Come Back for Reunion Time, June 11-13

A GENERAL REUNION of all classes is set for June 11-13 in Lexington, and a big, broad welcome mat is out for alumni.

Using the slogan, "Be First in Line in '59," the Reunion will seek to bring hundreds of graduates together for three days of renewing friendships with each other and the University.

Originating with the Bicentennial in 1949, Washington and Lee has adopted the policy of a REUNION OF ALL CLASSES every fifth year. The last reunion, in 1954, was most successful, and saw the return of some 650 alumni and their families to the campus. And now we look forward to this year!

One interesting innovation is that the three Anniversary Classes will merge with the Reunion. It will be recalled that each year, since 1955, the 25th, 40th, and 50th Anniversary Class Reunions have been held in May. Alumni of these classes and their wives have returned to the campus as guests of the University. This year, after thorough study and a survey made among the anniversary classes, it was decided to consolidate the two events for one large celebration in June. As in 1954, the Reunion has been scheduled for the week following graduation ceremonies at Washington and Lee and V.M.I., because of the limited lodging facilities in town.

Lexington will be yours! You and your families will be housed, by classes as far as possible, in motels, hotels, and dormitories close to the college, and near the familiar scenes of the campus. Relax! Live again the days of your youth. Visit with classmates and friends, compare notes, and talk over "the good ole days."

There will be a full program, but ample time for leisure. Included are special features and events for the three Anniversary Classes. There will be golf, tennis, dancing, and gaiety for those who wish it, and there will be serious discussions of the problems and future of your alma mater. The ladies will enjoy a fashion show and the 'teen-agers trips to Natural Bridge or Goshen Pass and other attractions.

In view of Dr. Gaines' approaching retirement, the Reunion this year becomes even more significant to many who have had the privilege of his association. To see a large circle of the Washington and Lee family back on campus is perhaps his fondest hope. Probably no other man can envision the future of Washington and Lee as vividly as can Dr. Gaines, nor so articulately define its orbit, and he will be one of the main speakers at the big event.

The Reunion will also mark the end of the initial phase of the capital fund campaign for University development. Returning alumni will benefit in explanations of progress reports and first-hand observation of its aims and final goals. Detailed study of the building plans and the functional operations of the new developments will be of great interest to all. Share with your classmates the opportunity of shaping the important advancements of Washington and Lee.

Literature in more detail on the Reunion is being mailed to each alumnus. Begin now with YOUR plans to attend. Coordinate through the alumni office or your class agent the friends from your class or your area who will attend. BE FIRST IN LINE IN '59! Make this Reunion of All Classes the biggest ever.

■ APPLICATIONS FOR ADMISSION to Washington and Lee in September are running slightly ahead of the rate at this time last year, according to Frank J. Gilliam, Dean of Students.

Last year, a record total of 1,116 applications was received, from which the University selected a class of 312 freshmen.

FACULTY

■ THIRTEEN PROFESSORS have been awarded grants totaling $5,241.40 for study and research this summer, through the John M. Glenn grants-in-aid program. Subject matter to be covered ranges from rocketry to Scottish migrations and business statistics to Civil War history.

■ A FORD FOUNDATION fellowship for economic research this summer has been awarded to Professor E. C. Atwood. He and nine other college professors will attend an eight-week regional research seminar in economics at the University of North Carolina. Purpose of the seminars is to enhance effectiveness in teaching, and to encourage preparation of significant research studies.

■ "VIRGINIA," the first volume in "The Regions of America" series to be published by Harper and Brothers this spring is the latest work from the prolific pen of Dr. Marshall Fishwick, professor of American Studies. Dr. Fishwick, a member of the faculty for ten years, is on leave from Washington and Lee this semester to teach and study in Denmark on a Fulbright Scholarship.

In his prologue, Dr. Fishwick writes, "I am fond of Virginia. My state is 'her,' not 'it,' to me. One of my goals is to cover so far as space allows, as much of Virginia history, in space and time, as is possible. Of course three and a half centuries cannot be packaged, like frozen vegetables, and put into neatly labeled cartons. The real art of the historian is selectivity."

DR. W. M. HINTON, '29

DR. G. H. FOSTER, '34

DR. E. C. GRIFFITH

■ FIVE MEMBERS of the faculty have been named to head departments at Washington and Lee, effective in September.

Dr. William Miller Hinton, '29, will head the department of Education and Psychology, succeeding the late Dr. Walter A. Flick.

Dr. George Harding Foster, '34, will head the new department of Comparative Literature.

Dr. Jay Deardorff Cook was appointed head of the department of Accounting.

Dr. Edgar Winston Spencer, '53, was promoted to associate professor of Geology, and will head the department of Geology.

Faculty promotions, effective in September, are as follows: Dr. G. Francis Drake, professor of French; Wilfred J. Ritz, professor of law; Dr. Edward F. Turner, Jr., professor of physics; Dr. Thomas P. Hughes, associate professor of history; Henry L. Ravenhorst, '35, associate professor of engineering.

One new faculty addition has been announced. Dr. S. Todd Lowrey was appointed assistant professor of economics to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the late Dr. M. O. Phillips. Several leaves of absence were approved for the year beginning in September: T. E. Ennis, Jr. will continue to work toward an advanced degree in accounting at the University of Michigan; Dr. J. Harvey Wheeler, on partial leave, will continue studies for the Fund of the Republic; Dr. Edward D. Myers will continue for another year his duties as cultural attache at the American Embassy in Bonn, Germany; Dr. John H.

Wise will teach one year in the National Science Foundation Institute at Brown University.

WE GOOFED

In the last issue of the magazine, when we were announcing the new book written by Dr. Olinger Crenshaw, '25, tentatively titled, "General Lee's College," we stated: "The book covers the period from the founding of Liberty Hall Academy in 1782, to the present." What we meant to say was "the chartering of Liberty Hall Academy in 1782." The forthcoming history will contain an account of the period, 1749-1782 (and beyond) in chapters one and two.

DR. JAY D. COOK

■ A BRIGHT-EYED AUTHOR of sixty-five has become Washington and Lee's first woman professor, and the first person to hold a special professorship established by the late Arthur C. Glasgow. She is Katherine Anne Porter, who calls herself a "full working artist."

She arrived at the beginning of the second semester, after serving as writer-in-residence at the University of Virginia during the winter months. Miss Porter will hold sixteen seminars while on campus, plus four public readings. She will also meet at least once with each of the English classes.

Besides her work at Washington and Lee the Glasgow professor has scheduled appearances at other nearby colleges. She also appeared on the "Camera Three" program over NBC-TV, discussing her forthcoming book, "Ship of Fools," to be published in the fall.

Shortly after her arrival here in February, announcement was made that she was one of eleven American creative artists to receive Ford Foundation grants this year. A sum of $150,000 was divided among the group, to enable them to concentrate on creative productivity for the next few years.

Miss Porter sees her work here as "sort of a supplement to the regular curriculum." She has been writer-in-residence or lecturer at many American colleges, including Stanford University and the University of Chicago.

Last year, the visiting professor at Washington and Lee was Dr. Arnold J. Toynbee, British historian.

GIFTS

■ YEAR-END GIFTS to Washington and Lee totaled $283,560, according to President Francis P. Gaines. The largest single gift was $111,000 from Mrs. Alfred I. duPont, one of the University's greatest benefactors. Other gifts included $50,000 from the Baker Foundation; $30,000 from an alumnus of 1950; $25,000 from a member of the board of trustees who has given half a million dollars to the University over a twenty-year period; $15,000 from another trustee, and a number of alumni gifts ranging from $5,000 to $10,000.

■ THE UNIVERSITY has been named to a select group of fifteen liberal arts colleges in the nation to share in the scholarship program of George F. Baker Trust of New York. An initial grant of $50,000 from the trust will establish scholarships for freshmen entering Washington and Lee in 1960, 1961, and 1962.

The Baker scholarships will be held by recipients for four years, and individual stipends may run as high as $2,000 per year. They will be gauged to cover all college expenses that lie beyond a candidate's own financial resources. Re-responsibility for selection of recipients will be placed with Washington and Lee.

No geographic restrictions are imposed, although applicants from the South and border states will be favored. The trust requested that the college's board of trustees play an active role by serving as members of the selection committee. President Gaines said that three trustees will serve in this capacity: Dr. Huston St. Clair, '22; Joseph L. Lanier, '27; and Dr. J. N. Thomas, '24.

■ THE ESSO EDUCATION Foundation has given Washington and Lee a grant of $3,500 in unrestricted funds to meet expenses directly associated with undergraduate education. The Foundation was established in 1955 to provide aid to privately-supported colleges and universities. Washington and Lee has received gifts from the Foundation each year since its founding.

MISS KATHERINE PORTER, center, Glasgow professor this semester, meets with undergraduates in Payne Hall. She is holding sixteen seminars and four readings during her stay here.

UNDERGRADUATES

■ THE WASHINGTON and Lee Glee Club has scheduled a number of concerts this spring, some of which have been arranged for by alumni.

On March 11, the club provided entertainment for the National Convention of Doctors of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Specialists at the Homestead, Hot Springs, Virginia. The club will again appear at the Homestead on April 7 to sing for the American Radium Society meeting. On April 14, a joint program with the Longwood College choir has been set for Farmville. The Brahms Liebeslieder Waltzes, opus 52, will be sung.

The Glee Club's spring tour will be launched on April 23, with visits to Huntington and Charleston, West Virginia. Alumni T. J. Mayo, '31, president of Tri-State alumni chapter, and R. P. DeVan, Jr., '34, president of the Charleston chapter, assisted with arrangements, which include appearances at Marshall College in Huntington, and the Rotary Club and Charleston Country Club in Charleston. From West Virginia, the club will travel to Pittsburgh for a program with the Women's Choral of the University of Pittsburgh. The special feature of this program will be the singing of Randall Thompson's "Americana." The tour will close with an appearance at Trinity Episcopal Church in Towson, Maryland, on April 26. John D. Mayhew, '26, made initial arrangements for this concert.

The annual spring concert on the campus will be presented on April 30, when the club is joined by the Women's Choral of the University of Pittsburgh in joint numbers.

■ THE FIFTH ANNUAL International Relations Week was held very successfully on February 10, 11, and 12, with three experts in world military, political and economic affairs as the chief speakers.

Topics included, "Current Problems in American Foreign Policy," "The Irrationality of War," and "The European Common Market and American Foreign Trade," as well as seminars in diplomatic history, and recent developments in the convertibility of European currencies.

Speakers were Dr. Philip C. Jessup, formerly United States ambassador-at-large, and now professor of international law and diplomacy at Columbia University; Michael M. Mora, general manager of the Norfolk Port Authority; and Walter Millis, consultant to the Fund for the Republic and former military affairs columnist for the New York Herald Tribune.

■ FIFTEEN OF SEVENTEEN fraternities initiated pledges on the weekend of February 7. The days before, known informally as Hell Week or Help Week, were devoted to antics by the pledges. These ranged all the way from wearing lampshade hats all week, to being sent out on scavenger hunts to locate such items as 1924 Saturday Evening Posts. Early comers to the campus one morning were treated to the sight of a pledge seated atop the shoulders of the Cyrus McCormick statue, caroling gay tunes on orders. KA pledges toted a log for several days. Other pledges experienced the pleasure of smoking cigars in a closed closet one night. It was all in fun—but pledges also performed a civic service. They canvassed for the March of Dimes too, and collected several hundreds of dollars for the drive.

■ FEWER STUDENTS WERE dropped because of academic failures at mid-year than at any time in the past five years, Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam said. He reported that 30 were affected by the automatic rule, and five of these were reinstated conditionally. In the past five years, from 45 to 52 students had been affected by the rule. Dean Gilliam said the greatest improvement was noted in freshman work, where only 13 men failed, as compared to 31 a year ago.

Kappa Alpha pledges carried this log around campus for several days, with a minimum of puffing and a modicum of grinning. It was all part of the Hell Week activities.

■ IT WASN'T EVEN SPRING, but undergraduates were beginning to behave like that season was almost upon us. In a letter to the Ring-tum Phi, two students suggested their solution to the school's athletic problem: that Washington and Lee purchase the Washington Red-skin pro football team, hereafter to be known as the Washington and Lee Redskin Generals. They advised that the million-dollar cost of buying the team could be classed as an athletic expense, to be amortized over a period of years, and pointed out it would be a profitable venture, since the team, with its television network over the South, always makes money. Any profits, they declared, could be applied to increasing the academic plant, raising faculty salaries, and supporting other athletics.

The students said, by following this plan, the University would still have no subsidized athletes in our enrollment, and could compete with schools in other sports at no financial loss. They pointed out the great publicity value of the venture, resulting in more interest in Washington and Lee, and possibly additional financial support.

■ THE SAZERACS, a 14-man vocal group, will fill a singing date during the spring vacation at a luxury hotel in Florida. For the third year, the students will head toward West Palm Beach for their engagement at the Colonnades Hotel from March 29-April 5. They will also appear at the Tequester Country Club on Jupiter Island.

The group will present several formal after-dinner concerts, and numerous songfests at the hotel's pool, and beach.

■ SIGMA PHI EPSILON has petitioned for re-admission to the campus as a fraternity. Presently organized as a club, the group has student officers and plans intramural competition in athletics this spring. It plans to form an alumni corpora-

Name Your Candidate

In compliance with Article 9 of the By-Laws of the Washington and Lee Alumni, Inc., we are listing below the names of the Nominating Committee for the coming year.

Under the By-Laws, any member of the Association may submit the names of alumni to fill the vacancies on the Alumni Board of Trustees.

There are two vacancies to be filled on the Alumni Board of Trustees at the June 1959 meeting of the Alumni Association. Members are urged to submit names of their candidates for these offices. The Nominating Committee will close its report on April 20. Present trustees whose terms expire this year are David D. Johnson, '21, and Frank C. Brooks, '46.

The Nominating Committee is as follows: A. Linwood Holton, '44, Eggleston and Holton, 209 State and City Building, Roanoke, Virginia, Chairman; A. Milton Morrison, '38, State and Mutual Life Assurance Company, 2323 Fannin Street, Houston 2, Texas; Emmett W. Poindexter, '20, Riggs, Ferris and Greer, Room 1201, 74 Trinity Place, New York 6, New York.

tion to find a chapter house for next year, so the group can participate in rush week. Several national officers of the fraternity have visited the Sigma Phi Epsilon colony here this year.

ALUMNI

■ TWO OF WASHINGTON and Lee's distinguished alumni were honored by the student members of ODK, who tapped them for membership in the leadership fraternity in December. They were C. William Streit, '10, a member of the Olympic Executive Committee, and Edwin W. Chittum, '33, superintendent of Norfolk (Virginia) County Schools. Speaker prior to the ceremony, which also included undergraduate initiations, was Ross L. Malone, '32, president of the American Bar Association.

Mr. Streit, originally scheduled for initiation last year but prevented by illness, is one of the nation's leading figures in amateur athletics. He has been an active force in promotion of track and field in the Southeastern Conference, and has served as president of the Southeastern Amateur Athletic Union. He has participated in more than 400 college football games as referee or other official. He is a member of the twelve-man Honor Court of the National Football Hall of Fame, which selects former football greats for the Hall of Fame.

Mr. Chittum has been in educational work ever since his graduation. He taught at several schools before becoming high schools supervisor for Norfolk County in 1944. For the past ten years, he has held his present position. Last October, a new 800-pupil, $600,000 school in Norfolk county was named in his honor, and he was described at the dedication as "the finest thing that ever happened to Norfolk County." In 1957, he received the Phi Delta Kappa distinguished service award from the University of Virginia, for being an outstanding leader in public education.

THE CAMPUS

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE'S 210-year-old history is a subject of great interest, especially to school children, but a recent request for information put the school back 160 years. A Colonial Heights, Virginia, youngster, "very interested in the academies in Virginia, though I am a girl," wrote to "Liberty Hall Academy, Lexington, Virginia," for pamphlets and other material. Of course, Liberty Hall was changed to Washington Academy in 1798, in recognition of George Washington's financial support of the school. University officials mailed the schoolgirl a brief history of Washington and Lee University, and a picture of the ruins of Liberty Hall Academy. It was the best they could do.

■ THE TOWN OF LEXINGTON has been given two strips of University property to facilitate widening of two Lexington streets. The university is giving up eight feet, seven inches of its property on Lee avenue, by the Student Union, and four feet of land along Washington street in front of the new dining hall. Town officials requested the land as a means toward greater traffic safety along Lee avenue and Washington street. Both areas will be scenes of increased activity when Washington and Lee puts its new dining and dormitory facilities into use next September. Work on the street project began in early March and is expected to be completed soon.

■ MC CORMICK LIBRARY has been selected as a repository for limited edition recordings of American music by the Society for the Preservation of the American Musical Heritage, Incorporated. These recordings will be made a part of the Anderson Music Room collection, and will be used in musical history and appreciation classes.

The series includes generally unknown works of colonial America and neglected music of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

LAW SCHOOL

■ WHITNEY NORTH SEYMOUR, former assistant solicitor general of the United States, will deliver the Tucker Law Lectures on May 1 and 2. This year's series will be the eleventh since the Lectures were initiated in 1949 in memory of the late John Randolph Tucker, a dean of the Law School.

Mr. Seymour has a wide background in education in law and government work. He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Missouri in 1920 and his law degree from Columbia in 1923. He was admitted to the New York Bar in 1923, and entered the firm of Simpson, Thatcher, and Bartlett that same year. In 1929, he became a partner in the firm, a position he still holds.

He is former president of the New York Legal Aid Society, Bar Association of New York City, and is chairman of the American Arbitration Association. He is a trustee of the Carnegie Endowment Fund, and president of the Municipal Art Society of New York. He is a member of the Attorney General's committee for anti-trust laws and was the special assistant attorney general of New York during the waterfront controversy of 1954. He is chairman of the lawyers committee for the Court of Military Appeals, and a trustee of the practicing Law Institute.

The Law School Association will also hold its annual meeting at 3 o'clock on May 2.

■ THREE WASHINGTON AND LEE Law School graduates, all members of the seven-man Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, participated in the historic decision of January 19, 1959, voiding Virginia's "massive resistance" segregation laws. Chief Justice John W. Eggleston, '06, wrote the majority opinion, in which Justices Kennon C. Whittle, '14, and A. C. Buchanan, '14, concurred. The opinion was handed down on General Robert E. Lee's birthday.

■ THE STAPLES CHAPTER of Phi Alpha Delta awarded a Certificate of Service in December to Charles R. McDowell, professor of law for more than thirty years. Martin P. Burks, '32, general solicitor for the Norfolk and Western Railroad, was keynote speaker at the banquet meeting, and recounted that he was among the first students to study under Professor McDowell. Mr. McDowell is a member of the Order of the Coif, and has served as a member of the faculty staff of the Law Review. He has practiced law in Danville, Kentucky, and West Palm Beach, Florida.

■ PROFESSOR CHARLES P. LIGHT, JR. has been named to the American Bar Association's special committee on military justice. He is one of seven men serving on the committee for this year. A graduate of V.M.I. and Harvard Law School, he has been a member of the law faculty here since 1926. He is a colonel in the Judge Advocate General Department in the United States Army Reserve.

■ EIGHT STUDENTS were graduated from Law School in January. They were Walter W. Burton, Donald James Currie, Leonard C. Greenebaum, Marris Allen May, Kingswood Sprott, Jr., Robert Edward Stroud, Charles Evans Swope, and Robert N. White.

Five new students entered Law School at the beginning of the second semester, and two returned to the campus, after time in the service.

ATHLETICS

■ AN EIGHT-GAME 1959 football schedule has been announced for Washington and Lee University by Athletic Director E. P. "Cy" Twombly.

The slate is described by Twombly as "the best schedule we've had since our non-subsidized program went into effect in 1954.

The new foes are Dickinson College of Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and Carnegie Tech of Pittsburgh, with both games slated for Washington and Lee's Wilson Field. The Pennsylvania schools, whose athletic policies are similar to Washington and Lee's non-scholarship program, replace Southern Illinois University and Wittenberg College. Washington and Lee has met neither school in football before.

Last year, Coach Lee McLaughlin's Generals, composed largely of freshmen and sophomores, turned in a 1-7 record.

The schedule: September 26, Centre, home; October 3, Dickinson, home; October 10, Franklin and Marshall, away; October 17, Randolph-Macon, home; October 24, open; October 31, Hampden-Sydney, away; November 7, Carnegie Tech, home; November 14, Sewanee, away; and November 21, Washington (Mo.), away.

■ WINTER SPORTS TEAMS at Washington and Lee ran the gamut of success this year. There was a winner—the swimmers, who turned in their customary good showing in winning six and losing just three dual matches. There was a break-even mark—the wrestlers, who won five and lost five, and in doing so showed promise of a return to brighter days on the mats for the Generals. And there was a loser—the basketball team, playing without grants-in-aid boys for the first time in five years, which went 15 losing games before beating Randolph-Macon in the final contest of the year.

For cage coach Bob McHenry, the season was a study in frustration. The losses came hard, particularly the three overtime decisions the Generals dropped to William and Mary, Hampden-Sydney, and Davidson. They played good ball, but lacked rebound strength and scoring depth.

Coach Cy Twombly's swimmers, hurt by the loss of backstroke ace Pete Duncan through a shoulder injury, nevertheless were strong again this year. Displaying some unusual freshmen talent in Bill Deal and Elliott Maynard, who set new school records in the conventional breaststroke, the Generals upset Virginia Tech for their biggest triumph. Losses to Virginia, Duke, and Pittsburgh marred the record.

New freshmen recruits for wrestling coach Dick Miller helped the mat team to improve on its 2-8 1957-58 season. The Generals were very strong in the lower weights, but lacked consistent performance in the upper brackets. Captain Dennis Patton, 8-2 for the year, won the Mathis Memorial Trophy as the team's outstanding performer.

Here's a rundown of prospects for the spring sports: Baseball—good chance to improve on last year's 5-9 record, with soph Roy Carpenter (4-4) back on the mound. Track—Coach Lee McLaughlin's football boys should improve track mentor Norm Lord's hopes for a winning season. Golf—all six regulars return, plus some fine frosh prospects. Tennis—enough veterans return to assure another winning season. Lacrosse—a pretty fair first unit will have to go all the way, for the Generals will lack depth for the first time in years.

DR. EDGAR F. SHANNON, JR., '39

Dr. Edgar Shannon, Jr. Is Selected To Head University of Virginia

THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA has chosen a Washington and Lee alumnus, Dr. Edgar Finley Shannon, Jr., as its next president. He will take office during the summer, succeeding former Virginia Governor Colgate W. Darden, Jr., who is retiring after twelve years on the job.

A former Rhodes scholar, Edgar has been associate professor of English at the University of Virginia since 1956. He was selected as president by the trustees on February 28, 1959, from a field of some 160 nominees. Governor Lindsay Almond made a special trip to Charlottesville that same day to meet Edgar and to congratulate him.

The new college president is an internationally known scholar and author in the field of Victorian literature. He has masters' degrees from both Duke University and Harvard University, and his doctorate from Merton College at Oxford. He is the author of numerous books, articles and reviews. His principal works are non-historical, and deal with critical writings on the novel, bibliographical studies and works on Alfred Lord Tennyson and his times. He is working on two books—an edition of Tennyson's letters which have been made available to him by the Tennyson family for editing, and a sequel to an earlier volume entitled "Tennyson and the Reviewers."

Things have been happening in rapid succession to Edgar in the past three years. In February 1956, he was married to the former Eleanor Bosworth of Memphis, dean of women at Southwestern College there. He joined the Virginia faculty later that year. The Shannons became the parents of two small daughters, Eleanor, in 1957, and Elizabeth, on Christmas day, 1958, and now they are preparing to move from Hessian Hills to the president's mansion on Carr's Hill.

Edgar is the son of the late Dr. E. F. Shannon, who was professor of English at Washington and Lee for 24 years. The record shows that Edgar, Jr., was an outstanding student here, receiving A's on all courses with the single exception of a B in a Latin course. He was also a half-mile track champion, vice-president of the student body, president of Beta Theta Pi, and president of the Graham-Lee Literary Society.

After being awarded his master's degree from Duke, he entered Navy service in June, 1941, and was discharged in 1946 as a lieutenant commander. He participated in most of the major Pacific campaigns and witnessed the final surrender of the Japanese in Tokyo bay. Upon his discharge, he enrolled at Harvard's graduate school, and won a master's degree in 1947. He became a Rhodes scholar at Oxford and received his Ph.D. degree there in 1949. He was appointed to Harvard's faculty in 1950 as an instructor and later became assistant professor of English. In 1953-54, he was given leave to return to England for a year of research on Tennyson. He continued at Harvard until his appointment to Virginia in 1956.

Edgar, now 40, will be the University's fourth president. Three previous presidents have served for an aggregate of fifty-five years. Prior to 1905, the university had no president.

Fifty Years of Fancy Dress Balls Observed Here

IN FIFTY YEARS of Fancy Dress Balls at Washington and Lee, countless hundreds of young men and their dates have danced through a colorful and elaborate pageantry in costume. And although the times and the faces have changed, the excitement generated by the balls through the years has remained constant.

This year, the golden anniversary of Fancy Dress was observed with the theme, "Golden Jubilee: 1959." Decorations and costumes depicted the highlights of eight of the most successful Balls of the past. These sub-themes included the First Kentucky Derby Ball, Mardi Gras, The World of Shakespeare, A Night in Monte Carlo, Washington's Inauguration, The Court of Louis XIV, and King Arthur's Court. Many alumni will remember participating in these outstanding events.

Washington and Lee's Fancy Dress Balls trace their beginning to the inspiration of the school's librarian, Miss Annie Jo White, who entertained a group of her student friends with a costume party one February evening in 1907.

Miss Annie sought to make the affair an annual event, for she felt students needed something to spark the mid-winter dullness, particularly following the rugged first-semester examinations. It was rough going at first, getting student interest to respond, but she persevered to the point that the entire student body came to look upon Fancy Dress as the highlight of the school's social calendar.

In fact, in 1928, the New York Times described the ball as "the South's outstanding collegiate social event." Since that time, stories and pictures of the event have appeared in Life, Look and other national magazines, and numbers of newspapers. Its music has been broadcast on network radio hook-ups to the entire nation.

Since 1916, the dances have been held in Doremus gymnasium, which has literally been transformed for Fancy Dress by armies of eager workers. In 1928, one thousand people danced while four hundred watched—the beginning of an era in which Fancy Dress enjoyed its greatest years and biggest successes. During this time, a professional decorator came from Baltimore to decorate the gymnasium, and Van Horn's of Philadelphia brought down over $6,000 worth of its finest costumes. Between eight and ten thousand dollars was spent annually on Fancy Dress—and in the years when a dollar was worth 100 cents, too!

Mrs. L. J. Desha, who acted as advisor, beginning in 1932, declares, "Other than the Mardi Gras balls in New Orleans, no other social affair in the South ever attempted to be so extravagant as Fancy Dress. It was actually a theatrical performance."

Fancy Dress was discontinued during the World War II years, but the balls were resumed in 1947. Today, they may not be as elaborate, or as glittering as they were in the '30's, but the balls are still serving the same purpose for which the first Fancy Dress was intended by Miss Annie. It brightens the mid-winter season, and it affords students an opportunity for relaxation and fun between exams and a new semester.

Two undergraduates, left, admire the magnificent beard grown by MURRAY WADSWORTH, president of the 1959 Fancy Dress, who portrayed GENERAL LEE. During examinations, quite a few students let shaving go, operating on the theory that, with Fancy Dress coming up, a bewhiskered face is fancier dress than a clean-shaven one. When dates arrived, however, most of the beards quickly disappeared.

COSTUMES OF THE CIVIL WAR era, and of the time of George Washington's Inauguration were the most popular garb at the Golden Jubilee of Fancy Dress, January 30, 1959, although outfits ranged all the way from bar-room belles to bearded sultans. The celebration began with a cocktail party that afternoon, in honor of the president of Fancy Dress, and climaxed that night in the glitter of the fiftieth ball. Hundreds of costumed revellers participated in the figure. The next day, a Saturday afternoon jazz concert occupied students and dates. For the first time since the early '20's, a new professional costume company put the "fancy" into the Friday ball, and a good time was had by all.

Capital Fund Campaign Exceeds $500,000

WASHINGTON AND LEE University's $2,000,000 campaign for critically needed new facilities in science and journalism has reached the one-quarter mark of its goal, under the co-chairmanship of Joseph T. Lykes, '09, and Christopher T. Chenery, '09.

Some 850 contributors—alumni, parents, friends, and corporations—have given more than $500,000 to the University's development program.

Area campaigns have been conducted in Lexington-Rockbridge county, Roanoke, and Richmond. The Lexington-Rockbridge area, with Finley Waddell, '29, as chairman has given over $63,000. Both Roanoke, with Jack B. Coulter, '49, and Richmond, with Edward J.

PRESIDENT GAINES chats with ERNEST B. WALKER, JR., '38, president of the Louisville chapter, after the dinner meeting.

McCarty, '42, as chairmen, have exceeded their goals and over $50,000 has been raised in each area.

Campaigns are now under way in Charleston, West Virginia, with Rugeley P. DeVan, '34, as chairman; Louisville, Kentucky, with Edward Rietze, Jr., '25, as chairman; Norfolk, William Ballard, '31, chairman; and in Lynchburg, Virginia, with James E. McCausland, '43, chairman.

Area campaigns are planned for forty-four areas in the United States where there is a concentration of one hundred or more of the Washington and Lee family, made up of alumni, parents, and friends. Approximately twenty of these areas will have been covered before June, and the remaining ones are slated to be carried out in the fall.

President Francis P. Gaines has keynoted the campaign dinners and will cover about 25,000 miles in his swing around the nation. This is his last tour of alumni chapters while holding the presidency of Washington and Lee, and this marks the "one last year of effort" he said he felt he owed the college before he retires in the fall.

He spoke to 350 alumni, parents, and friends in December in the Lexington-Rockbridge area. In mid-January, he met with 225 at a dinner in Roanoke, and with 450 in Richmond. Over 200 attended the alumni dinner in Charleston, West Virginia in February, and over 200 in Louisville, Norfolk, and Lynchburg. In mid-March he flew to Texas to meet with University friends in Dallas and San Antonio. He is also scheduled for addresses to groups in Charlotte, North Carolina; Atlanta, Georgia; Jacksonville, Florida; Memphis, Tennessee; Houston, Texas; New Orleans, Louisiana; Shreveport, Louisiana; Birmingham, Alabama; Chattanooga, Tennessee; Baltimore, Maryland; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; and Washington.

Organized campaigns follow each of the area dinner meetings, and from fifty to one hundred volunteer workers participate in each campaign. During the capital fund drive, a total of approximately 2,000 volunteer workers will be actively taking part in the campaign.

Organization in an area begins six weeks prior to the date set for Dr. Gaines' report of the University to alumni, parents, and friends. During that period, the chairman appoints division leaders and they in turn appoint team captains who ask alumni, parents and friends to be members of their teams. One week before the dinner, a sales school is held for the workers. Active solicitation begins the day after the dinner, and continues over the next four weeks.

Washington and Lee expects at least 90 per cent of the $2,000,000 goal by the end of 1959, according to co-chairmen Lykes and Chenery. They said a "very large measure of success" so far has been due to unusually high enthusiasm on the part of alumni workers in the various areas. In campaigns which have been conducted thus far, seven out of every ten alumni who have been contacted personally have made contributions.

Alumni Chapter News

PENINSULA

The Peninsula chapter had a short luncheon meeting at Vic Zodda's restaurant November 18, 1958, to hear an address by Dean Frank J. Gilliam. The many members who attended were pleased to hear of the up-to-date status of the University, and interesting discussions took place. Bill Washburn, '40, alumni secretary, made a few remarks to the group. Reports were heard from the various committees and were followed by the election of new officers for the coming year. These officers are: president, Beverley W. Lee, Jr., '42; vice-president, John P. Bowen, Jr., '51; secretary, Philip W. Murray, '10; treasurer, Daniel W. Wilkin-son, Jr., '38.

APPALACHIAN

The Appalachian chapter held its fall alumni meeting at the Hotel Bristol on November 22 in Bristol, Virginia. A social reception preceded the dinner meeting, which was attended by many alumni, and their wives or dates.

President Homer A. Jones, Jr., '42, presided and introduced Dr. and Mrs. William R. Hinton from the Psychology and Education department of the University. Dr. Hinton was the principal speaker and related the present University status and its future plans. The assembled alumni were most interested in hearing Dr. Hinton's remarks on the academic, administrative, social, and athletic life in Lexington.

New officers were elected for the coming year, as follows: Perry D. Hunter, '25, president, and Allan Wofford, '33, secretary-treasurer.

ATLANTA

The Atlanta chapter held a cocktail party on Saturday, November 8, following the Georgia Tech-Clemson football game. The party was held in the Tack Room of the Piedmont Driving Club, and was attended by a large number of Atlanta alumni and also out-of-state alumni who happened to be in Atlanta that weekend. Invitations were also sent to parents of students presently attending Washington and Lee, and also to friends of the University in Atlanta, and both groups were well-represented at the gathering. Ed Addison, '45, president, planned the party.

New officers were elected as follows: president, Dr. Sidney Isenberg, '42; secretary, (re-elected), Richard A. Denny, Jr., '52.

LOUISVILLE

A luncheon meeting of the Louisville Alumni chapter was held at the Pendennis Club on December 1, 1958. Principal speaker was Dr. Leon F. Sensabaugh, dean of the faculty. President Ernest Walker, '38, presided over the well-attended meeting.

CHARLOTTE

for their winter meeting. William C. Washburn, '40, alumni secretary, spoke on the 1959 University Program, after which a short question and answer session took place. Guests were introduced by president Charles L. Green, Jr., '40, and included the Reverend R. B. Campbell of Hickory, North Carolina. Two prospective students were also introduced.

CLEVELAND

A Washington and Lee alumni-student luncheon was given during Christmas week at the University Club and was attended by some forty members, including several prospective students from Country Day School, John Burroughs School, and University City High. Present students at Washington and Lee gave informative talks concerning the courses offered, fraternity life, and athletics at the University.

NEW YORK

The New York alumni chapter held a cocktail-dinner meeting at the Princeton Club on November 14. Steve Campbell, '41, presided and conducted a short business meeting in which Emmett Poindexter, '20, treasurer, reported on chapter finances. The following new officers for the forthcoming year were nominated and the slate was unanimously approved by vote of the group:

President, E. Stewart Epley, '49; vice-president, H. Richard Sandstrom, Jr., '41; vice-president Up State, W. L. Webster, '12; vice-president New Jersey, Emerson Dickman, Jr., '37; vice-president Connecticut, L. T. Brown, '19; vice-president Long Island, Kenneth B. de Water, Jr., '41; vice-president Westchester, Robert E. Steele, III, '41; secretary-treasurer, Emmett W. Poindexter, '20.

Councilmen: Stephen E. Campbell, Jr., '41; Charles F. Skinner, '38; Matthews A. Griffith, '40.

Following the business meeting the group was addressed by James Whitehead, Director of University Development, on the capital fund campaign. Bill Washburn, '40, alumni secretary, reported on the status of the student body and faculty.

BALTIMORE

The annual fall meeting of the Baltimore chapter was held on November 22 at the Blackstone Apartment. The hospitality hour, beginning at 7 o'clock, opened the meeting. After a short business session in which the finances of the chapter were reported by the treasurer, James McDonald, the meeting was addressed by Dr. Ross Borden, professor of English at the University. His talk concerning the present status and future plans of the University was genuinely received and was followed by a few remarks from Bill Washburn, secretary of the association. The new officers for the Baltimore chapter were installed as follows: president, Gideon N. Stieff, '52; vice-president, James R. McDonald, '50; treasurer, John D. Mayhew, '26; secretary, Harry M. Ford, Jr., '55.

Dinner music was supplied by a small orchestra and dancing followed.

What! No Letter from Class Agent?

PERHAPS SOME OF YOU HAVE WONDERED why you have not received the usual letter from your Class Agent regarding the 1958-59 Alumni Fund. We assure you the agents are not negligent. Here is the explanation:

In January, 1958, after a long and extensive analysis and survey study, the University Board of Trustees approved the proposal to engage in a University Development Program designed to raise capital funds to meet the critical need for new instructional buildings. The operation of this program got into full swing in July, 1958.

From the very outset, it was established that the identity of the Alumni Fund and the Parents' Fund would be maintained during the campaign and that for the initial phase they would be merged with the University Development Program. Under these plans, and to avoid duplicate solicitation, it was determined that any gift from an alumnus or parent to the capital campaign would also, and at the same time, be recorded as a contribution to those respective funds.

The University Development Program is organized on a territorial or area concept (as opposed to class). Each of the forty-four areas will, in turn, have its own separate campaign. Accordingly, the Class Agent was relieved, for this 1958-59 year, of the responsibility for soliciting his classmates.

Therefore, though you have not received a solicitation memo from your agent, he will be writing to you very shortly to tell about the big Reunion of All Classes which will be held on campus June 11-13 and the plans for your particular class.

University Appoints Proctor

CHANGING CONDITIONS in college work and life frequently demand a revision of procedures, not only in academic affairs, but in student practices and modes of living, and consequently, in University personnel.

One such development in staff personnel at Washington and Lee was reflected on January 2, 1959, when Charles Fletcher Murray assumed the new post of University Proctor. Mr. Murray started to work the same day to solve a series of thefts, which occurred in the freshman dormitory during the Christmas vacation.

Through Mr. Murray's efforts, the culprit, a fifteen-year-old janitor's helper, was apprehended. While assisting a regular janitor to clean the rooms during the holiday season, the youth had been helping himself to students' radios, electric razors, cuff links, fountain pens, coats, and a watch. The items were recovered the same day and returned to the freshmen.

Some days later, Proctor Murray, working with Lexington police, recovered $500 worth of property stolen from student automobiles parked on or near the campus. The articles included a radio, typewriter, and a quantity of clothing. The thief was a Lexington juvenile.

Mr. Murray is a Lexingtonian, a veteran of the United States Marine Corps with four years of service in World War II. He is thirty-seven years old, and includes in his experience some years of effective service with the local police force. As Proctor, he serves as a non-uniformed official.

The installation of the office of Proctor was a result of developments which took place last spring. As has been related previously, the faculty recognized the need for a revision and adaption to recent developments of certain general principles and procedures connected with student life and conduct. These regulations went into effect last fall, and the general verdict on the campus and in the community has been one of approval of the goals sought, and the steps taken.

The transferral of responsibility for fraternity conduct from the Interfraternity Council to the faculty, through the office of Dean of Students, demanded a study of the operational machinery advisable. Inquiry into conditions on the camp of a dozen or more colleges approximately comparable to Washington and Lee in size and nature, indicated that Washington and Lee was the only one of the group which did not employ special staff personnel to maintain satisfactory conditions in social and non-academic affairs. These officials were called variously watchmen, patrolmen, or proctors. One or more colleges smaller than Washington and Lee had as many as three or four such staff members. Acting upon the faculty's recommendation, the board of trustees created the position of University Proctor, and Mr. Murray was appointed.

Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam stated: "The office of proctor is not a punitive or judicial one. While the proctor operates to assist in the control of violations of accepted modes of conduct, he will have many opportunities of rendering help to students—such as he has already demonstrated in two sets of thefts in which students were the victims, in controlling offensive conduct on the part of students from other institutions, and in one or more automobile accidents."

The Ring-tum Phi has editorially joined numerous individual students in expression of approval of Proctor Murray's initial procedures in the handling of his job.

In addition to his responsibility in connection with general student life, under the office of the Dean of Students, the proctor will work on campus traffic and parking problems resulting from the steadily increasing number of automobiles. In this work, the Proctor is under the general direction of D. E. Brady, '37, superintendent of buildings and grounds.

elected in January as president and treasurer of Madison Square Garden in New York City. He had formerly been a director, and secretary, of the corporation. He is a past president of the North Carolina Bar Association and the Asheville Chamber of Commerce. He is now president of the board of directors of the Buncombe County United Fund, and supreme treasurer of the Knights of Columbus national organization. He is also on the board of directors of the holding company which owns Yankee Stadium, and is a former president of the Asheville Industrial Council. He was appointed Knight of St. Gregory by Pope Pius XI in 1938 in recognition of his service as a Catholic layman, and was raised to rank of knight commander of Order of St. Gregory the Great in 1946.

JOHN LANCASTER has been practicing law in his home town of Farmville, Virginia, since graduation from Washington and Lee Law School. It has been noted by one of his fellow students that John has come as near to living life exactly as he has wanted than any man he knew. Practicing enough law on the Main Street of Farmville to make a comfortable living, Mr. Lancaster also enjoys fishing, hunting and walking in the woods. The local newspaper refers to him as a lawyer giving "curb side service," as he is more often found in front of the bank building on Main Street than in his office. Mr. Lancaster's wife died several years ago after a lingering illness and he has lived alone in Farmville since. He has no children.

COL. PAUL A. ROCKWELL was a delegate to the Ottawa International Conference of the English Speaking Union, representing Asheville, North Carolina. In a report to the Asheville chapter, he said there are over nine thousand English-speaking boys and girls who are exchange students in our country now. "We all know that the most faithful and lasting friendships are those formed in youth," he declared. "If we can gain the respect, affection and friendship of those thousands of young people who have come from other lands to study in our schools and colleges, we will have a treasure of infinite value, a friendship and moral support for our country that will last a lifetime. The worst enemies we have in Europe, South America, Asia, Africa, are people from the so-called underdeveloped or colonial countries who have been educated in our schools but who were not received in our midst as they hoped and expected to be. The most relentless enemies we have in Red China, for instance, are graduates from American universities. In the Rif War against Spain and France, Morocco 1925, Abd el Krim, valorous leader of the Rif mountaineer tribesmen, and his brother were graduates from the Spanish School of Mines. They felt while studying in Madrid that they were shabbily treated by the Spaniards, and they developed a bitter hatred for Europeans, which actuated them to try to drive the French and Spaniards out of their country. Indians educated in English universities led the movement to drive the British out of India." Colonel Rockwell believes that if a country brings to its colleges young future leaders from other nations to be educated, but does not assimilate them by taking them into the homes and hearts of its people, it will make everlasting enemies. "Let us all strive to win over not only all the English-speaking exchange students in our country, but all other strangers in our midst as well. If we have staunch friends abroad, our civilization and our nation will survive."

ART WOOD, editorial cartoonist of the Pittsburgh Press, was the subject of a feature story himself recently in the Press. It told of his hobby of collecting original drawings by artists, cartoonists and illustrators famous all over the world now and in the past. One whole room of his home is devoted to display or storing the drawings, which now total more than 2300, and represent the work of 735 artists. To obtain them, Art has rummaged through old basements, trash baskets at the Treasury Department, New York second hand book stores, and the like. A great many of his drawings were obtained from the artists themselves—simply by asking. Art has some original drawings of Barney Google, Tillie the Toiler, and Popeye, some drawn before 1900. He also has illustrations by James Montgomery Flagg, Norman Rockwell, Gordon Grant, Bud Fisher, Al Capp, Rudolph Dirks, and others.
