Evans Dining Hall Is New Scene
Of 1962's Night of 'High Society'

FANCY DRESS for 1962 wasn't really fancy dress at all, yet virtually everyone who attended the 53rd annual renewal of this hallowed Washington and Lee tradition would agree that perhaps it was the fanciest Fancy Dress of them all.

There were several breaks with tradition for this one, and if they become permanent breaks it will reflect the general enthusiasm and interest which the 1962 Fancy Dress generated among the student body.

This year's ball was not a costume ball, at least not in the strict sense of the term, and that marked one departure from a practice that Miss Annie Jo White is said to have started back in 1907. There was the usual Fancy Dress theme, but it wasn't something like "An Odyssey Through Empires," or "The Land of Oz," or "Mardi Gras," or any of the other extravaganzas that alumni associate with Fancy Dress. Instead, the 1962 theme was "High Society," and the costumes involved white tie and tails for the gentlemen and elegant formal ballroom gowns for the ladies.

If the ball had been held in Doremus Gymnasium, it might have been difficult to distinguish Fancy Dress from any other formal dance that has taken place there. But, at the students' request, it wasn't held in Doremus, and it was this break with tradition that transformed an essentially formal dance into the fanciest Fancy Dress ball ever.

The 1962 setting was Letitia Pate Evans Dining Hall. The great hall's soaring columns, its high, vaulted ceiling, the magnificent chandeliers, and smooth marble underfoot blended with dancers, orchestra, and music in a way that made difficult the realization that such prosaic items as scrambled eggs, mashed potatoes, and congealed salad were normally more appropriate for the building's general purpose.

Economically, the ball was a smash success—both for the dollar-conscious Dance Board and for some equally dollar-conscious students. The overall attendance was between 1,300 and 1,400, and the student attendance was nearly double the normal count of some 250 couples for recent Fancy Dress affairs. Because each date was expected to possess her own costume already, students had only to rent their formal dress from the same company that usually provides the jester suits, the pirate get-ups, and the Confederate uniforms.

There was very little that Fancy Dress President Bill Ide, a senior from Statesville, North Carolina, and his vice-presidents could do to decorate or improve on the Dining Hall setting. The fact that none of them had ever attended Fancy Dress before didn't really matter.

While hundreds of guests lined three sides of the dance floor and chaperones and official guests watched from the balcony, twenty-five couples evolved the opening figure based on the presentation of notables at a state ceremonial ball in the nation's capital. While Professor Ross Borden announced the ambassadors, cabinet members, and other notables, figure participants emerged from the world of stainless steel pots, pans, and ladles of the dining hall kitchen into the world of make believe that has been a part of every Fancy Dress.

Duke Ellington and his famous orchestra, playing against the backdrop of the University coat of arms, made the music, and the ballroom and its throng of exuberant young people made the 1962 Fancy Dress a memorable one.

The University was put to much trouble arranging for the ball. Tables and chairs had to be stored at various points about the campus, then moved back immediately in order that interruption of normal dining hall service would be minimized.

Everyone was caught up in the spirit of doing something new and different, and everyone was pleased that it turned out so well. Even Miss White would have agreed that this one was the fanciest.

The elegance of formal dress was appropriate for the ball room, but amid the tools of the kitchen where the figure formed, it was amusingly incongruous.

Dr. Atwood New Dean Of Students

DR. EDWARD C. ATWOOD, JR. became Washington and Lee University's new Dean of Students on February 1, taking over a job held by Dean Frank J. Gilliam for over thirty years.

Dean Gilliam continues as Dean of Admissions, another job that he has held for many years and one that has become so complex today that he says it requires his full attention. Since 1951 Dean Gilliam officially has "worn two hats" in the University administration, and his unofficial association of student and admissions responsibilities goes back even further.

A former associate professor of economics at Washington and Lee, Dean Atwood returned to the University from New York where he was a Consultant—Investor Relations Research for General Electric.

President Fred C. Cole emphasized the importance of the administration realignment when he said:

"Dr. Atwood's appointment makes it possible for Dean Gilliam to concentrate on the increasingly complex and increasingly important matter of admissions. He has felt for some time that his admissions work requires his full attention. Following a careful study of the matter, I have concurred in his recommendation that the functions of his office be divided and that he be given opportunity for concentration on admissions and the problems of relationship between Washington and Lee and secondary schools."

Dean Gilliam has the full-time assistance of James D. Farrar, who became Associate Dean of Admissions, while continuing to direct the University's student financial aid and scholarship program.

As Dean of Students, Dr. Atwood is responsible administratively for the further development of a healthy balance among various facets of student life at Washington and Lee. His main job is to see that students study and behave themselves. He has assistance from Dr. David W. Sprunt, University Chaplain and Associate Dean of Students.

"I am extremely pleased that Dean Atwood has rejoined the staff," Dean Gilliam said. "We know from his past work here what a thoroughly competent person he is and I am impressed by the excellent start he has made in this new work. He has had wide experience in working with Washington and Lee students in many and varied activities. I look forward to close association and close cooperation with him."

Dean Atwood, who is 39, is a native of New York City and a graduate of Princeton University where he earned A.B., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees. He joined the Washington and Lee faculty in 1952 as an assistant professor of economics, and was promoted to associate professor in 1959.

He left Washington and Lee in 1960 to join the General Electric Company's staff of economists in New York. Since then, he and his wife and two young sons have made their home in Wilton, Connecticut.

While at Washington and Lee, Dean Atwood gained a reputation among students as one of the University's most demanding but most popular professors. He taught courses in elementary economics, money and banking, business cycles, and banking problems.

As professor of economics, Dean Atwood devotes a portion of his time to teaching in the School of Commerce and Administration.

A Confluence of Two Streams: The Academic and the Regional

Dr. Joseph Robert, Former President Of Hampden-Sydney and Now Professor of History at the University of Richmond, Gave the 1962 ODK Address. Like All Good Speeches, It "Reads" As Well As It "Listens."

DR. ROBERTS Accepts Congratulations On His Address.

PRESIDENT COLE, MR. PAGE, members of the administration, the faculty, and the student body—I greatly appreciate these warm words of welcome. Having suffered in my own experience from a multitude of assembly speakers, I realize that there is only one appropriate way to show my gratitude. I shall restrict my remarks to 25 minutes, allowing, of course, the usual 10 per cent declamatory tolerance. Also, according to my present plans, I shall recite no more than twice—two times, mind you—the full names of that brace of prominent Virginians who in combination represent the legal title of this institution. And for historians speaking in Lexington, I dare say that this last restraint may be something of a record.

But first of all I would like to congratulate that member of your faculty who is among the founders of the leadership fraternity directing the exercises of this day, Rupert N. Latture. I shall not embarrass him by delivering a premature eulogy, but I would like to remind you that the noblest art is the art of living, living generously and graciously, and this is his biography.

Omicron Delta Kappa is the lengthened shadow of good men furthering the grand reconciliation between the leaders and the led, the teachers and the taught. Thus Professor Latture is numbered with those few individuals whose efforts have already been translated into permanent and wholesome corporate form.

In preamble I should warn you that I am the unashamed advocate of the platitude. Something can be said for Benjamin Franklin's maxims, for the morals in Aesop's fables and for the didactic flourishes in McGuffey's Readers. In that spirit I shall proceed to elaborate two pedestrian statements: first you are in a particular kind of university, and, second, you are in a special part of America.

As members of this academic community, you share in the grand tradition of schoolmen, ranging backwards certainly as far as those gowned scholars who walked the cobblestones of the medieval cities, dividing their time between battling ignorance by day and the townsmen by night. To give superficial evidence of your kinship with the medieval scholar, let us peek over the shoulders of a student who is earnestly writing home—this is 500 years ago:—To “his venerable master” he sends “Greeting.” Then according to the letter writing guide, as quoted by Haskins, he scribbles away about as follows:

“This is to inform you that I am studying at Oxford with the greatest deligence, but the matter of money stands . . . in the way of my promotion, as it is now two months since I spent the last of what you sent me. The city is expensive”—remember this is Oxford not Lexington—“and makes many demands; I have to rent lodging, buy necessities, and provide for many other things which I cannot now specify. Wherefore I respectfully beg your paternity that by the promptings of divine pity you may assist me that I may be able to complete what I have well begun. For you must know that without Ceres and Bacchus Apollo grows cold.”

Advice Instead of Cash

Now the medieval fathers, like some parents today, occasionally did a bit of investigating and decided to send advice and complaints instead of cash. One reproved his son for “preferring license to restraint and play to work and strumming a guitar while the others are at their studies.” He was the lead-off man in an early combo, I judge. But your connections with the larger story of learning are horizontal as well as vertical, geographical as well as historical.

Several months ago I was fascinated by the cheers and shouts of students at the University of Athens in Greece. They were, it developed, merely putting pressure on the administration to reduce fees, the crops in Crete having failed. But the sound effects exactly duplicated those at a freshman rally preceding a big American football game. The lodges of the various nations at Uppsala in Sweden are similar to the fraternity houses here at Washington and Lee. And student caps over Europe, absurd travesties on formal academic regalia, remind us of our own rat caps. And most telling of all, professorial problems and student yawns are worldwide.

However, back of it all is the relentless search for truth, the restless desire to find patterns in things and in thought. Thus your experiences here have a dimension in time and in area which give you much in common with the young men in other countries and in other generations. Yours is not an isolated venture, though I think that in nature and in quality it is something quite beyond the ordinary.

I shall not attempt to trace by generations your academic parentage. In spirit the line goes back to the old College of New Jersey, and then in more tortuous fashion to the ancient seats of learning in England, thence to the continent. Nor shall I try to pinpoint your birth date as an institution of higher learning. Thank goodness here in America we have that special form of elective system which permits each institution to select its own date of founding. And if this pleasant liberty is not discovered in the Preamble of the Declaration of Independence then so much the worse for Jefferson's reputation.

But on one point I shall be dogmatic. There is no argument as to your scholarly integrity, the strictest form of academic legitimacy. You are in direct line of the greatest of all institutional patterns; you are the brilliant example of the independent liberal arts and sciences, the fertile combination which trains the tough mind, the tender heart, the sensitive spirit. You are enjoying the most practical curriculum in the world, one which best prepares for a future known only as a season of change. And unless I have been misinformed, this effervescent, humanistic concept spills over into the professional schools and departments to such a degree that all parts of the university appreciably share in the emancipating spirit.

Your kind of school and mine represent private, non-tax-supported enterprise. For the sake of America, it is essential that this type of university should continue strong in full partnership with our tax-subsidized corporations. In the Western world many formerly independent institutions have gone the easy way. Oxford and Cambridge today may be described as wards of the British government. They appear relatively free in their internal operations, this for a variety of reasons, one of them being the fact that these particular universities supply the leading servants of the state and thus in quiet fashion they really control the Ministry. But I would not relish seeing Dr. Cole join the presidents of VPI and William and Mary and the superintendent of VMI in the biennial and bare-headed treks to the Richmond hotels and to Capitol Square petitioning the legislators for funds.

The Role Of Incentive

Another feature of the institutions of our type is the incentive system. Quite in contrast to some elementary schools in which little Willie is promoted merely because he has another birthday, you students are subjected to the relentless ordeal of measured performance and commensurate rewards.

Indulge me for a moment while I append a footnote to the incentive theme. One day, in running through legal records, I stumbled on the following fact certified in the Statutes at Large and in the Opinions of The Attorney General. When Oliver Hazard Perry captured the British squadron on Lake Erie, during the war of 1812, and reported in language immortal, “We have met the enemy and they are ours,” he was literally correct. They were his. Subsequently

ODK President ROSEWELL
PAGE Presents New Members

the United States government bought the vessels from him for $255,000, and this sum was duly divided among men and officers in those days of prize money.

Now I do not seriously advocate a pay-as-you-go policy for the Department of Defense. But I do value all evidences of rewards according to performance. In the words of a great New England schoolmaster, "You deserve the fifth freedom, the freedom to be your best." But I add that you should have the freedom to succeed and you should have that wonderful freedom to fail if you're not up to the mark. Yes, yours is the marvelous heritage of the liberal arts and sciences in an academic environment strong with the force of centuries back of it.

Now, while on the subject of academic inheritance, I pause to pay tribute to the honor system on this campus. I shall not weary you with the depressing recital of details elsewhere. In South Europe one astute observer of educational institutions reported to me that the student there feels cheated if he isn't afforded an opportunity to cheat. Skeptical critics in far places, hearing about the honor system in this state, are tempted to call it a surface morality, a code in which it doesn't matter what we do just so long as we keep a coat and tie on while doing it. In other words, we are accused of a sort of Brooks Brothers morality, or shall we say a worship of the trinity of Hart, Schaffner and Marx. This accusation of superficiality I deny from watching the agonies of self-administered justice in which through pain and anguish honor is kept bright.

If here in a variety of collegiate primogeniture you inherit a double portion of the great liberating legacy of the western world, you also share bountifully in a regional pattern, a pattern of significance in any consideration of leadership. And the point is relevant whether you were born in Bangor, Maine, or in Shuqualak, Mississippi. Now here I call attention to a rough-hewn philosopher known as Satchel Paige, the indestructible Negro baseball pitcher. Unfortunately, he is not in any of the anthologies available to me, but as well as I can recall several years ago Satch, and the name comes from the size of his feet, said this, "Avoid fatty foods, they angry up the blood. Jangle gently when you walk, it loosens the juices. Go gently on the vices. Don't look back, something may be gaining on you."

Now gentlemen of Washington and Lee University, that something gaining on us may be the past itself. What is that Southern past? There is sometimes a nostalgia for yesterday that never was. Often we try to eat our Southern hot biscuits and have them too. A certain conservative congregation in the city of Richmond searched for a minister for months. When I asked why the delay, I was told that the people had established two requirements: the minister must be a Confederate veteran, but he must not be over 30 years of age.

Confluence Of Two Streams

Bold indeed is the visitor who in this gathering attempts to distill meaning and precept from the history of the South. He is in the company of authorities certified by the excellence of their publications, factual and interpretative. But the occasion demands at least an attempt, because you are at the confluence of two streams, the academic and the regional. Each is molding your life.

Any historian by the careful selection of facts may prove whatever he wants to prove about the South, old or new. I mean prove to his own satisfaction. I had a chastening experience in the Italian town of Brindisi last spring. The only newspaper headline I could read was about four inches high beginning "Montgomery, Alabama..." And I knew what was coming next. In a bookmobile nearby, there was but one American volume so far as I could see and this was Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin. Would I be too partisan to suggest that perhaps the people in this little village, which marked the end of the Appian Way, were receiving something less than a true picture of the South?

I readily and regretfully grant Southern deficiencies past and present. There is indeed a vast calendar of errors to be remedied, sins for which we must atone. I underscore the fact that we must not censor our shortcomings. Indeed, there must be a free exchange of thoughts and of information, bad as the information may be. Certainly we cannot add to the Iron Curtain and to the Bamboo Curtain a curtain of white columns through which ideas may neither come nor go.

A Planter As A Leader

But if muckraking becomes too much the fashion we may fail to nurture those elements in the regional tradition which are inspiring and relevant today, forces which openly and subtly play on this very institution. Without at all succumbing to the Cavalier myth, we may conclude that at its best the plantation system generated a supreme sense of responsible leadership. In his hospitality, gaming, horse racing and dancing, the colonial planter appeared to concentrate on the pleasures of this world. He had in him enough of the frontiersman to be incurably optimistic and enough of the English landed gentry to insist on a high standard of living—a combination, I might add, which led him into perennial debt.

Yet with all these external evidences of frivolity and love of pleasure, no quality of the planters was more marked than the serious acceptance of public responsibility. They were managing large enterprises, they must account for the health and labor of many servants. Looking to Europe for markets and for supplies, they cultivated a breadth of view which overcame provincialism otherwise inherent in rural life. Power they had, to be sure, but power controlled by a stewardship to the conscience of a gentleman, and a gentleman owed the best of his talents to the state.

A generation trained in the responsible natural leadership of the plantation area served the nation with conspicuous success during the Revolutionary and early national period. In social relations, this ideal was illustrated in the concept of noblesse oblige which softened all phases of life.

And now I shall soon exhaust my quota of citations for the two generals, hitherto nameless, after whom this university is titled. Both Washington and Lee applied their talents to plantation management for extended periods of time. And these experiences were not without influence on their personalities.

This area is not only Southern but Virginia, not only Virginian but it is in a special quarter of Virginia, a quarter which in the past possessed a mood and convictions which set it apart from other sections of the state. Today the deadly same soft drink and cigarette advertising may create a monotonous uniformity over the entire countryside of America, but it was not always so. Yes, something good, very good, came from Rockbridge. Let us listen to two men from this county speaking in the Virginia House of Delegates in 1832. The critical subject under debate was none other than the institution of slavery. Samuel McDowell Moore said—and this is no abolitionist—Samuel McDowell Moore said “Slavery is at best but an intolerable evil and can never be submitted to except from stern necessity. . . . Liberty is too dear to the heart of man ever to be given up for any earthly consideration.” And then his colleague, James McDowell, Jr., in a transcendentalist flourish protested that despite any treatment accorded the slave—“the idea that he was born to be free—will survive it all. It is allied to his hope of immortality—it is the etheral part of his nature which oppression cannot reach; it is a torch lit up in his soul by the hand of the Deity and never meant to be extinguished by the hand of man.” But Virginia temporized and faltered and turned. No one can be certain but I venture to suggest that if Virginia had followed the lead of Rockbridge County in 1832 there may not have been a Civil War.

Parenthetically, I remind you that a president of this institution, Dr. Henry Ruffner, 15 years after this debate, presented before the local Franklin Society a vigorous anti-slavery address which subsequently was published.

That Magnificent and Flexible Period

If you will search for it, then, there is here in this Valley a decision of bold and thoughtful leadership on which you may well pattern yourselves. Yours is that magnificent and flexible period in life when all things are possible. Today one occasionally hears from way out in right field cries for a man on horseback. Perhaps the shallow person who by report recently requested Mr. Kennedy to get off Caroline’s tricycle and mount a horse was merely trying to play with words. But when somebody talks to me about a man on horseback the first question I want answered is “What is the name of the horse?” If it happens to be the name of a famous animal who occupied a stable a few hundred yards from here, maybe I’ll go back for a second look. Otherwise, frankly I choose Kennedy’s tricycle over Khrushchev’s troika. Of course, we want no dictator, military or otherwise.

Now the kind of leadership which is our ideal displays a central, self-denying element. There are other features certainly, such as the difficult talent of suffering fools gladly. But especially we need the art of noble accommodation, the gift for reconciling the extremes. Believe me, one does not automatically acquire Lee’s stature merely by taking a second journey to Appomatox. I suggest that the hard, practical spirit of accommodation such as was displayed in the Constitutional Convention and in the first half of the 19th century shows that the techniques of compromise in matters of procedure is neither immoral nor unpatriotic. Let this spirit of patience and tolerance invite ideas old and new. It is sad to see a man without ideas. It is catastrophic to see ideas without men, ideas hovering, seeking incarnation. In God’s economy men may be replaceable but there are some ideas which are irreplaceable. And one of these is found in Holy Writ where it says that “If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all and servant of all.” This is leadership.

On June 10 of this year Dr. Charles Malik, former president of the General Assembly of the United States, brilliantly reviewed the matters of hope and promise before the world. And reciting the freedom of men and the freedom of God took exception to those well-meaning gentlemen who believe that they have discovered the laws of society in the rhythm of growth and decay. This is in fact a season of hope. People are expectant, they cry for leadership. I quote Dr. Malik: “If Western civilization goes down, it will be only because its leadership has failed to show it the way. There is no impersonal law of growth and decay here at work whatsoever. There is the very personal moral failure of the leaders to show the way. And a real way out most certainly there is. The actual ready potentialities of this civilization in every sphere are so tremendous, so overpowering, that with the proper coordination and the right voice of leadership it can rise to any challenge. The greatest danger today is that either this leadership is not forthcoming or that its voice will come too late.” (End of that significant quotation).

Leadership Is Forthcoming

But gentlemen, as I look about me today I am convinced that leadership is forthcoming. We do have hope. Hope is just as certain as are the excellencies at this university where the best of the old and the best of the new are in powerful combination, where the glories of the great academic traditions and the great regional traditions encourage leadership, leadership resilient in technique, noble in purpose, self-denying in spirit. It is the special virtue of this fraternity which we celebrate today, a fraternity founded on these very acres, that it urges the sort of leadership without which we cannot long endure.

University Joins Three Other Colleges To Form College Athletic Conference

THE FORMATION of a new athletic conference among Centre College of Kentucky, Southwestern at Memphis, the University of the South, and Washington and Lee University was announced in January by President Fred C. Cole. Simultaneous announcements were made on other member schools' campuses in Danville, Kentucky, Memphis, Tennessee, and Sewanee, Tennessee.

President Cole said the new organization will be known as the College Athletic Conference and will become operational in 1962-63. The conference will sponsor intercollegiate competition in football, basketball, golf, tennis, track and field, and baseball. Other sports may be added later, President Cole said.

Under the conference's Articles of Organization, a "cardinal principle" of the league is "that all participation in sports by members of its teams shall be solely because of interest in and the enjoyment of the game.

"No financial aid shall be given to any student which is conditioned upon, or for the purpose of encouraging, his participation in intercollegiate sports," the articles state. "All financial aids of the member institutions shall be administered by a single agency of the faculty. No aid funds shall be specifically reserved for athletes, and the directors of athletics and coaches shall have no voice or participation in the determination of recipients or amounts of financial aid to any student. Criteria for admission to the individual member institutions shall be the same for all students."

The conference will be governed by a Board of Directors composed of the presidents of the member institutions. The chairmanship will be rotated among the directors at their discretion. Vice Chancellor and President Edward McCrady of the University of the South will be the Board's first chairman. Other members are President Thomas A. Spragens of Centre, President Peyton N. Rhodes of Southwestern, and President Cole.

Additional members may be admitted to the conference upon unanimous approval of the Board of Directors.

While the four founding members are all Southern institutions, President Cole said it was not the intention of the Board to limit the conference geographically. He said other colleges and universities in the East and Midwest could become members.

An administrative council composed of representatives of each school will handle scheduling and other routine annual business. The council is authorized to conduct an annual basketball tournament and annual meets in the spring sports. Other sports can be added to the conference program at the council's discretion, and the council will decide how champions in each sport will be determined.

The Articles of Organization state:

"It shall be the general purpose of the Conference to foster competition in as many sports as may be successfully provided by the members within the limits of budget capabilities. A major objective shall be the encouragement of widespread participation in healthful sports by members of their various student bodies."

The articles provide no conference rules on eligibility as such. They state, "It is assumed that all member institutions will permit participation on their athletic teams only to regular, full-time students in good standing as defined by the regulations of their respective faculties."

"Each member institution has full respect for the integrity of the other members, for the selective nature of their admission standards, and for their existing standards of academic qualification," the articles declare.

All members of the new conference have had previous conference affiliations. Centre was a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference until 1945, and from 1946 to 1959, the college participated in the Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference in basketball only. Southwestern also once belonged to the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, and for five years was a member of the Dixie Conference, withdrawing in 1940.

The University of the South, known better in athletic circles as Sewanee, was a charter member of the Southeastern Conference until 1939. Washington and Lee was a charter member of the Southern Conference and ended its affiliation with that group in 1958.

Other winter sports news:

Coach Lee McLaughlin accepted the Washington Touchdown Club's trophy for the Generals who were voted the nation's Outstanding Small College Football Team for 1961.

Senior Linebacker Terry Fohs, all 145 pounds of him, was named to the Associated Press Second Team Little All-America, a step up from the Third Team honors he won as a junior.

Tackle Bob Payne of Louisville, full-back Tommy Keesee of Memphis, and half-back Charlie Gummey of Wilmington, Delaware, are football tri-captains for 1962.

The basketball team got good efforts from junior Rodger Fauber, sophomore Tom Supak, and freshman Louie Paterno, but managed to win only six of seventeen games.

The wrestlers enjoyed another good season, winning seven, losing three, and boasting a win over Virginia.

The swimming team, engaged in one of its toughest schedules on record, still came through with a highly creditable 8-2-1 record.

Senator Gore Speaks On United Nations

■ SENATOR ALBERT GORE, D-Tenn., headed up the program for Washington and Lee's eighth annual International Relations Week in early February.

Theme of the "Week" was the United Nations and its role in World Peace. The annual event is an effort on the part of the university to draw student attention to problems in international affairs. It is under the sponsorship of the School of Commerce and Administration and the student International Relations Club. Activities were directed by John M. Gunn, assistant professor of economics and political science.

In addition to Senator Gore, students heard Mahomed Khader Nawaz, a professor from India currently serving on the faculty of the School of Foreign Affairs at the University of Virginia.

Speaking in Lee Chapel, Senator Gore said that "The UN and the United States standing together can bring effective self-government to the Congo, as well as hold off any foreign threat."

Gore called the Congo "the only major diplomatic victory we've won in ten years." The senator said that Communist leadership in the Congo is exaggerated. Africans as a rule, he said, do not have sufficient sophistication for ideological devotion to Communism.

Speaking on "The United Nations at Crossroads," Professor Nawaz said that the United States has the "major responsibility for sharing the fate" of the UN. The sacrifices which must be made "for the cause of the UN" are not big in terms of money, he said. Americans must not feel that they are paying too much, he added. He called the UN bond issue "a compliment to your charitable dispositions."

■ AN ENGLISH CRITIC of American literature and a professor from the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary in Alexandria were presented in the 40th and 41st Seminars in Literature.

Montgomery Belgion, secretary of the Westwood House School Trust since 1950, a former journalist, and author of 11 books, spoke on "The Aesthetic Delusion."

Dr. Albert T. Mollegen, who teaches New Testament language and literature at the seminary in Alexandria, spoke on "Albert Camus: Facing Death and The Absurd."

Two strands, said Dr. Mollegen, both containing the problems of the 19th Century, have resulted in existentialism and Communism.

with DR. LOUIS WRIGHT

SENATOR GORE

He said existentialism is the heroic evidence of the sickness of western civilization, as is shown by the beatniks and angry young men. He continued that communism too, it appears, will have to go through the sickness since it contains, as does existentialism, all problems articulated in the arts, literature, and behavior of men. He pointed out that beatniks are evident today in Moscow.

■ DR. LOUIS B. WRIGHT, director of Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D. C., was a guest speaker in December, under sponsorship of the English Department, and is scheduled for another lecture at the University in May.

Dr. Wright spoke on "Shakespeare for the Layman."

■ JOHN E. McDONALD, the State Department's Chief of research for Southeast Asia, spoke to students in February concerning recent developments in Viet Nam and other Southeast Asian countries.

■ ALSO HEARD in February was Dr. Creighton Buck, chairman of the committee on undergraduate mathematics programs of the Mathematical Association of America. Speaking to advanced mathematics classes here, Dr. Buck discussed "Research in Mathematics."

■ THE SERMON for the annual Christmas candlelight service was delivered by Dr. John Newton Thomas, '24, professor of systematic theology at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond and a Trustee of the University.

Dr. David Sprunt, University chaplain, was presiding minister for the service which was held under the auspices of the University Christian Association. Student readers included Ashley Wiltshire of Richmond, Virginia; Roger Paine of Arlington, Virginia; John Dunnell of Brooklyn, New York; and Mervyn Clay of Bristol, Rhode Island.

■ "I DON'T WANT WAR," a former prime minister of Hungary said when he addressed a Washington and Lee audience in January under sponsorship of the Department of Journalism and Communications.

Ferenc Nagy, current chairman-president of the Assembly of Captive European Nations, continued: "I just want to advise Western governments to exercise a strong policy. The question is whether people will live under Communism in the future or under democracy. Nothing more would be necessary than for the West to stick to a resolution saying it will negotiate nothing until the Eastern European problem has been solved."

Nagy posed the question: "Would Sukarno be brave enough to threaten New Guinea, or Kassem threaten Kuwait if the United States had fought for Eastern Europe?"

THE CAMPUS

■ A SYMPOSIUM on English poet Robert Graves, including essays by W. H. Auden, Colin Wilson, Thom Gunn and other literary figures, is featured in the Winter issue of Shenandoah, the University's literary magazine.

Edited by Douglas T. Day, English instructor, the volume also includes book reviews by James Boatwright, instructor in English, on Malcolm Lowry's Hear Us O Lord from Heaven Thy Dwelling Place and Dr. Fitzgerald Flournoy, professor of English, on George Steiner's The Death of Tragedy.

■ TWO NEW MAJORS will be open to Washington and Lee students next year.

Plans for a new Sociology and Anthropology major were drawn up by Dr. James G. Leyburn, professor of sociology.

Contemporary Civilization will mark the third alternative available to history majors, in addition to the two now offered in American and European History.

■ FOUR YEAR-END, aid-to-education gifts were received by the University.

They included $4,000 from E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company for the study of science and engineering. The grant was awarded, as in past years, on the strength of the University's chemistry department.

Gifts of $1,500 each were received from Texaco, Inc. and from the Shell Oil Company. The Texaco gift was unrestricted. The Shell gift included $500 of unrestricted

Valuable Lee Letters Acquired

■ TWO OF GENERAL Robert E. Lee's letters to President Jefferson Davis, valued at $4,500, have been added to Washington and Lee University's collection of more than 5,000 Lee letters.

The letters, bound in a red morocco leather case, are dated August 22, 1863, and February 9, 1865, and were willed to the university by the late Alfred W. Stern, a Chicago clothing executive.

The correspondence presents an interesting contrast in the career of the famous Confederate general who later became president of Washington College. The August letter—written at Lee's headquarters at Orange County Courthouse—indicates that General Lee regrets that President Davis will not consider Lee's request to be relieved of his post and permit him to serve "in any capacity at any post where I can do good."

General Lee, discouraged after Gettysburg, thought that "the lower the position, the more suitable" to his ability and the more "agreeable" to his feelings.

The 1865 letter, composed at Lee's Petersburg headquarters, is General Lee's acceptance of the post of General-in-Chief (commanding general) for the Confederate Army. He had been commander of the Army of Northern Virginia until this appointment in the last two months of the war.

funds, $500 for general faculty development, and $500 for professional development of individual faculty members in engineering, mathematics and the physical sciences.

An unrestricted grant of $452 was received from The Gulf Oil Corporation.

FACULTY

■ DR. OLLINGER CRENSHAW, '25, will succeed Dr. William G. Bean as head of Washington and Lee University's history department when Dr. Bean retires from that position in June, Dean of the College William W. Pusey III announced to the faculty in February.

Dr. Bean, 70, has served as head of the department since 1930.

A member of the history department faculty since 1926, Dr. Crenshaw became a full professor in 1947. He has taught at summer sessions at the College of William and Mary, the University of Wisconsin, Johns Hopkins University and West Virginia University. Dr. Crenshaw, who is 57, received his bachelor and master of arts degrees from Washington and Lee in 1925 and 1926, respectively. He was awarded his Ph.D. degree from Johns Hopkins University in 1945.

Dr. Bean first came to Washington and Lee in 1922 as an assistant professor. He was made a full professor and head of the department in 1930. He received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Alabama in 1913, his M.A. from Harvard University in 1916 and his Ph.D. there in 1922.

■ UNIVERSITY FUNDS totaling $5,205 have been granted to 14 Washington and Lee University professors for support of research and study projects during 1962.

The awards are supported by the John M. Glenn Fund and are part of a Washington and Lee program designed to promote continuing scholarship among faculty members and increasing teaching effectiveness in classrooms and laboratories.

Most faculty recipients will conduct their research during this summer's vacation, but they have until December 1 to complete their projects. Stipends range from $46 to $900.

These professors received grants:

Dr. C. Westbrook Barritt, Spanish, for study in Santander, Spain, to improve his competence in Spanish and Basque.

Dr. A. Ross Borden, Jr., English, for the study of Shakespeare and Elizabethan drama at Stratford-on-Avon and the University of Birmingham summer session.

William W. Chaffin, English, for research in the Alderman Library at the University of Virginia on the life of Henry A. Wise.

Dr. Milton Colvin, political science, for a study of the importance of foreign policy issues in the June Congressional primary elections in Montana.

Dr. Jay D. Cook, Jr., accounting, for a research program on net income, taxable income and deferring of income taxes by corporations.

Dr. Cecil D. Eby, Jr., English, for research on George S. Wasson, Henry Adams and Hunter's Raid.

Lyman R. Emmons, biology, for a study of human and amphibian cytogenetics.

Dr. Marshall W. Fishwick, American studies, for the preparation of color slides for the department of fine arts during a forthcoming six-month stay in Europe.

Dr. Louis W. Hodges, religion, for the investigation of traditional and contemporary theories on how Christian ethical norms may be translated into social action.

Dr. Lewis K. Johnson, commerce, for the preparation of a manuscript entitled "Personnel Administration."

Dr. Charles V. Laughlin, law, for the preparation of a manuscript on "The Development of a Natural Basis for a Two-Party System in Politics and the Application of the Principles of Judicial Proof to Political Decisions."

Dr. Allen W. Moger, history, for the continuation of a study of Virginia history after 1880.

Dr. Charles F. Phillips, Jr., economics, for a program of research and writing in the practice of government regulation of business in the United States.

Robert Stewart, music, for the study of contemporary trends in musical composition at the Bennington Composers Conference, Bennington, Vermont.

■ TWO ARTICLES by an English instructor, Jack B. Moore, have been published by two different journals. A fictitious story entitled "I Wonder As I Wander" appears in the current issue of the New Mexico Quarterly. His second article, "David Morgan and the Indians," was in the January issue of the West Virginia History Magazine.

■ PRESIDENT FRED C. COLE was one of five panelists at the 17th National Conference on Higher Education in Chicago in March who dis-professor of romance languages, participated in a panel discussion of "Modern Foreign Languages and Their Teaching" at a December meeting of the National Federation of Modern Language Teachers Association in Chicago.

■ A 400-PAGE BOOK by Dr. James G. Leyburn, professor of sociology, is scheduled to be published by the University of North Carolina Press this spring.

The Scotch-Irish: A Social History culminates five years of work by Dr. Leyburn in Scotland, Ireland, and the United States. The evolution of the Scotch-Irish as they moved from Ireland to Amer-

Drake performed with the group on its annual visit to Lexington.

■ A WOODWIND COMPOSITION by Robert Stewart, associate professor of Fine Arts, was performed in February in New York City for the Music in Our Times series. The Dorian Woodwind Quintet played Stewart's "Three Pieces for Woodwind Quintet" before a public audience, including critics, in Kaufmann Concert Hall.

A second composition by Stewart, "Prelude for Strings," was performed in Roanoke by the Roanoke Symphony Orchestra in February. In May, Stewart's "Canzona and Ricercar for Brass Sextet" and "Trio No. Two for Violin, 'cello and Piano" will be heard at the Roanoke Fine Arts Center.

■ AN ARTICLE on novelist William Faulkner by Douglas T. Day III, instructor in English, was published in the Winter issue of the Georgia Review. Entitled "The War Stories of William Faulkner," Day's article is a commentary on a phase of the author's literary career seldom touched by critics.

"Help Week" meant assistance for Librarian HENRY COLEMAN

cussed "Reassessment of Overseas Student Exchange Programs: Guidelines for the Further Development of Policies and Programs."

The three-day conference is sponsored by the Association for Higher Education. Approximately 1,500 college professors, deans, presidents and other administrators from public and private institutions registered for the sessions. Dean of the College William W. Pusey III represented Washington and Lee.

■ DR. WESTBROOK BARRITT, associate

ica is the main concern of the book, but it also deals with American politics, economics, and religion in relation to its subject.

■ THE NATIONAL SYMPHONY Orchestra, in a February students' concert presented in Lexington by the Rockbridge Concert-Theatre Series, was joined in a performance of Prokofiev's "Peter and The Wolf" by Dr. G. Francis Drake, professor of French, who read the text of the composition with the symphony. It was the second year that Dr.

UNDERGRADUATES

■ THE ELIMINATION of "Hell Week" by three fraternities and the success of a new emphasis on community service marked the "Help Week" which began the second semester. Fraternities which gave up hazing practices were Sigma Chi, Pi Kappa Alpha and Phi Gamma Delta.

IFC President Robert Shannon Doenges commented: "Fraternities placed more emphasis than ever before on community service, as opposed to hazing."

■ ZETA BETA TAU topped fraternity scholastic averages in the first semester, followed by Phi Epsilon Pi and Lambda Chi Alpha.

The winning fraternity averaged 1.753. Non fraternity average was 1.465 and all men's average was 1.392.

■ GLEE CLUB activities included participation in the annual Roanoke Symphony's performance of portions of Handel's "Messiah" in December and exchange programs with the Sullins College Choir in Bristol.

The John A. Graham Brass Choir was featured on a Roanoke television program in February.

■ A FIVE-MAN Student Control Committee has been selected by Washington and Lee University's student government executive committee to assist administration officers in cases of student misconduct. The new group will work in conjunction with Dean of Students Edward C. Atwood and Washington and Lee's faculty administrative committee. The Student Control Committee will deal in two general areas — inter-institutional relations and campus conduct. All activity of the committee is subject to review by Dean Atwood and the administrative committee.

Senior committee members are William Outman, Washington, D. C.; and George Honts, Eagle Rock, Virginia. Other members include Thomas Rains, Atlanta, Georgia, junior; Jimmy Sylvester, Las Vegas, Nevada, sophomore; and Philip Sharp, Richmond, freshman law student.

■ THE DECEMBER production of Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell" at the Troubadour Theatre was followed in mid-March by a five-night run of Shakespeare's "Othello."

Dr. Cecil Jones, director of the Troubadours, took the title role in Don Juan. Other actors were Dr. Keith Shillington, of the Chemistry department, John Jennings, of the Journalism department, and Mrs. Ruth Browne, Pi Kappa Alpha housemother.

A special stage setting was created for "Othello." The forestage, built out from the main stage, projected six feet into the audience area and was used for soliloquies, two-character scenes, and as an extension of the mainstage. Music by Robert Stewart was recorded by students and played during the performance. Robert L. Allen of Park Hills, Kentucky, played Othello in the production.

■ SOPHOMORE Jere D. Cravens of Bartlesville, Oklahoma, was awarded a copy of the Handbook of Chemistry and Physics for the highest average in his first semester of college physics. Purpose of the annual award is to stimulate interest in the sciences through student competition. The prize is given by the Chemical Rubber Company.

■ A NEW 60-SEAT upperclass reading room was opened in McCormick Library in January, increasing the library seating space by one-fourth its present capacity.

Total library seating capacity has been brought to 300, according to Librarian Henry E. Coleman, Jr. The new room is located at the front of the library, directly over the main lobby and desk.

The room is furnished with custom-built furniture designed by alumnus Donald R. Steenburgh, '51, of Richmond. Rare books and papers from the university's archives are housed there. Locked cages have been installed for this material.

The room was added to the library building in 1941, and has served a multitude of purposes since that date. The Bicentennial Committee used it as offices in 1949 and special lecturers have appeared there. The room was once rigged for closed-circuit television for the overflow crowds during the 1958 spring lectures of Dr. Arnold Toynbee. From 1951 to 1955 a loan exhibition from the Metropolitan Museum of Art was displayed in the room.

Students put Library's new room to good use.

Trust Will Aid Colleges

Alumnus Aubrey A. Houser, '09,
Establishes Fund To Boost Quality
Of State Independent Colleges

AN UNUSUAL demonstration of interest by a Richmond businessman-physician and a Washington and Lee alumnus in advancing the quality of Virginia's independent colleges will benefit his Alma Mater on a continuing annual basis.

Under the terms of a trust agreement devised in 1959, Washington and Lee University is one of a dozen beneficiaries of the A. A. Houser Trust, established by Dr. Aubrey A. Houser, '09, president of Wm. P. Poythress & Company, Inc., Richmond pharmaceutical manufacturers.

From time to time Dr. Houser will convey to the Trust capital stock of the Poythress company, of which he is majority stockholder. Income in the form of dividends on shares held by the Trust will be paid to the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges and divided among 12 benefiting colleges annually on the basis of a distribution formula agreed upon by the participating institutions, including Washington and Lee.

The Trust is established in perpetuity. According to the trust agreement, upon Dr. Houser's demise all of his remaining holdings in the Poythress company will be transferred to the Trust. Meanwhile, with each conveyance of his company's stock to the principal of the Trust, Washington and Lee's share will increase. Dr. Houser has expressed his intention of enlarging the principal holdings of the Trust by the addition of securities each year.

Income from the Houser Trust, like other contributions to the Virginia Foundation, are used by the colleges for current instructional programs rather than for capital purposes. Most Virginia Foundation funds are applied to faculty salary improvements.

Dr. Houser, who practiced medicine in Richmond for many years and once taught at the Medical College of Virginia, is an alumnus of two of the benefiting institutions, Bridgewater College and Washington and Lee University.

In addition to income to the Virginia Foundation from the Houser Trust, the Poythress firm is a generous annual supporter to the joint college fund.

President George M. Modlin of the University of Richmond, a trustee of the Houser Trust, has described it as "a very generous and unusual action on the part of this education-minded gentleman whose keen understanding of the value of independent colleges is clearly manifest in the establishment of this Trust."

The trust agreement provides that in the event the Virginia Foundation is ever dissolved or deviates from its purpose as defined in its charter, the income, and eventually the assets, will go to Washington and Lee.

Dr. Houser, a native of Natural Bridge Station, Virginia, was born in 1881. He attended Washington and Lee from 1905 to 1907 and went on to receive his M.D. degree from the Medical College of Virginia in 1916.

After thirty years in the medical profession, he retired in 1946 but continued as president of the Poythress Company and as president and manager of Alpine Farms at Natural Bridge Station.

He has been a regular and generous giver to the Alumni Fund and the Development Fund at Washington and Lee.

Dr. Aubrey A. Houser, Jr., is a 1941 graduate of Washington and Lee and followed in his father's footsteps in graduating from the Medical College of Virginia in 1951.

Participation—Key Item for Alumni Fund

By MATT PAXTON, JR.
Chairman, Alumni Fund Council

AT THIS MOMENT less than 10 per cent of Washington and Lee alumni have responded to the Alumni Fund. The scoreboard shows 1,021 contributors out of 10,383 solicited who have given a total of $44,288.00.

As chairman of the Alumni Fund Council, please permit me some liberty to speak quite frankly and openly with you for a few minutes about the annual giving fund. Because it reaches into your pocket, and into mine, it is a rather personal matter and it certainly is a matter of grave importance to us all. I feel certain that, when you know these facts, you will join in a concerted action today.

A lot of "beating the drums" has been done by colleges about this problem of percentage of participation in alumni support. Whether we like this constant harping on a single subject or not, the point is that participation is the basic fact! It is the fundamental key to the whole program. We cannot simply close our eyes and ears to increasing insistence from the large philanthropic foundations that their assistance will be directly proportional to the amount of self-support a college displays. Some won't even consider a college with less than 50 per cent alumni support in annual giving. Moreover, it is contrary to our "sporting blood" or sense of fair play to sit back and see so few shoulder the whole responsibility for all of us.

Let's examine the record to determine just where we do stand.

How good or bad are we? Some will argue that those schools with high percentage, somehow manipulate their overall numbers or their definition of an alumnus so as to make themselves look good. I discount this theory sharply. According to the best available information, most colleges use the same method of identifying an alumnus and most colleges solicit their full numbers—non-graduates as well as graduates.

Now look at Table I. Here we see the record of our participation in the five year period prior to the University Development Program. In the last year, 1957-58, it reached 35.3 per cent with 3,378 alumni responding that year. Table II indicates where this places us in respect to other institutions of our class.

Washington and Lee has never been content to operate at just the average level. If we are to justify our existence as a small private university, we must produce something better than the average, and this means better than average alumni interest and support, as well as graduates whose educations are better than average. Why do you suppose some alumni (about 65 per cent, in fact) fail to respond to their class agent or regional agent? All of us have more appeals from worthy causes than we care to count; but we all know the benefits of having attended Washington and Lee. Given an important reason, all of us can juggle our income to make a little go here and a little go there. Really, all of us are in the same boat—yet some do support the Fund and others don't.

Are you a "doer"?

Perhaps some feel ashamed to respond in a small way—yet this is just the point. Washington and Lee needs you to help support her in proportion to your ability, but, beyond this, she needs you first of all to stand up and be counted! This in itself is of significant importance and help.

A case in point is our annual fund this very year.

Just look back now at our present situation. Only 1,021 contributors have responded, and we've reached about 40 per cent of our former dollar record. Imagine what could be accomplished if everyone would participate! The fund year will terminate May 31st although pledges may be paid through the calendar year. That gives us three big months to go.

Let me urge each of us to examine our participation in the light of what it means to us individually and to Washington and Lee to have all of us share in this responsibility. Taking some liberties with a familiar slogan, I might add, "If you care enough to send the best—send money!"

And send it now. Don't be late—participate.

Anonymous Donor Presents Portrait

■ THE PORTRAIT of University Treasurer Earl S. Mattingly, shown at right, was presented to Washington and Lee by an anonymous alumnus.

Professor Rupert N. Latture, acting for the donor, presented the oil painting to President Fred C. Cole in a small ceremony held in the President's Office and attended by Mr. Mattingly and members of the Washington Hall staff.

The artist, Mrs. H. Donahoe of St. Petersburg, Florida, painted the portrait from photographs of Mr. Mattingly, who first came to the University as a student in 1916.

May 4-6

YOU OF THE ABOVE anniversary classes will be vitally interested in the plans which are being developed for your reunion on May 4-6.

A preliminary outline has just been mailed to you. Please complete the return card stating whether you plan to attend. As soon as these cards are returned a list will be prepared and a copy sent to each member. Thus you can, by corresponding with one another, get together with a special group of your friends to make the trek to Lexington. Therefore, please return that "statement of intent" card right away.

Keep in mind that local hotels and motels have been block reserved. Reservations must be made through the Alumni Office. Request for reservation cards will be mailed out about April 7 and the deadline on reservations is April 25th. There will be no guarantee after this date. As in the past, the various classes will be lodged, as classes, in different hotels. You will want to be with your classmates. Unless you make some special request you will automatically be lodged with your class. The headquarters for the classes are as follows:

The 50th anniversary class 1912—Mayflower Inn.

The 40th anniversary class 1922—Mayflower Inn.

The 25th anniversary class 1937—R. E. Lee Hotel.

The 10th anniversary class 1952—Lexington Motel.

The accommodations in these three places are excellent. The R. E. Lee Hotel has just undergone some major remodeling and is under new management. The Mayflower offers the facilities of a hotel with the convenience of a motel; the Lexington Motel, though farthest from the University, is new and modern.

The program will be complete but not so full as to prohibit your visiting local points, looking in on the fraternity, and just plain wandering. We want you to enjoy yourself and not be bound to a "stop watch" program. Upon getting into Lexington, check in first at your hotel. Here you will pick up a complete program and instructions. Then come to the Student Union Building (that's the one across the street from the Episcopal Church) where you will be registered. You will want to arrive in plenty of time on Friday, May 4, to attend the reception at 4:30 p.m. at the home of President and Mrs. Cole. You are on your own for supper that night. We hope you'll get with all your classmates and come to hear the first of the John Randolph Tucker Lectures later at 8 o'clock. This is the first time the Anniversary Reunions have coincided with the Tucker Lectures, and many law alumni will be on hand from non-reunion years.

Saturday will be a full day culminating in the individual class banquets and the following "social." Remember the ladies are especially invited to attend all of the events. Dress will be informal. If you are interested there will be time for a little golf so bring along your sticks.

Watch closely now for all the mailings and take prompt action. In this way we can disseminate the information quickly and easily. The entire University family is looking forward to the reunions. We hope you are planning to be with us.

NOTICE TO ALL LAW ALUMNI

The Tucker Lectures and Law Day Weekend are on May 4 and 5, 1962, at the same time as the Anniversary Class Reunions. Makes plans to come.

CLASS NOTES

1892

Miss Julia Davis, daughter of the late JOHN W. DAVIS, has written a book of family memoirs entitled "Legacy of Love," (Harcourt, Brace & World). The work is a reminiscent account of both sides of her family for three generations, well documented with old diaries and letters. The result is a remarkably true-to-life portrait of her father, one of the ablest Americans of his time.

John W. Davis' political career included a term in Congress, Solicitor General, Ambassador to Great Britain, and Democratic nominee for President. He was defeated by Calvin Coolidge in the 1924 election. He was a trustee of Mutual Life of New York for nearly 30 years.

As a corporation counsel and constitutional lawyer he had few equals. His clients ranged from J. P. Morgan to Robert Oppenheimer. He argued more cases before the Supreme Court than any attorney before him, but he refused two offers to serve on the Supreme Court. Mr. Davis died March 24, 1955.

1894

DR. JAMES B. BULLITT has been retired for fifteen years after a fifty-year teaching career and is living in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. Dr. Bullitt has taught at the University of Louisville, the University of Virginia, the University of Mississippi, and the University of North Carolina.

1902

DR. W. T. ELLIS of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, received the 1961 University of Pennsylvania award of "Distinguished Senior Alumnus."

1905

ELI M. MILLEN, who was valedictorian of his class, now spends his winters in St. Petersburg, Florida. Mr. Millen, an octogenarian, reports that the printer's ink in his blood is still so thick that "constant up-dating of nostalgia has been a compensating factor in mental and physical activity." His interest in politics, education, and the economics of the United States and the world has never ceased to offer a challenge to his wisdom and understanding. Mr. Millen's journalistic career began with cub reporting on the Memphis Commercial Appeal. Editorial work on the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, the Cincinnati Enquirer, and the New York Times was followed by the Associate Editorship of the Ladies Home

Occupational File Progress

■ AS THIS ISSUE of the Alumni Magazine goes to press, there have been 6,009 occupational questionnaires returned in response to the appeal to alumni to provide the University with vital information on their activities

This figure is less than 60 per cent of the total number of questionnaires (10,996) mailed to former students, including 130 alumni in foreign countries. For the information contained in the responses to be valid statistically in any analysis of alumni occupations, experts say that the return must be better than 80 per cent. We're shooting for 100 per cent.

Return forms are still coming in, and virtually all have been completed in admirable detail. It you are among the several thousand who have not responded, please do so immediately. If you've misplaced the form, we'll be happy to send you another one. Just let us know.

Journal and then the Managing Editorship of McCall's.

1906

After fifty-six years of practicing law, H. CLAUDE POBST now has in his office more actively contested and important cases than he has ever had. At seventy-seven years of age, in 1960, Mr. Pobst took a trip around the world and this past summer took a 6800 mile trip through the West. He has been on every continent except Australia and writes, "I shall continue to go...I work from seven to eight hours every day, and never had an ache or pain. I take perhaps four or five aspirin tablets a year, and perhaps three or four blood pressure pills a year, and go when and where I wish without trouble."

1908

HIRAM M. DOW, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army for New Mexico, attended the annual conference of Civilian Aides held by Secretary of the Army Elvis J. Stahr, Jr., at Fort Monroe, Virginia, in December. Mr. Dow, an attorney in Roswell, New Mexico, has been a Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army since 1937. The Aides are appointed for two-year terms to represent the Army in interpreting Army policies and doctrines for the civilian communities in their area. At the conference in December, the Civilian Aides, representing every state, were brought up-to-date on recent developments within the Army and plans for the future.

1910

The Arkansas Bar Association honored JUDGE HARRY J. LEMLEY recently with a plaque presented to him as a tribute in recognition of his extraordinary contribution to the Bench and Bar. Appointed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1939 as Federal Judge, Judge Lemley retired in 1958 after sitting on every federal district bench in Arkansas. The most famous of his decisions, perhaps, dealt with the school integration question in Little Rock. In part, the plaque reads: "Judge Harry J. Lemley has retired from active service, but his opinions still live in the law... the Arkansas Bar Association conveys appreciation...for services devotedly rendered, for the exercise of sound judicial temperament, and for having widely found and applied the law."

1911

JUDGE W. KENDALL LEMLEY, Municipal Judge of Hope, Arkansas, retired from the bench on March 1st after almost thirty years of service. Judge Lemley was on the bench for seven full four-year terms and was opposed for office only once. Judge Lemley expects to continue a limited law practice at his home. He is a brother of Federal Judge HARRY J. LEMLEY, '10, who was honored by the Arkansas Bar recently for his extraordinary services.

A retired Army Colonel, ALEXANDER C. KNIGHT writes from Alexandria, Virginia, that he has passed his 76th birthday and going strong. He regrets having missed his 50th reunion this past spring.

1912

After serving as a country pastor of Presbyterian Churches for forty-four years, W. GRAHAM WOOD retired in 1961 and is residing in Chester, Virginia.

1914

Thirty years of government service brings well-deserved retirement to DAVID BROCKMAN WINFREY of Martinsburg, West Virginia. Mr. Winfrey spent twenty-four of these years with the Department of Justice in Washington, D. C.

1915

JUDGE MILLARD FILLMORE HAYS has spent thirty-three years as superintendent and principal of high schools in the state of Kentucky. For the past eleven years he has been in insurance and real estate business in Elizabethtown, Kentucky. Mr. Hays has three children, one of whom, a son, is engaged in business with him.

A portrait of the late CHIEF JUSTICE TAYLOR H. STUKES of the Supreme Court of South Carolina was unveiled at memorial ceremonies in Columbia, South Carolina, in November. The painting by Arthur Murray, noted portraitist of New York, hangs in the Supreme Court room at the State House. Before a large crowd gathered to pay tribute, Justice G. Dewey Oxner eulogized Judge Stukes as a man who believed primarily in impartial decision, who harmonized conflicting views with an open mind, and who dealt justice with great intellectual honesty and with all the dignity of the legal profession.

1916

THE HON. CLARENCE J. BROWN is now in his twenty-fourth year as a Member of Congress, but he is also engaged in running newspapers in Ohio, his home state.

GRADY FORGY writes that his fourteen grandchildren keep him "spry as ever." There are ten grandsons, and five of them are Forgy's who expect to be on the Washington and Lee campus around 1970-77.

Former football great, E. B. SHULTZ, retired from the Tennessee Valley Authority in October, 1959. He is now serving an appointment as visiting professor at the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, Cornell University. He and his wife, the former Virginia Barclay, maintain their residence in Norris, Tennessee.

NORVIN C. EVANS states that he is probably the most "retired" alumnus. "Chick" retired as colonel in the US Army Re-

■ THE PRESENT James Drury Flowers, '14, is eminently representative of his family's educational heritage over 200 years' standing in Montgomery County, Alabama. He has inherited the Flowers family's inclination to lead in civic life, and in Montgomery, since 1914 when Mr. Flowers returned from his four years at Washington and Lee, he has filled prominent positions in the city's life.

Mr. Flowers has continuously carried on the tradition that the family should invest, without thought of remuneration, in lives of young people having no means to advance themselves educationally.

As director of the Alabama National Bank, Mr. Flowers was on the County Board of Education for 21 years before retiring in 1956, and presently he serves as Trustee of the First Methodist Church and of Huntingdon College. A new elementary school, equipped with the finest modern facilities, was erected in 1960 in Montgomery County and was named the Flowers Elementary School in tribute to the Flowers family.

■ ATTORNEY-GENERAL Robert F. Kennedy presented William O. Burtner, '17, a service pin and gold key chain upon his retirement on last January 6 as a Justice Department attorney and from his duties as the busiest and most prolific

"ghost-writer" in the Federal government.

The presentation was made at a luncheon in his honor attended by 100 Justice Department officials. The Attorney-General also read a letter to Mr. Burtner from "another public servant" at the White House, a letter in which President Kennedy praised him for his "fidelity and skill" as an attorney adviser in Justice's Office of Legal Counsel for the past 38 years and expressed warm thanks for himself and his presidential predecessors in office.

In 28 of his 38 years with the Justice Department, Mr. Burtner as a "rewrite man" for Presidential papers, has written an estimated 4,700 executive orders and 1,400 proclamations over the signatures of Presidents Harding, Coolidge, Hoover, Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, and Kennedy. His literary efforts ranged from such prosaic documents as the declaration of a legal holiday to weightier ones such as Truman's seizure of the steel companies and Eisenhower's dispatch of Federal troops to Little Rock.

Before going with the Justice Department, Mr. Burtner taught English at Washington and Lee. He now hopes to spend much of his time in travel and in reading.

serves, 1951; retired from Reconstruction Finance Corporation, 1953; retired from Lincoln Bank & Trust Company of Louisville, 1961. He and Mrs. Evans are kept busy commuting between Louisville, where they have three grandsons, and California, where they have two granddaughters.

1917

GEORGE N. DANIELSON writes from St. Paul, Minnesota, where he retired some twelve years ago. Taking all proper medical care, he says he hopes to make his 50th remunion in 1967.

For 45 years, BRADFORD L. THOMPSON, has been in the school equipment and supply business with William G. Johnston Company. He received good training, for while he was at W. and L. he acted as secretary to President Louis Smith while carrying a full course of studies. During the last 20 of these years with W. G. Johnston, he was General Manager of the School Equipment and Supply Division. A native of Opelousas, Louisiana, Mr. Thompson now lives in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

1918

Always active, A. CARTER CRYMBLE, retired from Tenn.-Eastman Company on February 1st and opened a consulting engineering office that same date in Kingsport, Tennessee.

After 41 years of government service as an Aeronautical Engineer in the department of Navy—and especially aircraft propeller design—RAYMOND M. BEAR retired December 31, 1960. Ray is uncertain, with so many firm roots in Washington, whether or not he and his wife should succumb to the lure of more promising environment such as Florida.

1920

HARRY L. MOORE retired from V.P.I. in 1957. After three years with ICA in Laos, working in the agricultural program, he again retired in 1960 and makes his home in Blacksburg, Virginia.

The president of the Rotary Club of Philmont (N.Y.) this year, CARL A. FOSS writes that this "duty" plus the care of his 130-acre farm keeps him busy.

1921

In Richmond, Virginia, DR. R. D. GARCIN is practicing internal medicine and at the same time is Medical Director of Hope Harbor Hospital for Alcoholism and is the physician for the City Jail of Richmond.

In R. G. KELLY's life outdoor activities have played a big part. For almost forty years he has been engaged in the practice of law in Charleston, West Virginia, and has taken an active part in the political and business life of his state. But he has taken time to follow hunting and fishing pursuits into each of the fifty states, Canada, and many foreign countries. These outdoor reminiscences are recorded in a recent book by Mr. Kelly entitled Trails, Trout and Tigers. The book may be ordered from the Education Foundation, Incorporated, of Charleston, West Virginia.

WILLIAM FRANCIS MCCANN of New Castle, Pennsylvania, this year will complete forty years of service with the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railway and expects to retire and travel in Europe.

1923

The minister of Trinity Presbyterian Church in Port Neches, Texas, REV. RAYMOND G. WICKERSHAM has accepted a call to Charleston, South Carolina, where he will be pastor of the Goose Creek Presbyterian Church (now a chapel) and also minister to college students in the Charleston area. He and Mrs. Wickersham have six children and ten grandchildren.

Effective January 1, 1962, ANDREW HOWELL HARRISS, JR., became Assistant to Chief Engineer Communication of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company with offices in Jacksonville, Florida.

1924

W. CLIFFORD SMITH is chief engineer of the Stonega Coke & Coal Company in Big Stone Gap, Virginia. In addition, his civic duties include membership on the Town Council and the Town Planning and Zoning Commission and serving as consulting engineer for the town. Mr. Smith engages also in many fraternal and club activities.

1925

E. W. ALEXANDER is partner and general manager of the Oldsmobile Agency in Beaumont, Texas. The Alexanders have two daughters, a 17 year old grandson, and a 14 year old granddaughter.

1926

The ABC-TV program "Meet the Professor" introduced DR. ROBERT CARL YATES on February 4. As a lecturer for the National Science Foundation, Dr. Yates has traveled extensively throughout Florida consulting with high school students and teachers on studying and teaching mathematics. He has taught at a number of universities and colleges and employs a dramatic presentation of new mathematical concepts. "Meet the Professor" is produced in cooperation with the Association of Higher Education and features a different professor from a different locale each Sunday.

In September, 1961, GEORGE L. HILL joined the International Banking Department of the Continental Illinois National Bank. His successes skyrocketed and on December 8, 1961, he was appointed Second Vice-President.

1928

State bank examiner, ALTON R. MIDDLEKAUFF, points out that embezzlements in Maryland Chartered State banking institutions have, so far, been minor, and he and his board plan to keep it that way.

WILLIAM T. OWEN, '28

WILLIAM T. OWEN, treasurer of the New York Telephone Company, was elected a director of the Bank of Commerce in New York at its annual stockholders' meeting in January. Mr. Owen entered the telephone company in 1928 and has served as its treasurer since 1958. Before that he had advanced through various assignments in the company's financial department. He was its banking representative in 1946 and was appointed assistant secretary and assistant treasurer in 1951. Mr. Owen and his wife reside in Mountain Lakes, New Jersey. They have two children and one grandson.

JOHN E. BAILEY is semi-retired from life insurance business in Longview, Texas. Buck writes that he enjoys excellent health and is fishing and hunting most of the time.

The appointment of JOSEPH BENJAMIN COPPER as vice-president for personnel and compensation of United States Steel was announced in November. In 1935 Mr. Copper joined U.S. Steel as assistant to the industrial engineer in New York, after working for the Westinghouse X-Ray Corporation. He then served in various posts with U.S. Steel—as engineer, assistant and comptroller, and an administrative planner—in New York, Birmingham, and Pittsburgh. His work with the personnel division of U.S. Steel began in 1958 when he was appointed an assistant in the office which he now heads. Mr. Copper is a native of Lexington, Virginia.

JULIUS G. BERRY is engaged in a general insurance business in Tupelo, Mississippi, and this year Mr. Berry is working also to put over the United Fund Drive in Tupelo. He and his wife and two step-sons, the older one a freshman in Harvard Medical School, live in "Parc Monceau" just out of Tupelo.

1930

BORN: DR. and MRS. WILLIAM WELSH, a son, William Talbott, December 18, 1961. Dr. Welsh is the 1961-62 president of the Nevada Heart Association and has practiced medicine in Gabbs, Nevada, since 1956.

F. L. SHIPMAN, SR., has been re-appointed to another three-year term as a member of the 17-man Board of Commissioners on Grievances and Discipline of the Supreme Court of Ohio. This board was created by the Supreme Court in 1957, and Mr. Shipman has been a member since its inception.

SAM W. RAYDER, Executive Vice-President and Trust Officer of the Rockbridge National Bank, has been named a member of the bank's Board of Directors. Mr. Rayder is also a member of the Lexington Town Council.

C. IRVING LEWIS has moved from Goldsboro, North Carolina, to Martinsville, Virginia, where he became minister of the Anderson Memorial Presbyterian Church on January 1, 1962.

1931

JOHN H. HARDWICK has been made President of The Louisville Trust Company, after association with the bank since 1934 and holding the office of senior vice-president since 1958. When in college, Mr. Hardwick was a member of the basketball team and the band and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. At present he is a sports enthusiast whose hobbies also include music and politics, and in 1956 he was Republican general finance chairman for Louisville. Mr. Hardwick is a member of the executive council of the American Bankers' Association and is a former vice-president of the association.

On January 1st, STANLEY D. WAXBERG became a partner in the law firm of Kaye, Fierman, Scholar, Hays, and Handler, with office in New York City.

1932

MARRIED: ROBERT KEENE HOADLEY and Florence T. Jablonsky were married on December 23, 1961, in St. Louis County, Missouri, in Salem Methodist Church. Mr. Hoadley has been an instructor of English for sixteen years in St. Louis County.

WILLIAM D. HOYT is editor of the John Carroll papers, a publication planned for the near future. Dr. Hoyt has just completed a three-year team at Catholic University in Washington, D.C., as a lecturer in history and now resides in Rockport, Massachusetts, where he enjoys his home, built in 1720.

Returning to college teaching after some twenty-years in other fields, WILLIAM CLYDE CAPEL is now assistant professor of sociology at Clemson College, Clemson, South Carolina.

MARTIN P. BURKS, general counsel of the Norfolk and Western Railway, was chairman of an administrative committee to plan for the entertainment of the Governor of Virginia and the entire General Assembly and their wives in Roanoke in February. The legislators' weekend included tours to places of interest in Western Virginia.

E. CARLYLE LYNCH, a beekeeper since 1946, is the designer of a honey dish which has been put on the market in gift shops and glassware departments. The design for the dish was accepted for manufacture by the Fenton Art Glass Company at Williamstown, West Virginia. The motif of the design is that of bees on the honeycomb and the dish, in either amber or milk glass, is square and made to hold a section box comb of honey. Carlyle is a teacher of drafting and industrial arts at the Broadway High School in Broadway, Virginia.

1934

In addition to the demanding position as president of the Little Rock School Board, EVERETT TUCKER, JR., keeps busy running a planned industrial district, a livestock auction center, and a family cotton plantation.

The mayor of Milford, Connecticut, CHARLES IOVINO, in November announced his candidacy for re-election as the head of the city's newly organized Independent Party.

1935

WILLIAM L. WILSON was elected president-elect of the Kentucky State Bar Association on January 16th. He has served as vice-president of the Association. Billy's election came about after a nominating petition placed his name on the ballot, and it was the first time in the history of the Kentucky Bar Association that a candidate nominated by such a petition was elected.

PEYTON B. WINFREE, JR., executive assistant to former Governor J. Lindsay Almond, is now a special assistant in the office of the director of the State Department of Conservation and Economic Development. Before coming to the governor's office in 1958, Peyton was managing editor of the Lynchburg News and Daily Advance. In his present position, he will advise on the department's public relations programs and, among other duties, will do editorial work on technical reports and handle releases of information to the press.

GEORGE R. GLYNN is now assistant vice-president and sales manager for the Northern District for the Hosiery Division of Burlington Industries. The family lives in New Canaan, Connecticut.

JOHN D. SPOHR is division manager for Fleetwing Corporation, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of Ohio. He is responsible for marketing operations in the Central Michigan area, northwestern Ohio, and a portion of Indiana adjacent to Ohio. The family lives in Howell, Michigan, where they enjoy good skiing.

1936

The 1962 president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association is EDWARD A. TURVILLE of St. Petersburg, Florida. A practicing attorney, he has been a member of the USLTA's executive committee since 1954 and an officer since 1958.

1937

The new chairman of the Division of History and Social Sciences at Florida Presbyterian College is DR. WILLIAM C. WILBUR, a member of the founding faculty of this college in St. Petersburg. Dr. Wilbur earned his doctorate at Columbia University, specializing in modern British history, and also studied at the London School of Economics and Political Science. He taught at Muhlenberg College in Pennsylvania for fifteen years before going to FPC. Dr. Wilbur is now working on a book about a phase of British political history.

A member of the Commission's staff since 1946, DONALD R. MOORE is now hearing examiner for the Federal Trade Commission. For the past ten years Don has been a trial attorney specializing in anti-monopoly cases, and prior to this legal work, he was in newspaper and public information service. His present important position involves hearing examiners present the evidence in FTC cases and making initial decisions subject to Commission review.

JAMES K. BUTLER is presently the regional manager for Pan American-Grace Airways, Inc., in Lima, Peru. In addition to this occupation, Butler serves in many community activities. He was, in 1955, president of the American Society, an organization of some 800 American families living in Peru, primarily in Lima. The purposes of the Society are manifold: sponsoring the Boy Scout and Girl Scout movement among American children; looking after destitute Americans; charitable work; and entertainment of American naval ship crews.

Jim is also president and director of The American School of Lima. The school has 850 students made up of approximately 45 North Americans, 45 per cent Peruvians, and 10 per cent various nationalities. The school was begun in 1946 by American companies located in Lima and has rapidly expanded.

1938

The new president-elect of the Virginia State Bar Association is WALDO G. MILES. This post automatically places him in the presidency for 1962-63, and his election came by acclamation at the recent annual meeting. A member of the State Bar since 1939, Waldo has served on various committees and as chairman of the Committee on Memorials and the Committee on Membership. He is a director of Bristol Memorial Hospital and a member of the Bristol, Virginia, School Board.

The district manager for the industrial division of Armstrong Cork Company is J. GEORGE OSTERTAG. George and his wife have two children, and the family lives in Webster Groves, Missouri.

In November, JOHN SHOAF, manager of the World Trade Department of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, was named as one of four American trade advisers to the United States Resources and Trade Development Mission to Chile. This appointment was made by U.S. Secretary of Commerce, Luther Hodges, and marks the first time a Chamber of Commerce representative in the United States has been so honored. The mission in Chile began in November and lasted six weeks. ## CHAPTER NEWS

ST. LOUIS

Thanksgiving morning was a cold and chilly one as the Washington and Lee Generals took on Washington University in St. Louis. The weather did not dampen the spirits of a large group of alumni, family, and friends who witnessed this impressive victory. During the half-time festivities the alumni joined on the north end of the field where hot coffee was provided by Bob Callaway, '56. Cheered on by this enthusiastic crowd, the Generals came from behind in the second half to beat Washington University and to finish the season undefeated.

On November 30, the chapter was pleased to welcome Dean Frank Gilliam at a meeting at the Standard Oil Building in Clayton. A very large group, together with quite a number of prospective students and their parents, was on hand to hear about Washington and Lee from the "master" Dean of Admissions—Mr. Gilliam. A color film of the college accompanied his talk.

In the finest holiday spirit, the chapter entertained at an Alumni-student cocktail party on December 26th. The affair, held at the Captains' Quarters in Clayton, was well attended and enabled the present students to meet some of the prospective applicants for 1962. The chapter looks forward eagerly to the New Year.

DELAWARE

The Alumni Chapter of Delaware held its annual meeting on February 9th at the University Club in Wilmington. In spite of a heavy snowfall a large number of alumni attended the stag affair.

Following the social hour, A. L. Roberson, '30, presided at the business meeting where the following officers were elected: John T. Martin, '26, president; Robert A. Fulwiler, Jr., '25, vice-president; Russell F. Applegate, '50, secretary; Roy J. Fahl, Jr., '46, treasurer; and Jackson Rosse Collins, '17, member at large.

APPALACHIAN

Alumni and parents of the Appalachian Chapter extended a warm welcome to Executive Secretary Bill Washburn at its fall meeting in Bristol on November 16th. Gathering at the new and elegant Bristol Country Club for a reception-banquet the group received a report on the University.

Following the report, chapter president Lloyd Myers, '31, called upon George Summerson, chairman of the nominating committee, for his report. The following slate of officers for the next year was unanimously elected: President, Judge M. M. Long, Jr., '43; Secretary-Treasurer, Kenneth P. Ashbury, '50; Vice-Presidents, Hiram Wall, '38, Robert P. Landon, Jr., '27, J. W. Harmon, Jr., '44, H. Emory Widener, Jr., '53, Lewis P. Collins, III, '51, and Stephen M. Quillen, '57.

The gavel was turned over to Judge Long who, before adjourning the meeting, took note of the suggestion that plans be formulated for the Appalachian Chapter to entertain all alumni who will attend the Washington and Lee-Emory and Henry football game next year at Emory, Virginia.

BALTIMORE

President Fred C. Cole was a guest speaker at the Baltimore meeting on December 1st at the Penn Hotel in Towson, Maryland. An outstanding number of enthusiastic alumni and wives joined in a formal dinner-dance.

John Mayhew, '26, the outgoing president, presided at the banquet where reports from the various committees were heard. Among the highlights of the evening was a presentation by Bill Pacy, '50, of a scroll to Frank Brooks, '46, in recognition of his outstanding leadership and inspiration. The chapter also awarded to Frank a Washington and Lee alumni chair.

Jim McDonald, '50, reporting for the nominating committee, named the following slate of officers who were unanimously elected: President, Lawrence W. Galloway, '43; Vice-President, Richard C. Whiteford, '57; Secretary, Stephen M. Ehudin, '57; and Treasurer, William N. Clements, '50.

At the conclusion of President Cole's informative and inspirational address, the gavel was turned over to Larry Galloway who expressed sincere appreciation to President Mayhew for his year of service.

Following the banquet, an orchestra furnished music for dancing. Frequent intermissions in the dancing gave the alumni ample opportunity to join in singing the "Washington and Lee Swing" and "College Friendships."

CHATTANOOGA

Alumni of the Chattanooga Chapter entertained November 10th at a reception and dinner at the Read House Hotel honoring President Fred C. Cole. Among the enthusiastic group were alumni C. E. Ballenger and Gene Little with their wives from Spartanburg, South Carolina. The occasion preceded the Washington and Lee-Sewanee football game on Saturday, November 11th.

Chapter President Gerry Stephens, '50, presided at the meeting and introduced President Cole as the principal speaker. Entertainment during the dinner was furnished by a trio of musicians, The Dismembered Tennesseans, led by alumnus Frank McDonald, '52.

The guests included Charles Hawkins, guidance adviser of Baylor School and Creed Bates of City High School. Plans were discussed for a meeting with the

ATLANTA

Alumni and parents of the Atlanta Chapter gathered at the Piedmont Driving Club November 13th for a reception-dinner in honor of University President Fred C. Cole. Chapter President, Dr. Perrin Nicolson, '44, noting that this was President Cole's first visit to Atlanta since his coming to Washington and Lee, expressed the appreciation of the entire chapter.

In his report on the University, President Cole emphasized the unique and important influence that Washington and Lee can make not only on the campus student but on the overall prestige of liberal arts undergraduate education.

The chapter acknowledged and was honored to have alumnus Joe Birnie, '27, University Trustee, at the meeting. Among the guests were Dr. Presley, headmaster at Westminster School, and Dr. McDowell, headmaster of the new Lovette School, both of Atlanta.

MID-SOUTH

Making his first visit since becoming University President, Dr. Fred Cole joined the alumni for dinner at the Mid-Town Holiday Inn in Memphis on November 14th.

The large attendance, among whom were several parents of students, eagerly received his report on the University. Particular note was made by Dr. Cole of the Memphis representation on the Generals' football squad.

Chapter President J. Hunter Lane, Jr., '51, presided at the meeting. J. Stewart Buxton, '36, a member of the University Board of Trustees, introduced Dr. Cole and extended a warm welcome to Memphis on behalf of the entire chapter. Accompanying President Cole on his visit was Bill Washburn, Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association.

NORTH TEXAS

In the usual excellent Texas fashion, the alumni in the Dallas-Fort Worth area turned out in large numbers to welcome President Fred Cole and alumni secretary, Bill Washburn, on November 15th at a banquet at the Dallas Country Club. Alumni and their wives from the surrounding area, such as Tyler and Denison, made the occasion a highlight of the chapter's annual program.

Jason B. Sowell, Jr., '54, chapter president, made the arrangements and conducted the meeting. James H. Clark, '31, made the introduction of Dr. Cole whose address was a report of recent developments on campus.

Beginning his speech, President Cole, a native of Franklin, Texas, noted that his visit was like "coming home." The large group extended a very warm welcome and adjourned with the singing of "College Friendships."

PENINSULA

The Peninsula Chapter entertained with a banquet at the James River Country Club on February 23rd. A cocktail party preceded the dinner at which Dr. Ollinger Crenshaw was the guest speaker. Dr. Crenshaw, the newly appointed head of the history department at Washington and Lee, reviewed the development of the University from pre-Civil War times to today.

After the meeting a number of enthusiastic alumni and their wives viewed some recent color slides of the campus, including the new buildings, which were shown by Bill Washburn, executive secretary.

NEW YORK

The Columbia University Club was the site of a February 9th dinner-dance and business meeting of the New York Alumni Chapter. In spite of a heavy snow storm, an eager group of alumni joined for the social affair at which Earl S.

Mattingly, Treasurer of Washington and Lee, was the guest speaker. Bill Washburn, Executive Secretary, also was present.

Stuard Wurzbarger, '28, presided and heard reports from the following: R. A. Brunn, '42, chairman of the golf committee; Dick Warren, '57, chairman of the student recruiting committee; and Emmett Poindexter, '20, treasurer. Poindexter also reported on the chapter's scholarship fund.

Nominations for officers were entered by the nominating committee, and the following men were unanimously elected: President Paul Sanders, '43; and Vice-presidents for the chapter divisions—New York City, Matthew A. Griffith, '40; Upstate New York, W. L. Webster, '12; New Jersey, R. A. Brunn, '42; Connecticut, H. Glenn Chaffer, '49; Long Island, Gossett McRae, '27; and Westchester County, James D. Maver, '52. Emmett Poindexter was re-elected Secretary and Treasurer.

A dance followed the business meeting. The orchestra received enthusiastic response to its playing of the "Washington and Lee Swing" and "College Friendships" at intervals throughout the evening.

RICHMOND

The Rotunda Club in the Jefferson Hotel was the scene of the Richmond chapter's first formal dinner-dance on February 10th. The occasion opened with a cocktail party which was followed by dinner and dancing. Such a large number of alumni and their ladies attended that the affair was deemed highly successful, and it was unanimously agreed that it should be an annual event.

The arrangements were handled by President Reno Harp and Secretary C. W. "Buck" Pinnell, Jr. Bill Washburn, the executive secretary from Lexington, was present, as well as a number of Richmond guests.
