching at the University.

An eminent scholar and teacher, Dr. Sensabaugh received his undergraduate education at Vanderbilt University and his doctorate at Johns Hopkins, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. After one year of teaching at Birmingham-Southern, he served as head of the history department at Oklahoma City University for seven years, returning to Birmingham-Southern in 1936. Since 1943 he has headed the history department there and in addition has served as acting dean of the college twice and as chairman of the Committee on the Future of the College and the Faculty Research Committee.

Dr. Sensabaugh's major academic interest is in Latin American affairs. He studied in Brazil during 1941-42 on a Rosenwald Scholarship, has served as director of the summer Latin American Workshop at the University of Alabama, and has lectured widely under the University's auspices on Latin American topics. He is the author of numerous articles in historical scholarly journals and also has been a contributing editor to the Birmingham News and the former Post-Herald.

The Sensabaughs, who have one child, a married daughter, expect to move to Lexington during the summer where they will live in the home now occupied by Dr. Leyburn. Mrs. Sensabaugh is dean of women at Birmingham-Southern.

Dr. Gaines announced Dr. Sensabaugh's appointment to the faculty at its April meeting. "The credentials of Dr. Sensabaugh are most impressive," he commented. "We feel indeed fortunate in acquiring a Dean whose qualifications of scholarship and administrative ability are so happily balanced and of an eminently high level."

Dr. Pusey Chosen to Ball Professorship

■ DR. WILLIAM W. PUSEY, III, head of Washington and Lee's department of German, has been named Professor on the Thomas Ball Foundation. Pusey has been on the Washington and Lee Faculty since 1939, except for thirty-nine months during World War II when he served as a lieutenant commander in the Navy. His election fills the vacancy created by the retirement of Dr. L. J. Desha, former head of the chemistry department and now professor of chemistry, emeritus.

The Ball Foundation was established in 1946 by Mrs. Jessie Ball duPont, one of the University's greatest benefactors, in memory of her father. Income from a fund of approximately $100,000 is distributed among six Ball professors. Distinguished scholarship, effective teaching, and outstanding service to the University beyond the classroom are the criteria governing selection. Other Professors on the Ball Foundation are Doctors Bean, Bradley, Dickey, Light and Stow.

Glenn Grants for Summer Study Awarded to 22

■ NO MATTER HOW ADVANCED their degrees, how extensive their past study, or how diligent their daily reading, faculty members from time to time feel the need of "intellectual re-reading." Twenty-two of the University's teachers will have a special opportunity to satisfy that need this summer, for they have been named as recipients of John M. Glenn Grants-in-aid. These grants, awarded annually by the University Board of Trustees, are designed to help improve the quality of undergraduate instruction for study, research, and writing during the summer months.

Four professors in the School of Commerce, three in the School of Law, and fifteen in the College of Arts and Sciences have been named this year. Seven of them will collect material for courses to be given in the fall. Eight will write or prepare books and monographs for publication. All twenty-two look forward to an intellectually profitable summer. For in past years, the grants-in-aid have brought appreciable benefits both to participants and to the University, as teaching has been stimulated and scholarly reputations improved.

Proof of the variety, scope, and potential value of the program is found in the list of this year's study projects:

Reuben E. Alley, Jr., associate professor of physics, will attend a seminary on Christian Foundations for Teaching, at either Union Theological Seminary (New York) or Pennsylvania State College.

Edward C. Atwood, Jr., assistant professor of economics, will serve in an advisory capacity at the Bankers Trust Company in New York City, to make more practical his course in money and banking.

C. Westbrook Barritt, assistant professor of Spanish, will go abroad for study and research in Spain.

W. G. Bean, professor of history, will supervise the final typing of his manuscript on "Sandie Pendleton," a lieutenant colonel in the Confederate Army.

Jack N. Behrman, associate professor of economics and political science, will work in Washington to complete, with a co-author, his text on international economics.

A. Ross Borden, Jr., associate professor of English, will study at the Houghton Library, Cambridge, in preparation for a course in sixteenth century literature.

Jay D. Cook, Jr., assistant professor of accounting, will undertake research in preparation for a course in public finance.

E. McGruder Faris, Jr., assistant professor of law, will make a comparative study of Virginia and Federal tax laws.

Marshall W. Fishwick, associate professor of American studies, will study in art museums, libraries, and an architectural firm in connection with courses in fine arts.

George H. Foster, professor of English, will engage in research at Harvard and elsewhere in New England in connection with a course in American literature.

Edward B. Hamer, assistant

PAUL C. BUFORD, '13, chairman of the Alumni Fund Council, calls signals for regional agents J. LYNWOOD KING, '43, Washington, D. C.; KARL P. WILLARD, '35, Fort Smith, Arkansas; HAYWARD F. DAY, '29, New York; and WALTER C. ABERG, JR., '42, Los Angeles.

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE'S increasingly successful Alumni Fund took a significant step forward this spring with the organization of Regional Agents on a nation-wide scale, to complement the efforts of Class Agents in annual campaigns. Eighty-nine Regional Agents have been at work since April, from New York to Los Angeles and from Chicago to New Orleans.

In launching the campaign, a two-day conference was held March 23-24 to prepare these alumni solicitors for their new assignments. At the meetings, presided over by Paul C. Buford, '13, Chairman of the Alumni Fund Council, they heard a report on "Washington and Lee Today" by University President Francis P. Gaines and other administrative officials.

Through the combined efforts of Class Agents, Regional Agents, and increased numbers of alumni contributors, the Fund now exceeds by $25,000.00 last year's record-setting total of $62,508.77. Alumni Secretary Cy Young reports that, with approximately a month left before the close of the 1956 campaign, "It looks like we're going to come mightily close to our goals of $100,000 and 4,000 contributors."

professor of romance languages, will attend summer school at McGill University, studying contemporary French literature.

William A. Jenks, professor of history, will use the summer for typing and publication of his monograph entitled "Hitler's Vienna: 1907-1913."

George J. Irwin, associate professor of romance languages, will complete the typing of his translation of Raymond Aron's Introduc- tion a la Philosophie de l' Histoire.

Lewis K. Johnson, professor of commerce, will complete the typing of his book, Introduction to Marketing Management.

Lloyd J. Lanich, Jr., assistant professor of fine arts, will complete his Ph.D. dissertation on "Neoclassic Elements in the European Theater Arts."

Rupert N. Latture, professor of political science, will engage in research on the principles and devices of government in the "new" nations (India, Pakistan, etc.).

Marvin B. Perry, Jr., professor of English, will study for the preparation of a college text on an "approach to literature."

Wilfred J. Ritz, associate professor of law, will study in Washington and Cambridge on the origin, purpose, and interpretation of the conflict of laws clauses of the United States Constitution.

R. Winter Royston, professor of mathematics, will prepare and mimeograph collateral notes for a course in mathematics of investment.

Theodore A. Smedley, professor of law, will conduct research on methods of teaching legal ethics.

J. Harvey Wheeler, associate professor of political science, will publish a monograph entitled "Constitutional Crisis and Social Forces: an Analysis of the English Cabinet Crisis of 1931."

John H. Wise, associate professor of Chemistry, will complete the editing and typing of a laboratory manual for freshman chemistry.

Davis' First Two Novels Bring Honor and Praise

■ TO BE CHOSEN A FELLOW for the annual Bread Loaf Writers' Conference is a distinct honor. And Paxton Davis, assistant professor of journalism at Washington and Lee, has been selected as one of five young American writers so honored this year. For two weeks in August he will act as a junior staff member at various seminars conducted by the conference's directors in Middlebury, Vermont, for more than two hundred writers.

Usually so honored are young writers whose first works have just been published. Davis was recommended for the award by Simon and Schuster of New York, publishers of his first two short novels which appear this month under the combined title, Two Soldiers. The first of these novellas is about an Army deserter, the second about an Army "medic." Both have settings in the Burma theatre of operations during the Second World War, where Davis served as a combat medic.

Two Soldiers has been received enthusiastically. Said a book review in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, "It is incredible that the two novellas in this book should be the author's first novels; his work has the skill...and finish of the old hand.... If his next book fulfills the expectations engendered by Two Soldiers, Davis can take a place in the upper echelons of writers of fiction."

Virginia's State of Mind Analyzed by Fishwick

■ AN ANALYSIS of the "state of mind" of the State of Virginia—that's the theme of The Virginia Tradition, by Dr. Marshall W. Fishwick, associate professor of American studies. His third publication in two years, this book seeks to relate geography, history, and politics to the state-wide thinking characteristic of the Old Dominion. Portions of the books appeared previously in the Saturday Review, American Heritage, Commonwealth and the Virginia Magazine of History.

Professor Myers To Spend Year in Munich, Germany

■ A YEAR IN MUNICH, Germany, is in the offing for Dr. Edward D. Myers, professor of philosophy at Washington and Lee. For he has been granted a one-year leave of absence to work on a special project for the Fund for the Advancement of Education. Myers will leave for Europe with his family at the end of the current school year. He plans to return in August, 1957.

During his absence, his classes will be taught by James A. Rikard, associate professor of philosophy and religion at Roanoke College. Professor Rikard received his academic training at Emory University, Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary, and Harvard University.

Eight Faculty Members Receive Promotions

■ EIGHT MEMBERS OF Washington and Lee's teaching staff have received advancements effective September 1. Six will attain the rank of full professor: R. Winter Royston in the department of mathematics; Rowland W. Nelson, George H. Foster, and Marvin B. Perry, Jr., in the department of English; William A. Jenks in the department of history; and David W. Sprunt, currently Director of Religious Activities, who will become professor of religion succeeding Dr. William W. Morton who will retire in June.

George J. Irwin will become associate professor and Edward B. Hamer an assistant professor of romance languages.

Buildings

Dining Hall-Dormitory To Be Constructed

■ IF CURRENT PLANS materialize on schedule, Washington and Lee will have a combination upperclass dormitory and University dining hall ready for use at the beginning of the 1957-58 college year. The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees, meeting in early April, voted to recommend to the full Board the construction of such a building. President Gaines has stated that he is "confident" that the recommendation will be adopted when the Board meets early in June.

Long a need at Washington and Lee and a top priority item in the University's Development Program, the new building will provide dining facilities for the entire freshman class and for such other students as may care to take their meals there, and dormitory accommodations for a number of upperclassmen and law students. The exact size and location of the building have yet to be determined.

A small campus dining hall was operated by the University through the 1951-52 college year, but was discontinued because not enough students took meals there to make the project economically feasible. With all freshmen eating in the new dining hall, sufficient financial support will be assured. Moreover, this new facility will complement the long-standing University policy under which freshmen live together in the dormitory.

Because most first-year students now take their meals at fraternities, and because a University dining hall might upset the economic balance within some of them, the President has appointed a Special Committee on Fraternity Finance to work with any fraternity which anticipates possible financial difficulty because of the new commons.

Sentiment for a University dining hall and upperclass dormitory has been growing for several years. In conferences with parents and prospective students, for example, officials of the Admissions Office have felt keenly the necessity of such a building.

Law School Dean Clayton E. Williams reports that enrollment in his school certainly has suffered because the University has had no facilities to offer graduate students transferring to Washington and Lee from other schools.

Members of Omicron Delta Kappa, acting as a special committee during the early stages of Development Program planning, strongly urged construction of a freshman commons and upperclass dormitory and stated in its report that no building could contribute so much to University improvement as would a commons and dormitory.

Last December the faculty unanimously adopted a resolution requesting the Board of Trustees to proceed as soon as possible toward the erection of these facilities. In doing so the members of the group expressed concern that adequate dining and living quarters were not being provided for a substantial segment of the student body.

The student newspaper, The Ring-tum Phi, has debated the issue for several years. During the first semester of the current year it presented the pros and cons of the proposed new building, and editorially urged the earliest possible action by the University in providing these facilities. It emphasized that it was not "anti-fraternity" but "pro-University" in championing "a recognized need."

That need is about to be met.

Speakers

Variety Characterizes Topics of Visiting Lecturers

■ IF LEXINGTON BE ISOLATED, as some maintain it to be, it is a fact continually belied by the steady stream of guest speakers to campus halls. Certainly that has been the case this spring, as visitors have addressed students on subjects ranging from Woodrow Wilson to Hitler, and from national political thought to local journalistic procedures.

In keeping with the nationwide Woodrow Wilson Centennial, Washington and Lee brought to the campus for its Phi Beta Kappa lecture an eminent Wilson scholar, Dr. Gordon Alexander Craig, professor of history at Princeton University. Dr. Craig spoke on Wilson's idealism, widening his topic to include the pertinent question, "Is idealism in our foreign policy today a weakness?" After tracing Wilson's thought progression in the field of foreign affairs, Craig acceded that the president had failed to achieve his goals for post war peace. "But," he continued, "to say that he failed is not to say that he was wrong. It may be that idealism is the more real realism."

Further emphasis on Wilson came during the second annual International Relations Week, when students studied the effect of Woodrow Wilson on world international relations. Dr. Ralph E. Purcell, associate professor of political science at Sweet Briar and a former vice-consul at Bangalore, India, spoke on "The Wilson Tradition in Asia," and Dr. D. F. Fleming, research professor of political science at Vanderbilt, addressed students on the subject "Woodrow Wilson and Collective Security Today." These speakers also participated in classroom talks and informal discussions with students.

When the Ford Foundation funds are issued, Professor, maybe you'll get your own bicycle.

An unusual visitor and speaker was Count Alexander Stauffenberg, one of the famous German trio of brothers who attempted the assassination of Adolph Hitler. Count Stauffenberg, whose brothers were executed by the Nazis for treason, is dean of the philosophy faculty and professor of ancient history at the University of Munich. He spoke to German and humanities classes. The Count, a poet as well as a philosopher and historian, is touring this country under the auspices of the American government.

Journalism students received practical "working" advice from two sources. William A. Lashley, Washington public relations manager for the Ford Motor Company, addressed students enrolled in the course in public relations, and Louis Spilman, editor and publisher of the Waynesboro (Virginia) News-Virginian, spoke to members of the University's chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity. Spilman is a former visiting lecturer in the journalism department, and his son, Louis, Jr., was a member of the Class of 1952.

"American Isolationism, Past and Present," was the topic for an April lecture by Dr. Eric F. Goldman, of Princeton University, who spoke under the auspices of Washington and Lee's history department. Goldman is an authority on American history since 1898, with special emphasis on the cultural aspects of its national life. He currently is conducting studies in American isolationism in Washington, Chicago, and Wisconsin under a Guggenheim Fellowship.

Speaking before Washington and Lee students and 980 delegates to the 1956 SIPA convention, NBC news analyst, Pauline Frederick, urged young journalists to take as their motto: "Inform and educate." The Southern Interscholastic Press Association convention also brought to the campus the famous cartoonist, Rube Goldberg, who recently

A Diligent Professor and Good Citizen

Dr. Moffatt To Retire

GEORGE H. FOSTER, '34

AFTER SERVING THE University for thirty-six years, Dr. James Strong Moffatt, Jr., is retiring. He came to Washington and Lee as a member of the Department of English in 1920 and since 1938 has been chairman of the department. Dr. Moffatt has taught in a wide variety of fields: Anglo-Saxon, Romanticism, American Literature, and twentieth century poetry. He has served on almost every University committee. For as long as most Lexingtonians can remember, he has been a diligent member of the faculty and a good citizen.

But, as hundreds of Washington and Lee men will testify, he has been more than only "diligent" and better than simply "good." His office has always been open to the inquiring, the confused, and the merely friendly passer-by. He has been sparing of heavy-handed advice and prodigal of his time. No student ever left Dr. Moffatt's office with the feeling he had been brushed off or that his problems had been treated lightly. He has read more themes and term papers and examinations than he probably cares to remember; but, with a devotion that has always astonished his colleagues, he has read those endless papers with care, never failing to make a comment that gave due credit to the talented and encouragement to the strugglers.

He has enjoyed teaching and liked the people he has taught. When he saw them outside the classroom, he never failed to convey his pleasure at seeing them or his conviction that whatever they were doing was perfectly all right with him. He has always believed in the ultimate decency of Washington and Lee students; somehow this belief has persuaded young men to behave in a way that would please Dr. Moffatt. He has seldom missed a student event and for years has been our most ardent sports fan, in the good times and lean ones.

Perhaps his most remarkable quality has been his tolerance. Though a man of strong convictions, he has tried not to preach to the young. He knows the frailty of students but his knowledge has never led him to denunciations of the uncertain, the imperfect, and the gullible. He has never insisted on his own superiority at the expense of those who still have much to learn.

To the unsophisticated in his classes, he has been gentle and understanding. To the ultra-sophisticated, a few of whom always seem to love books and loathe people, he has sometimes been able to impart a sense of measure, never discouraging the desire to learn, but conveying always the humane aspect of the humanities he has taught so long and so well. To the city boys who came to Washington and Lee he has brought the generous spirit of that fine kind of Southerner who loves literature and dogs and birds and people, though not necessarily in that order. As chairman of the Department of English, he has always been generous, fair, and humorous. By trusting the men who have served under him, he has extracted their best. And no man on the faculty has corresponded more faithfully with his former students. He has kept alive the loyalty and the love of learning of many alumni in far places.

The Board of Trustees has named Dr. Moffatt professor emeritus. His colleagues plan to honor him at commencement time.

He is leaving Lexington sometime early this summer for Mt. Chicasaw, near Due West, South Carolina, where he and Mrs. Moffatt will make their home. Older alumni will be pleased, but probably not surprised, to learn he is hale and hearty. His last year here has been marked by the same selfless devotion to his task which has distinguished his entire career.

has won a Pulitzer prize for his political cartoons. "Cartooning," he said, "is not an accidental profession. It is one of the most confined, restrained jobs and is a basic form of art and entertainment."

Law School

Tucker Hall Men Record Activities and Honors

■ THE ASSORTMENT OF NOTICES and announcements tacked to Tucker Hall's two bulletin boards indicates a busy spring semester for law students with a variety of legal activities and honors. Sample notices include:

The Bar: Eight out of nine candidates for the Virginia Bar passed the State examination given in December. This high passing average among Washington and Lee's undergraduate law students, all of whom were taking the examination for the first time, compares very favorably with the state-wide average of 42 per cent.

Religious Conference: Law students were especially interested in the lectures and informal classroom talks of Dr. Samuel E. Stumpf, guest speaker during the University's annual Religious Conference in February. Dr. Stumpf, professor of philosophy at Vanderbilt and a law graduate, spoke on legal ethics and the morality of the law.

Lecture Series: Three outstanding lawyers appeared on the Student Bar Association's spring lecture series: William L. Zimmer, of the Richmond firm of McGuire, Eggleston, Bocock, and Wood, spoke on the general subject of taxation; Dr. Charles W. Whitmore of Lynchburg, a lawyer-physician, conducted two lectures on medical jurisprudence; and Edmund D. Campbell, B.A. '18 and LL.B. '22, spoke on law practice in the federal courts. Campbell, son of the late Dean Henry D. Campbell of Washington and Lee, is a member of a law firm in Washington, D. C.

Professional Fraternities: New initiates of Washington and Lee's two legal fraternities were welcomed into the University's chapters in March. Ten law students were initiated into Phi Alpha Delta, fifteen into Phi Delta Phi. Edward S. Graves, B.A. '30 and M.A. '31, a practicing attorney from Lynchburg, was named an honorary member of Phi Delta Phi.

Mock Convention: Notices of state delegation meetings, committee posts, and state assignments occupied considerable space on the bulletin boards during April as law students assumed many leadership roles in the Mock Convention. Chairman of the Convention was Carl D. Swanson, an intermediate law student from Kansas City, Missouri. Four law students served on the steering committee, while eight others were chairmen of various state delegations.

Order of the Coif: Special honor was paid to three students when they were initiated into the Order of the Coif, for "distinguished scholarship among seniors in the School of Law"—Edward E. Ellis, Fort Knox, Kentucky; Beverly G. Stephenson, Wakefield, Virginia; and George S. Wilson, III, Owensboro, Kentucky.

As a laboratory exercise in Play Production class, the students designed and erected this two-story set on the stage of the University's Troubadour Theater. The set was constructed for a winter production of Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms." Experience in modern theatre, direction, and acting is offered by the Department of Fine Arts.

Board Directs Abolition of "Hell Week" Excesses

■ TO THE FACULTY AT ITS April meeting President Gaines read a directive from the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees, having as its purpose the abolition of all "Hell Week" excesses among Washington and Lee's seventeen Greek letter fraternities.

"The Executive Committee..." the directive stated, "takes cognizance of the disastrous tragedy which recently occurred at one of the eastern educational institutions of collegiate rank in connection with fraternity hazing, as widely reported by the press.

"The Executive Committee directs the faculty to take promptly such steps as the faculty deems to be appropriate to prevent the introduction or carrying on of such outmoded practices at Washington and Lee."

The incident referred to was the death of a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as a result of a fraternity stunt.

The Faculty Committee on Fraternities set to work immediately, and after initial study asked the student Interfraternity Council to make known its feelings on the subject and to present such information as it thought pertinent. The Council requested that four of its representatives meet with the Faculty Committee in an effort to work out a plan for effective action, the enforcement of which would be assumed by the Interfraternity Council. Out of the meeting of this joint group came a unanimously endorsed set of proposals which subsequently was approved unanimously by the full Interfraternity Council and faculty bodies.

The following proposals, therefore, shall govern hazing at Washington and Lee fraternities.

1. No fraternity shall violate the basic principles of good taste, and a fraternity will initiate no activity which will be detrimental to the reputation of the Washington and Lee community.

2. No initiation or pledge training activity shall constitute any physical or emotional hazard to the individual. Such potential hazards include the "long walk," dangerous physical exertion or exhaustion, physical violence, paddling, and other types of obvious abuse. It is understood that the fraternities will exercise no jurisdiction over the pledges during the following: for six consecutive hours between midnight and 8:00 a.m.; between 8:25 a.m. and 1:00 p.m.; or while any regular academic work is scheduled.

3. No pledge training or initia-

Dr. Morton Retires After Thirty Years

DR. WILLIAM W. MORTON, professor of philosophy and religion at Washington and Lee University and a member of the faculty since 1925, will retire at the end of the current school year, President Francis P. Gaines recently announced.

Dr. Morton, who is 65, came to Washington and Lee in 1925 as assistant professor of Bible, and in 1928 he was promoted to full professor of philosophy and religion. He now heads the Department of Religion.

A native of Oxford, North Carolina, he is a graduate of Davidson College, Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, and attended the University of Glasgow. He holds A.B., B.D., and D.D. degrees.

During World War I, he saw service in France as a chaplain with the American 81st Division. After three years in the Army with the rank of captain, Dr. Morton became director of religious education at the First Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, North Carolina, a post he held for four years.

In addition to his academic duties at Washington and Lee, Dr. Morton has been active throughout his teaching career as an ordained minister of the Presbyterian Church. A member of Lexington Presbytery, he has frequently served as supply minister for numerous churches in the Lexington area.

In announcing Dr. Morton's retirement, President Gaines said, "Dr. Morton has rendered distinguished service as a teacher and as faculty chairman of the University religious program, and he has been a delightful comrade to his colleagues and has exerted only the best influence on his students."

Upon completion of his teaching duties, which include courses in Old Testament history and literature, the life of Christ and Christian ethics, comparative religion, the philosophy of religion, logic, and the history of philosophy, Dr. Morton plans to devote his time to writing, continued study and as much gardening as his health will permit. He has long been recognized as one of Lexington's and Rockbridge County's most successful "green thumbs."

He and Mrs. Morton live at 303 South Jefferson Street, in the home once occupied by Mrs. Morton's father, Dr. Granville Campbell, when he was professor and head of the political science department at Washington and Lee. Mrs. Morton is a direct descendant of a member of the board of trustees of Liberty Hall Academy, from which eventually evolved Washington and Lee University.

tion activities will take place outside of the corporate limits of Lexington with the exception of such functions as formal initiation banquets or service to the community.

4. In accepting responsibility for the enforcement of the rules adopted, the Interfraternity Council proposes that the Council enforce these rules through such penalties as curtailment of pledging and initiation privileges, the complete closing of a house for a reasonable period, fraternity suspension, or penalties applied to offending individuals.

Student Group Organizes Campus Guide Service

■ A GROUP OF PUBLIC relations-minded students at Washington and Lee have formed an organization to provide campus guide service for all visitors desiring more than the usual tourist's look at the Colon-nade from the Lee Chapel entrance. Known as the Student Service Society, the group is made up of eighteen seniors, juniors, and second-semester sophomores who volunteer their free time for this purpose.

The organization is headed by Russell B. Myers, a senior commerce student from Baltimore, who with a handful of other students recognized the need for such a service at Washington and Lee. Additional students were enlisted, and with approval from the University's administration and faculty, the guide service was begun during the first semester.

Qualifications for membership in the Society include sincerity of purpose, willingness to learn about the University, availability, and scholastic standing. Members must study material concerning Washington and Lee's history and the University's many traditions. And before a student is "checked out" for guide duty he must be able to answer just about any question a stranger might put to him about the school.

One of the Society's primary objectives is to assist the Dean's Office in playing host to prospective students and their families, a service which Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam and Assistant Dean James D. Farrar have been quick to welcome.

Couples Cavort in "Oz" at Fancy Dress Ball

■ THE LAND OF OZ, complete with yellow-brick road, tin figures, and all the well-known characters of that land of fantasy, was the setting for this winter's collegiate Fancy Dress Ball. Gaily dressed students and onlookers crowded into the transformed gymnasium to share the light-hearted gaiety of make-believe. Cardboard clouds, birds, and butterflies fluttered overhead; and murals of story-book characters covered the walls. At one end of the floor stood a huge open replica of the children's classic, "The Wizard of Oz." At the other end sparkled the Emerald Throne. Between them stretched the yellow-brick road—of canvas—with its dangers and pitfalls. Along that path Dorothy, the Scarecrow, the Tin Woodman, the Cowardly Lion and others performed their intricate dance figure as they managed to evade the Wicked Witch and arrive at the haven of the Wizard.

The annual Fancy Dress extravaganza is one of the best-known collegiate social events of the South. Except for the costumes, students plan and do all the work, designing, building, and painting the decorations, rehearsing the figures, and organizing the undertaking.

Students Build Second War Memorial Scholarship

■ IN 1947, WHEN VETERANS were enrolled at the University in large numbers, some students were discussing one night their own good fortune at being able to return to college. Their conversation turned to what they might do as a fitting memorial to classmates and friends who had been killed in the War. In search of something even more lasting than a building or monument, they hit upon the idea of a scholarship endowed through their own collective effort. With the hearty approval of the student Executive Committee and the University administrative officials, the group set to work to raise the necessary funds.

Fancy Dress President, HENRY HEYMANN of New Orleans, enrobed as the Wizard of Oz, and his "Princess," MISS SHARON COHEN, also from New Orleans, parade before admiring subjects at the annual Ball, one of the South's most famous collegiate social events.

The DEEVINE COMEDY featured this "heavenly" combination of cute co-eds, angel end-men, and uninhibited faculty vocalizers.

Self-perpetuating committees have captured the enthusiasm of the original group. By 1954 they had achieved the first $10,000 goal and had set as their new objective the endowment of a second scholarship. Projects have included the annual interfraternity "Corn Bowl" football game, several concerts, and their most recent feature, a musical comedy written, produced, directed and acted by the students themselves. This year's show, entitled "Deevine Comedy," played to capacity crowds for four consecutive performances on the campus and a fifth at Hollins College.

Ohio Senior Named '56 Valedictorian

■ AN ECONOMICS MAJOR from Bay Village, Ohio, Philip D. Monger, has been elected valedictorian of the Class of 1956. His seven-semester record contains 80 semester hours of "A" work and only 29 hours of "B" work.

Monger is at Washington and Lee on a scholarship established by the Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation to encourage promising students to enter the fields of commerce and industry. Recently elected to Phi Beta Kappa, he has been president of his fraternity, Delta Upsilon, and a member of the ROTC band and Glee Club.

University Honor Societies Initiate New Members

■ STUDENTS FROM THIRTEEN states have been chosen for membership in Washington and Lee's chapters of Beta Gamma Sigma, honor society of the School of Commerce, and Phi Beta Kappa. Two seniors, William C. Norman, Jr., of Crossett, Arkansas, and Don E. Fryburger of Cincinnati, Ohio, were selected by both honoraries.

Other initiates in Beta Gamma Sigma were seniors Leonard C. Greenebaum of Richmond, Virginia, and Jon Marvin Moreland of Galveston, Texas.

Selected for membership in Phi Beta Kappa were two law students, thirteen seniors, one junior, and two alumni.

Law seniors honored were Edward E. Ellis of Fort Knox, Kentucky, and Beverly G. Stephenson of Wakefield, Virginia. The senior initiates included: Arnold M. Applefeld, Baltimore, Maryland; Clay B. Carr, Jr., Winchester, Virginia; Gilbert Dale Cornelius, Charlotte, North Carolina; Ronald W. Fast, Chandler, Arizona; Robert Gordon Gooch, Fort Worth, Texas; Edward M. Hood, Jr., Birmingham Alabama; Arthur W. McCain, Jr., Memphis, Tennessee; Donald G. McKaba, Brooklyn, New York; Philip D. Monger, Bay Village, Ohio; Thomas D. Sale, Jr., Panama City, Florida; and Raymond Stultz, Evanston, Illinois.

Others selected at the same time were Walter R. Holmquist, a junior from Kansas City, Missouri; alumnus William D. Goode, '55, of Newport News, Virginia, now studying in Europe on a Fulbright Scholarship; and Dr. Duncan McConnell, '31, head of the department of mineralogy and assistant dean of the graduate school at Ohio State.

tion in the school is prohibited, "the obligation to inculcate the Christian ideal is hereby acknowledged." In keeping with this ideal, the University and its Student Christian Council each year sponsor a Religious Conference which brings outstanding Christian leaders to the campus for a three-day schedule of public lectures, classroom talks, conferences, and small discussion groups.

Theme for this year's conference was "Christian Ethics on the Campus—and Beyond." Speakers included Dr. Waldo Beach, professor of Christian Ethics at Duke University, who spoke on "The Danger of Decency"; Dr. Samuel E. Stumpf, head of the department of philosophy at Vanderbilt University, who spoke on "The Tryanny of Freedom"; and Colonel Francis Pickens Miller, a member of the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches and former gubernatorial candidate in Virginia.

Dr. Beach applied the ethics of Christianity to college life and theories of education. Dr. Stumpf, a graduate lawyer and lecturer in Vanderbilt's Law School, spoke to undergraduates and law students about legal ethics. Colonel Miller emphasized the inter-relation of practical politics and religious convictions. All three leaders urged students to act as they profess, relating religious values to their own personal lives and problems, on campus and in the world beyond.

Tuesday, Friday Editors Named for Ring-tum Phi

■ THE UNIVERSITY'S PUBLICATIONS Board has named two Maryland students as editors of the Tuesday and Friday editions of The Ring-tum Phi. Thomas V. Litzenburg of Cumberland will head the Tuesday staff, while Richard G. Anderson of Gambrills will direct publication of the Friday issue. Each brings to his new assignment four years of experience as a staff member; each has been managing editor of his edition during the current session.

The Friday edition of The Ring-tum Phi won first place this year among Virginia college newspapers in competition sponsored by the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association. Its current editor is E. Gerald Hopkins of Haddonfield, New Jersey. Hopkins will be a senior next year and has been named editor of the Southern Collegian.

English Major Awarded Wilson Fellowship

■ EDWARD M. HOOD, JR., a senior from Birmingham, Alabama, has been awarded a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship for one year's study in English at the University of Minnesota. Hood, an English major, was one of the 174 American and Canadian students to receive Wilson awards, out of the 1,671 students nominated.

These fellowships are sponsored by the Association of Graduate Schools (an organization within the Association of American Universities) and are underwritten jointly by the Association's members, the Carnegie Corporation of New York, and the General Education Board. The awards are reserved for young scholars demonstrating "marked promise for the teaching profession and possessing the highest qualities of intellect, character, personality."

Hood is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and will be among the top three graduates this year in academic standing. He has served as editor of Shenandoah, Washington and Lee's literary magazine, and was a member of the University's "College Quiz Bowl" team which has participated for the past three years on the popular NBC radio show.

Athletics

Individual Achievements Highlight Mediocre Season

■ THE LATE WINTER SPORTS SCENE was enlivened by notable individual achievements and a surprising climax in basketball.

The quintet, with 12 wins and 16 losses, ended the season in a near blaze of glory, pulling off the upset of the year in the Southern Conference by beating top-seeded George Washington, 63-60, in the first round of the conference tournament at Richmond March 1. Sophomore Dom Flora of Jersey City sparked the Generals with 28 points in the exciting contest, but on the following night neither

Co-captains DICKEY JOHNSON and CARLOS BAILEY discuss plans with COACH CORRIGAN, for lacrosse team's trip abroad (page 17).

Flora nor his mates could keep pace with Richmond's accurate shooting and the game ended with the disappointing score of 65-56.

Team high-scorer was Flora with 607 points this year for a 21.7 average per game, giving him a 1,160 total for his two-year varsity career, just 26 shy of an all-time major college record for a player in his first two years of school. All-State Center Lee Marshall from Ashland, Kentucky, made 346 before a broken finger took him out of play for the final seven games.

■ THE WRESTLING PICTURE was spotty as Coach Dick Miller's grapplers ended the season with three victories, four losses, and one tie, and took third place in the Southern Conference tournament, held in Doremus Gymnasium. However, in that meet Gibby McSpadden from Memphis, Tennessee, won his third consecutive conference championship, this time in the 177-pound bracket, and finished his college wrestling career with an amazing record of 39 wins and 3 losses.

■ TO REDEEM THE WINTER sports picture, Coach Cy Twombly's swimmers posted a creditable 6-3 record and breaststroker Jay Fox set a new pool mark in the Generals' upset win over Davidson.

■ ALTHOUGH COACH TWOMBLY'S young golfers failed to repeat as Southern Conference champions, they did post an outstanding record in dual matches, made a creditable showing in an intersectional quadrangular match, and finished second in the conference tournament and third in the Virginia Intercollegiate playoffs. The team gained victories over Northern Illinois State, Dartmouth, Lynchburg, William and Mary, Richmond, George Washington, and West Virginia, while dropping matches to Virginia Tech (twice) and Virginia. In the quadrangular match at White Sulphur Springs' Greenbrier, the Generals lost to Ohio University, but tied Colgate and defeated Denison.

Wrestler GIBBY McSPADDEN receives congratulations from Dean JAMES G. LEYBURN on his third Southern Conference championship, as Coach DICK MILLER watches approvingly.

■ ON THE TENNIS COURTS, Coach Bill Chipley's boys completed a winning season, defeating Kenyon, Marshall, and William and Mary in singles matches and twice beat Virginia Tech and Hampden-Sydney. The squad lost to Virginia, George Washington, and twice to Richmond. In the conference tennis tournament, the Generals wound up fourth.

■ IMPROVED HITTING AND pitching characterized the 1956 baseball campaign, but a plague of errors resulted in a 6-13 record, somewhat better than the 4 wins and 17 defeats of last spring. Victories were recorded over Davidson, The Citadel, William and Mary, Richmond, VPI, and Hampden-Sydney, with losses coming at the hands of Davidson, The Citadel, William and Mary, VPI, Richmond, George Washington (2), West Virginia (2), Lynchburg (2), and Virginia (2).

Despite the disappointing season, Coach McCann expects a fine team next year for most of the players will be returning. Especially capable are two big freshmen, right-hander Dick Newberg of North Haven, Connecticut, and first sacker Jack Daughtrey of Chester, Va.

■ HIGHLIGHT OF THE TRACK season was the shattering of the Washington and Lee shot-put record by junior Alex Platt of Riverside, Connecticut. Platt's heave of 45 feet 3½ inches against Davidson broke the existing standard of 44 feet 6 inches set by H. C. Owings, Jr., in 1936. Platt now holds both shot and discus records for the Generals. The track squad as a whole completed the season with a 2-6 record.

■ AMONG THE SPRING SPORTS, lacrosse gave spectators the highest

From Director ROBERT STEWART . . .

MUSIC IS FUN, and good music should be enjoyed by participants and listeners alike. That's the feeling of Robert Stewart, assistant professor of music, who is completing his second year on the Washington and Lee Campus. And the well-rounded musical program of the University this year seems to demonstrate his theory, for performers have been enthusiastic, new musical groups have been formed, and appreciative audiences have responded to both traditional and modern musical expressions.

Like June, music "is bustin' out all over." As proof, one has only to run down the list of University-sponsored musical activities and opportunities quite apart from formal course work and the personal enjoyment of records in the Anderson Music Room. These activities include the Glee Club, the Concert and Marching Band, the Blue Tops, the Intercollegiate Chamber Orchestra, the German Band, and the Concert Guild. The high calibre of performance, the variety and scope of the music performed, and the number of student initiated and directed productions prove that the University's musical activities fit nicely and with propriety within the program of a well-balanced liberal arts college.

Student-sponsored musical organizations and activities include the Sazeracs, the Southern Collegians,

Let there be

several "combo" groups, the "Empty Fifths," and the Interfraternity Song Fest.

Largest of the musical groups, the Glee Club has had an especially busy year, with nine major performances. The 32-voice chorus joined with the Roanoke Symphony Orchestra and several other college glee clubs to present Mozart's "Requiem," in both Roanoke and Lynchburg. Other concerts were divided between performances at Washington and Lee and at neighboring colleges.

Glee Club innovations this year have included a freshman quartet, the Blue Tops, who sing humorous songs without accompaniment, and a bi-monthly radio program, "The Washington and Lee Glee Club Presents." The Glee Club's student secretary, William T. M. Grigg of Bethesda, Maryland, produced this half-hour show on the local radio station by carefully editing tape recordings of the Glee Club and other local musical performances.

The University Band, in addition to appearing at athletic contests and at the Mock Convention, has given several formal concerts. A new feature of this organization is a five-piece "German band" composed of a cornet, a trombone, two clarinets, and a tuba. Student-conducted, this group lends unique flavor to a program of more traditional band presentations, with renditions of German waltzes in Old-World style.

For the enjoyment and enrichment of campus and community, the University's Concert Guild, a student organization, sponsors campus concerts with guest musicians and exceptionally qualified students. Its five programs this year have included: Menotti's opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors," with students joining guest artists in singing and in playing in the pit orchestra; noted violist; two pianists, one of them Dean James G. Leyburn; and a folk singer, senior Frank R. Ahlgren, Jr., of Memphis, Tennessee.

In a lighter vein, the Southern Collegians, a dance band organized in 1950, and newer "combos" have played for dances and other University functions. The Sazeracs, a singing group formed last year, appeared at Parents' Day and sang for the 25th and 50th Alumni Reunions. In its third year, the Interfraternity Song Fest is gaining in popularity, with musical representation from six fraternity groups. Newest of the student organizations is the "Empty Fifths," a singing group from Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

Not all of these organizations are University-sponsored. "But," said Stewart, "we are happy to see this enthusiasm for music and gladly encourage such interest, for we are impressed by what Washington and Lee students can do and are doing musically." The depth and diversity of Washington and Lee's musical activities underscore his assertion.

...encouragement of musical diversity.

A college president points out that in education*

All Profit But the Professor

IT HAS OFTEN BEEN pointed out that American higher education is a multi-million dollar business. Yet, a great portion of our population has very hazy notions of how it operates. This fact became painfully clear not long ago when a student innocently asked, "Who gets the profit from this college?"

I gave a short answer to the question by saying that it was foolish since the college is a nonprofit organization that never has enough money and is always within a few dollars of running a deficit. But the more I reflected on the question the less sure I was of the adequacy of the answer.

Actually, of course, a large number of people make a profit on the college. The books we need for instruction are printed by commercial companies and sold to us at a price which includes an adequate profit for stockholders, an adequate royalty for authors, and far from indecent salaries for the book publishers' employees. Our laboratories are stocked with test tubes, meters, gauges, ovens, burners, refrigerators, motors, computing machines, and thousands of other large and small pieces of equipment which are all sold to us at a price which includes considerable profit. The desk used for study, the light burned at night, the coal consumed for warmth, the cement for sidewalks, the bricks, the paint—practically everything necessary for an educational plant is bought by the college at prices which produce profit for stockholders and salaries for countless thousands who never see the student or visit the campus.

The student himself receives a large profit. For the investment of his time and effort he learns about the world of the past, the condition of the present, and the hopes and fears of the future. If the student is diligent he will leave college with an infinitely richer mind and spirit. All of the profits which go in money to the suppliers of educational equipment become insignificant and trivial besides the profit that accrues to the student.

It seems that the American educational structure has provided an adequate reward for everyone connected with it—except the professors. And the professors are placed at the most sensitive points in the structure. Without them it would cease to exist; with them it will exist and be good, bad, excellent, or indifferent.

Books in a library, test tubes over a burner, mathematical chalk marks on a blackboard, stars through a telescope, maps on a wall, and the statistics of the Federal Reserve Bank become meaningful and important only when a learned professor interprets them and works them into the fabric of knowledge and life. The professor stands as a willing guide for the student who must learn not by indiscriminate reading or undisciplined laboratory doodling. These guides cannot be replaced by electronic brains, the printed page, or tape recorders.

They must be human beings who inspire by example and mutual trust. The true professor is not an animated card file; he is rather the creator of living knowledge from dead facts, theories, and figures.

Some institutions have been able to reward professors for their labors only by giving them the chance to be creative. The economic rewards from education have gone to the contractors, the coal mine owners, the banks, the book publishers, the desk makers, and a host of other people. The professors who make the whole enterprise possible have asked for little and the American public has been willing to accept their sacrifice with only a faint nod of appreciation.

The time now has come when individual colleges must make some serious decisions. We know that more people want fine educations than ever before and we know that there are not enough excellent professors to do the job. We know that fewer people are going into teaching because only a few can see an economic reward sufficient for a decent family life. And now each college must decide whether or not it will raise its fees and its salaries to a level that will attract excellent people or whether it will live with a constantly lowering educational standard.

And the American people must decide whether or not they wish to jeopardize the future economic, political, intellectual, and moral strength of this republic by refusing to pay for the proper development of our greatest natural resource—brains.

calibre of play, for the General stickmen played the finest lacrosse teams in the United States, lost to the very best, and beat their share of the non-championship squads. The record showed victories over Delaware, Loyola, Duke, and Washington College, and losses to the Maryland Lacrosse Club, Hofstra, Maryland (undefeated national champions), Johns Hopkins, Mt. Washington Lacrosse Club, Baltimore University (Class B champions), and Virginia.

Lacrosse Team Plans Trip to England During Summer

■ THIS RUGGED LACROSSE schedule should prepare the team for its trip to England for exhibition play this summer, Coach Gene Corrigan believes. The University's squad will play a series of games against British college teams, including Oxford and Cambridge, club squads, and all-star line-ups. Washington and Lee is the fourth college to send a lacrosse team to England. Funds for the trip are being supplied by 15 to 25 team members who will make the journey, supplemented by alumni contributions and by donations from interested Baltimore firms and individuals. Also, proceeds from a special program prepared for the Mt. Washington contest and gate receipts from the Washington and Lee-Baltimore game will help defray the team's expenses.

Students Conduct Poll on Intercollegiate Athletics

■ EIGHTY-EIGHT PER CENT of the students at Washington and Lee favor some form of football subsidization and eighty-six per cent wish continued subsidization in basketball, according to a poll conducted by a special student fact-finding board appointed by the Executive Committee. This board, composed of the presidents of the three law classes, the presidents of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, and the freshman executive committeeman, talked with University officials and students for more than two months, to determine costs, revenues and scholarship policy, and to recommend changes. The board's report, which included a financial appraisal of recent years under the old program as well as the new, included a recommendation that Washington and Lee provide academic scholarships for athletes of unusual scholarly promise, and a suggestion that the present requirement for maintaining such scholarships be lowered "somewhat" from a B average.

BORN OF A MOCK

POLITICAL CONVENTION:

Excitement and Tragedy, Inspiration and Understanding

WASHINGTON AND LEE'S Mock Democratic Convention already has attracted world-wide attention; the tragic interruption of its opening session by Senator Alben Barkley's sudden death and the convention's subsequent postponement have been reported in full.

But the events leading up to the keynote address and the resumption of the convention at Mrs. Barkley's urgent request deserve telling, for to the participants they constitute a never-to-be-forgotten experience, to which the impact of a great political personality brought special vitality and meaning.

Since early November, Convention Chairman Carl Swanson, an intermediate law student from Kansas City, had organized and supervised state and territorial delegations, and had worked with the press and other committees. Every man in the student body had been assigned to a state delegation. Throughout the winter and during the spring vacation, state chairmen and delegates had been busy at home-state political headquarters, searching for material and information and consulting with party leaders to determine current political trends. For upon the accuracy and acumen of their investigations was to rest the authenticity of each "state's" vote.

As the convention neared, state offices mushroomed in Lexington; posters of the candidates in extravagant dimensions were hung in downtown restaurants and store windows; excitement and political interest grew. Notices of meetings filled the campus paper: "The North Carolina delegation will meet at 5:45 Monday in the Student Union... The New York delegation will meet at 7:30 Friday in the mezzanine of the Robert E. Lee Hotel... Members of the California delegation will meet at their headquarters opposite Pres Brown's Sport Shop." Students studied papers and editorials with unusual interest. At fraternity suppers and drugstore sessions the talk was of the issues and the nominees.

"States" planned their strategy, built floats, organized their delegations. After the surprising spring primaries, self-appointed campaigners from the ranks of New York, Michigan, Texas, and Missouri carefully planned their tactics and organized "the boom" for favorite sons. By the time classes were over at noon on Monday, April 30, the whole campus was seething with political fever, and beneath the holiday "school's out" atmosphere churned genuine political enthusiasm and new understanding of the political game.

In the hot, humid afternoon a colorful, mile-long parade, with more than ninety marching units, bands, floats, and drill teams, wound through the crowded Lexington streets. In the lead car with University President Gaines sat Senator Barkley, whose appearance as convention keynoter gave proof to the national political prestige accorded the current mock convention. Virginia's Governor Stanley rode in the second car. Pretty students from nearby women's colleges sat precariously atop paper-tufted floats. An all-girl band dressed in kilts played shrill Scottish music. New Jersey's float proudly displayed Miss America, the national beauty. Little boys and dogs raced beside the displays as the parade moved slowly and noisily from the assembly point on the Virginia Military Institute's parade ground, through downtown Lexington, to the convention hall in the University's Doremus Gymnasium.

As delegates and visitors crowded into the auditorium, hilarious students in a mood of compressed excitement waved state placards and cheered. Student Body President Ellis Drew of Anderson, South Carolina, called the meeting to order. A temporary roll was presented, committees were appointed, and the call given for nominations for temporary chairman. A delegate from the "State of California" (Townsend Oast, from Portsmouth, Virginia, and chairman of the 1952 mock convention) rose to nominate Senator Alben W. Barkley; the seconding speech came from the Virginia delegation.

Amid tumultuous applause, the Senator, having been introduced officially by Governor Stanley, stepped vigorously to the platform, banged the gavel, and launched into a good-humored partisan speech, full of scorn for Republican "stagnation," loyal praise for Democratic "progress"—exactly what was called for to give flavor and authenticity to a mock Democratic convention. With a full-armed gesture he knocked over a microphone. "That's nothing," he quipped, "to what will happen to the Republicans in November."

The "old pro" obviously was enjoying himself in his oft-repeated role as Democratic keynoter. And a thousand young men in the audience, catching the spirit, reacted to almost every sentence with enthusiastic applause.

Barkley recited his long association with the Democratic party and his many terms of service in Washington, and stated with a smile that he was once again a junior senator, taking a back seat. "But," he said, clearly and with deep conviction, "I had rather be a servant in the house of the Lord than sit in the seat of the mighty."

Then he dropped his head, took a step backward, and fell to the floor, dead.

THE AUDIENCE SAT STUNNED and silent. After long minutes the Senator was taken from the hall and the assembly dismissed.

In the balcony were several students who had been serving as reporters, along with professional representatives of many newspapers and the wire services. Until the Senator's collapse, this student press, with the rest of the "mock" convention, had been in a sense "play-acting." But at this instant it stopped being a game and became press reporting of the first order.

Shared enthusiasm

John K. Jennings, a senior from Nashville, Tennessee, was tape-recording the session for "Home Edition," the School of Journalism's nightly radio program. When Senator Barkley collapsed, he, like everyone else, froze for a moment.

Then hastily he picked up his microphone and, with the sounds of confusion and grief in the background, gave a description of the stunned audience, the scramble to call a doctor, the removal of curtains around the rostrum to give the Senator air. Continuing on his own initiative, he rushed his recording, the only one complete with commentary of this sort, to Roanoke, where the Columbia Broadcasting System received it eagerly and used it throughout the evening.

Other students showed equally good reportorial poise and alertness. Philippe C. Labro, a French exchange student, had stationed himself in the press gallery to take notes which he hoped to make into a story for one of the wire services not represented in Doremus Gymnasium. After the sudden collapse and pronouncement of death, he rushed to a telephone and called that wire service in Richmond. Despite a heavy French accent, he was able to communicate the essential facts to the reporter at the other end of the line. His account appeared on the front pages of many American newspapers the next day.

Lloyd A. Doby, Jr., of Newport News, Virginia, had been assigned to the convention as assistant to the Director of Publicity. All evening and into the night he was indefatigable as he tracked down information which reporters from outside the area would have had great difficulty obtaining. The professional reporters had high praise for him and for the student group as a whole. As Charles R. McDowell, Jr., '48, one of four Washington and Lee alumni covering the convention said, "The boys acted more like professionals than the professionals."

CHAIRMAN CARL SWANSON and three other Convention leaders represented Washington and Lee at Senator Barkley's funeral in Washington. Upon their return they and University officials weighed carefully Mrs. Barkley's admonition, "Don't let the boys stop the wonderful convention. Senator Barkley wouldn't have wanted it that way." Unanimously they agreed to continue the meetings.

PRESIDENT GAINES

"Measure up to the obligation upon you"

In reopening the convention, Dr. Gaines said of the Senator, "He came to us at great sacrifice. He had had twenty-five invitations to speak in Virginia in April, but he came to Washington and Lee because of his intense admiration for the authenticity of the Mock Convention. . . . I know you will measure up to the obligation upon you, for the eyes of the nation are focused on this convention and on this University community."

Student delegates met the challenge. In a swirl of political oratory they nominated their candidates. Floor demonstrations which followed each speech were loud and spirited. Balloting began, with the clerk droning the roll. And interest mounted as the answering counts came from each state and votes for leading nominees accumulated. Finally, after five presidential and two vice-presidential ballots, Adlai Stevenson and Tennessee's Governor Frank Clement were chosen as the 1956 Democratic nominees.

AND SO THE CONVENTION was over, its final sessions a fitting climax to the fun and frolic and to the undercurrent of serious purpose, the evaluation of issues and men, and the awakening awareness of procedures necessary to place these men in nomination. Behind were the drama and the tragedy and the period when mature judgment and exceptional ability were demonstrated so effectively.

Still vivid was the picture of Senator Barkley as he stood at the rostrum, enjoying the coiled enthusiasm of his young audience, as he admitted to the old enchantment of politics with a graphic self-characterization, "The old firehorse has heard the bell."

Planning, execution, enthusiasm, and drama—all these were essential elements of the 1956 Mock Political Convention which became a unique tribute to the man who had so aptly described its opening session with, "This is really exciting."

WILLIAM L. WILSON, '38, was elected president of the Upper Potomac Chapter of the Alumni Association at the group's spring dinner meeting held at the Fort Cumberland Hotel on May 5, 1956. Other new officers are Wesley Abrams, '54, vice-president; Thomas N. Berry, '38, secretary-treasurer; and James A. Black, '34, and P. James Fahey, Jr., '50 executive committeemen. J. Goodloe Jackson, '14, who is stepping down as president after a number of terms in that position, also will serve on the executive committee along with the officers.

Dr. Walter A. Flick, '24, head of the Education and Psychology Department at Washington and Lee, and James H. Price, Jr., '41, Associate Alumni Secretary, both spoke at the dinner meeting.

A special tribute was paid to Donald F. Stine, who will graduate from Washington and Lee in June, by Victor D. Heisey, principal of Fort Hill High School, and William P. Hahn, Fort Hill coach. Don was a 1952 Fort Hill graduate.

KANSAS CITY

Approximately thirty Washington and Lee undergraduates and alumni met for luncheon at the University Club in Kansas City during the Christmas holidays. The

Donors to Virginia Foundation

More Than Double Last Year

ONCE MORE MANY LEADING CORPORATIONS, foundations, partnerships, and individuals—more than double the number who gave last year—have contributed to the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges, the associated group of the twelve non-tax-supported colleges of Virginia. I am sure that our alumni and all other friends join me in a feeling of deepest gratitude, in a conviction that this credential is in itself an inspiration, and in a deep awareness that this generosity is an important part of the trust we keep.

retary, who reported on the development program at the University and alumni affairs, respectively. A general question and answer period followed their talks.

GULF STREAM

The first meeting in several years of the Gulf Stream Chapter was held at the Urmev Hotel in Miami, Florida, on April 10, with 35 alumni present. The meeting was honored with the presence of Senator Frederick M. Hudson, B.A. '90, and LL.B. '92.

A social hour preceded dinner, after which the members heard talks from Cy Young, Alumni Secretary, and Donald E. Smith, Director of University Development. Luther Copley, '25, presided.

FLORIDA WEST COAST

A most enthusiastic gathering of 50 alumni and their wives met for cocktails and dinner at the Tides Hotel, Redding Beach, Florida, on April 12. Highlight of the occasion was the presence of Dr. James A. McClure, '99, and his three sons, James A., Jr., '37, Tom, '40, and John, '28.

Mr. James R. Caskie, '06, Rector of the University Board of Trustees, was an unexpected guest and gave a delightful talk. Donald E. Smith, Director of University Development, and Cy Young, Alumni Secretary, spoke on the progress of University and development and alumni affairs.

Joe H. Staley, Jr., '33, president, presided and called on the nominating committee for its report. The committee presented the names of John A. Handley, '34, St. Petersburg, for president; and Everett C. (Ax) Easter, Jr., '49, Tampa, for secretary-treasurer. The report was unanimously adopted.

NEW YORK

The 75th anniversary of the New York Alumni Association was celebrated by a hundred alumni, wives and friends at a dinner dance held at the Columbia University Club on January 20.

The business meeting was presided over by H. Richard Sandstrom, '41, and addresses were made by Dr. Gaines and Ernest T. Stewart, Jr., Executive Secretary of the American Alumni Council.

The following officers were elected: Clark B. Winter, '37, president; vice-presidents: H. Richard Sandstrom, New York City; W. L. Webster, '12; Upstate New York; Stephen E. Campbell, Jr., '41, Long Island; James M. Franklin, '35, New Jersey; Leonard T. Brown, '19, Connecticut; Emmett W. Poindexter, '20, secretary-treasurer; Shirley J. Robbins, '20, and W. M. Farrar, '19, council members (term expiring 1957); George B. Scott, '48, Donald W. Bourne, '51, and Richard A. Brunn, '42, council members (term expiring 1958).

LYNCHBURG

The Lynchburg Chapter held its annual dinner meeting at the Boonesboro Country Club on February 22. A social hour preceded dinner. C. Lynch Christian, Jr., '44, president, presided. Donald E. Smith, Director of University Development, and Cy Young, Alumni Secretary, represented the University and brought those present up to date on University and alumni news and activities.

Dinner was followed by a business meeting. New officers elected for the coming year are Richard F. Burke, III, '42, president; James E. McCausland, '43, vice-president; and Dr. G. Edward Calvert, '44, secretary-treasurer.

On February 22, 1956, 75 alumni and wives of the Richmond Chapter held a dinner meeting, preceded by a social hour, at the William Byrd Hotel. The president, Don Fergusson, '51, presided. Jim Price, Jr., '41, Associate Alumni Secretary, represented Washington and Lee and spoke on the general theme of the state of the University.

Following the meeting the group attended the Washington and Lee-University of Richmond basketball game, where despite this loyal support, the Generals lost to the Spiders by a score of 88-70.

The Peninsula Chapter of the Washington and Lee Alumni Association held a banquet, preceded by a social hour, at the Chamberlin Hotel on January 19 to commemorate the birthday of Robert E. Lee.

The meeting of some sixty alumni and guests was presided over by Parke S. Rouse, '37, president, and an address was made by Dr. Walter Flick, '24, representing the University.

93 DR. ANDREW H. WOODS retired in 1953 from over fifty years of teaching and executive work in the medical field. Dr. Woods received his M.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1899 and as vice-president taught at Lingnan University in Canton, China, for several years before returning to this country and entering private practice. He went back to China and Lingnan University prior to World War I, during which he served with the U. S. Medical Corps as a major in France and New York. After the war, he became professor and head of the Neurological Department of the Rockefeller Foundation Hospital and College of Medicine in Peking, China. The years 1929-41 saw Dr. Woods back in the States, first as professor and head of psychiatry and then director of Iowa University Psychopathic Hospital in Iowa City; he became professor emeritus of psychiatry in 1941. At one time, Dr. Woods was president of Sinclair Realty Company in Iowa; a member of the Iowa Board of Eugenics; vice-president of the American Neurological Association; and chairman, Council on Examinations of the American Psychiatric Association. He is the author of many chapters in books on mental and nervous diseases and has made numerous contributions to various scientific journals on neurology and psychiatry. He now resides at 24 Pine Street, Wellesley Hills 82, Massachusetts.

96 MARION W. RIPPY finds retirement from active law practice in New York enjoyable and is apparently kept busy. He was in Galveston some time ago and saw IKE KEMPNER, '93, who had recovered from a recent illness. Mr. Ripy spent the winter months in Delray Beach, Florida.

98 DR. R. T. SHIELDS still holds the job of assistant pathologist in the hospital at Winchester, Virginia.

99 EWING D. SLOAN, after five years of retirement from engineering work, has been "relaxing and resting" in Jackson, Mississippi.

00 DR. SAMUEL BROWN MCPHEETERS will retire June 30, 1956, after twenty years' service as Health Officer for Wayne County, North Carolina, and ten years' for Green County, as well. Born in Rockbridge County, Dr. McPheeters received his M.D. degree in 1906 from Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri. He served as a first lieutenant with the Army Medical Corps in World War I and later as associate physician at the tuberculosis sanitarium in Catawba, Virginia. The author of several articles on tuberculosis, Dr. McPheeters at one time was chief of the Mobile Chest Clinic, Alabama State Board of Health, and was head of the American School Health Association. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church and the Kiwanis Club and now resides at 307 Linwood Avenue, Goldsboro, North Carolina.

02 R. F. COOPER is now acting professor of Ancient Languages at Belhaven College in Jackson, Mississippi. He reports an enrollment of 18 in Freshman Greek.

DR. WILLIAM T. ELLIS will be honored by the Medical Society of Philadelphia for 50 years practice in that city. Dr. Ellis received his M.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

04 JOHN R. HANDLAN writes that he has been in Tampa, Florida, since the first of the year and hopes to stop in Lexington on his way north to Belle Vernon, Pennsylvania.

05 DAVID T. MOORE had been married 46 years to Emma Watson Brown on February 23, at which time he also celebrated 44 years with Greenbrier Military School; 45 years as an officer in the Presbyterian church in Lewisburg, West Virginia; and 20 years as director in the Farm Credit Association.

07 E. CLYDE HOGE is recovering from a recent accident and expects to celebrate a birthday soon. Address: 2046 Calvin Cliff, Cincinnati 6, Ohio.

THE REVEREND A. R. LARRICK of the Home Mission's Committee in St. John's Presbytery at Plant City, Florida, writes that with the constant influx of people to Florida he is kept busy organizing more new churches to "take care of the saints and rescue the sinners."

09 THE REVEREND DEVAL LANGHORNE GWATHMEY has retired from the active ministry and as Rector of St. John's Episcopal Church in Wytheville, Virginia, after having served there for more than 34 years. Following his graduation here he attended the University of Pennsylvania and was graduated from the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Virginia. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Washington and Lee in 1932.

AMOS L. HEROLD writes that he has finished writing a manuscript volume of recollections, tentatively called The Adventures of an American Teacher—A Saga of the Virginias and the Southwest. His first book was a biography of James K. Paulding, about whom he says four doctoral dissertations have been written. Mr. Herold is currently living in Austin, Texas.

10 JAMES NELSON MONTGOMERY, in missionary work in Formosa writes that the Christian Literature Center there has distributed more Bibles, Christian Books and Sunday School literature during this past year than in any one of their seven years in Fomosa.

JOHN H. TUCKER, JR., Shreveport attorney, was awarded France's highest honor in a private ceremony at the New Orleans' home of French consul general Guy Quoniam de Schompre on February 26. The Legion of Honor was presented to Col. Tucker for his part in supplying France with copies of the Louisiana civil code which are based on Napoleonic law. Previously, the French Government had

■ HAMILTON A. DERR, '10, was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree by Marietta College at Founders' Day ceremonies on February 14. Mr. Derr was thus honored for his contributions as "an executive, scientist and inspiration to youth" at the Ohio college's 121st anniversary.

Mr. Derr, a Marietta paint executive and civic leader for more than 30 years, has combined an active business career with outstanding contributions to community, church and young peoples' activities.

He has been active in the work of the First Unitarian Church of Marietta, serving as superintendent of the Sunday school, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and vice chairman of Meadville Conference of Unitarian Churches.

For 15 years he served as director of the Marietta Community Chest and for many years he was a trustee of the Marietta Memorial Hospital. He also has been active in the Chamber of Commerce and other civic groups in the town.

He has given 28 years of leadership to the Boy Scouts of America, both on regional and national levels, and for "distinguished service to boyhood" he was awarded the Silver Beaver and Silver Antelope honors.

DERR

Honored by Marietta College

Originally a resident of Maryland, Mr. Derr was educated in Cumberland schools and Washington and Lee University. He served as instructor of chemistry here for one year following his graduation in 1910. In 1911, he was employed as a chemist for the duPont Company of Wilmington, leaving in 1912 to accept a position with Kellogg and Miller Company of Amsterdam, New York. Three years later he moved to Cleveland to join the Sherwin-Williams Company, first as a chemist and later as factory superintendent and superintendent of technical service. He was with Sherwin-Williams until 1923, when he became factory manager for the Marietta Paint and Color Company. He later advanced to assistant to the president, a position he held until in 1939 he founded Vanguard Paint and Finishes, Inc., in his home town.

Mr. Derr and his wife reside at Muskingum Drive in Marietta. Their son, W. Gardner Derr, '39, is a salesman in Toledo.

named Col. Tucker its honorary consular representative in Shreveport for North Louisiana.

F. VAUGHAN PULTZ, on January 4 of this year, retired from active teaching after more than forty years in the education field. Following his graduation, Mr. Pultz did graduate work here and later at Harvard University, George Washington University and Massey Business College in Richmond, Virginia. Born and reared in Lexington, he has successively taught at public schools in Virginia and North Carolina and at Strayer College in Washington, D. C. Mr. Pultz had been on the faculty at George Washington High School for many years, serving as head of the Commercial Department and at time of retirement, was a member of the Commercial Department and treasurer of the school. At one time he was treasurer of the Alexandria Education Association. Mr. and Mrs. Pultz have one married daughter, two grandsons and a granddaughter, and live at 13F Auburn Court, Auburn Gardens, Alexandria, Virginia.

11 CLEMENTS McMULLEN, Major General, U. S. A. F., recently retired from military duty but is finding life no less strenuous than before. He is kept busy as National Commander of the Order of Daedalians, an organization of World War I fliers; Regional vice-president of the Air Force Association for the Southwest area, which includes New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas; and Chairman of the Industrial Committee of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce. In addition, he is active in Community Chest and United Fund work and has little time for anything else. Address: 515 Lamont Avenue, San Antonio 9, Texas.
