For the most part alumni look upon W&L with favor

Last summer, Associates for Research in Behavior, Inc., of Philadelphia, a professional communications research firm, conducted an alumni attitude survey for Washington and Lee.

The objective of the survey was to develop some understanding of the feelings, attitudes, and opinions of alumni towards the University. It also attempted to identify attitude differences between alumni who contribute to the University and those who do not. In addition, the survey sought to uncover whatever differences might exist between younger and older alumni.

The survey was conducted by telephone interview among a sample of 505 alumni selected at random from the rosters of alumni in several metropolitan areas: Houston, Tampa, Roanoke, Chicago, Atlanta, Richmond, Washington, D. C., Philadelphia, and New York. Of those surveyed, 24 percent were recent graduates (1965 or later); 43 percent were middle graduates (1945-1964); and 33 percent were older graduates (1944 or earlier).

The executive summary and conclusions of the survey are printed here for the information of all alumni. Alumni who would like to have further information on a specific point should write the Office of University Development.

The summary resulting from a thorough analysis of the information collected through the survey revealed the following trends:

WASHINGTON AND LEE LEGACY

1. For the most part the attitude of Washington and Lee alumni towards the University is very favorable. A great majority of them would go to Washington and Lee again if they had to do it over (84 percent).

2. The attractiveness of Washington and Lee seems to lie primarily in its high academic standards and the fact that it is a small school. Its biggest drawback resides in its limited curriculum in the more technical areas of study.

3. Concerns about the school becoming too liberal are relatively rare.

4. Most alumni (60 percent) would encourage a young man today to attend Washington and Lee University. Only a few (6 percent) would tell the young man to go to another university. The rest said it would depend on the individual.

5. Among the many who see a difference between Washington and Lee and state universities, the majority feel this difference is due to Washington and Lee's smaller size and more personal, better-quality education.

6. Approximately half (51 percent) say that Washington and Lee has had an effect on their lives, primarily in their business endeavors.

ALUMNI MAGAZINE

1. Virtually all alumni (98 percent) claim to receive the alumni magazine and read or at least look through it.

2. Alumni are best able to remember news about classmates, classnotes, etc. They also recall articles on building expansion and the recent large donations of Mr. Sydney Lewis. Some 20 percent do not recall any specific articles.

3. The majority of alumni (55 percent) seem to be satisfied with the magazine as it is. Those who are not suggest more class alumni news (18 percent), articles about what is going on at the University today (12 percent) and the opinions and attitudes of the current student body (7 percent).

ALUMNI ACTIVITIES

1. When asked about a period covering the past five years, 19 percent claimed to have attended a homecoming or class reunion. Far and above everything else, the major reason these alumni find reunions enjoyable is the renewal of personal friendships. Reasons relating to the University itself (seeing the campus again, faculty members, etc.) are mentioned, but not with any great frequency.

2. Contributors attend these annual meetings more frequently than non-contributors, but the difference (8 percent) is not as great as might be expected.

3. It was very difficult to obtain recommendations for improving annual meetings from those alumni currently not attending. The few who did mention something recommended that a list be published in advance of those planning to attend.

4. The attendance at local chapter activities seems to be somewhat better than homecomings or other annual reunions. The major source of enjoyment for those who attend these meetings is their social aspects. Secondly, they take pleasure in keeping up with Washington and Lee affairs.

5. The most frequent improvement recommendation from those attending local chapter activities is that they be held more frequently.

6. A small but significant number of alumni claim that they never receive notice of local activities or that there are no chapter activities in their area.

7. In terms of involvement with local chapter activities, contributors strongly outnumber non-contributors (36 percent vs. 8 percent). This 28 percent difference between these two groups is one of the largest observed throughout the study.

8. In saying what they like about these activities, contributors tend to emphasize an interest in Washington and Lee affairs much more so than non-contributors who put more of an emphasis on the social aspects of these activities.

9. Most alumni (70 percent) had difficulty coming up with ideas for new alumni activities. Those who had some recommendations to make placed an emphasis on local chapter activities.

10. Alumni were also asked about four specific ideas through which they could become more involved with Washington and Lee. The percentage of alumni who would be personally interested in getting involved with each ideas was:

Advising students who are interested in the alumnus' field	70%
Reviewing courses taught at Washington and Lee	43%
Recruiting students for the University	46%
Helping secure part time/summer employment for students	33%

UNIVERSITY POLICIES

1. Of all the alumni surveyed in this study, 30 percent stated that there are University policies which they either had misgivings about, disagree with, or have never fully understood.

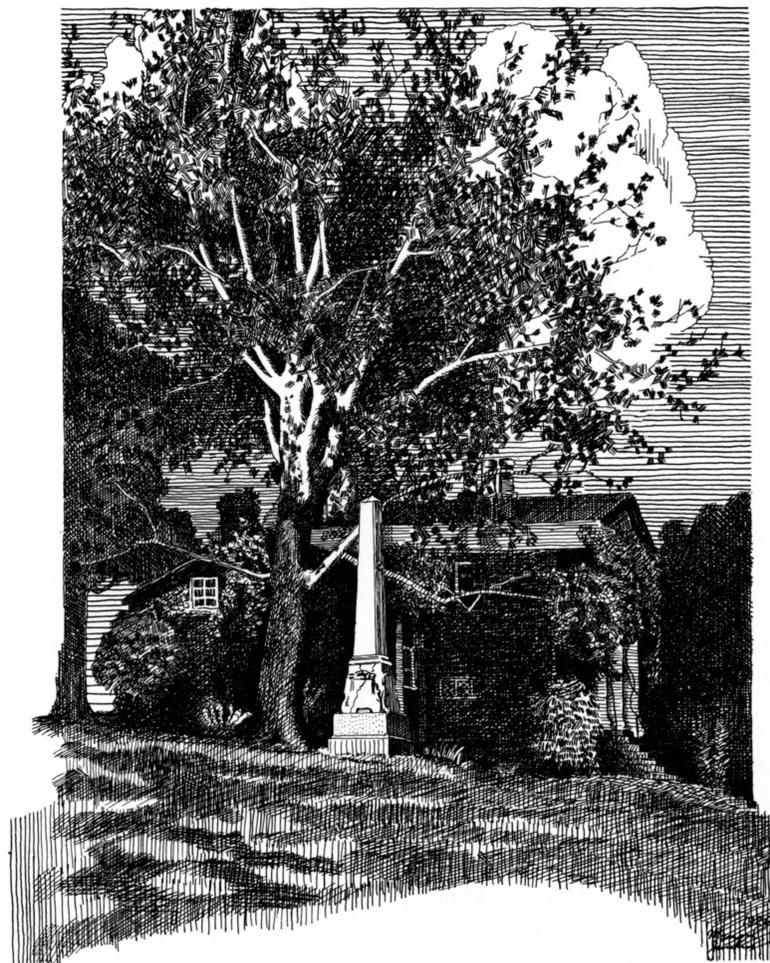

2. The most frequent response (15 percent) among this group is the feeling that Washington and Lee should adhere to the old traditions like wearing coats and ties to classes, the honor code, etc. On the other hand, the second most frequent response (8 percent) is the feeling that Washington and Lee should relax its conservative traditions.

3. Only 1 percent of the alumni surveyed seemed to be disturbed or irritated by (a) the entrance requirements which sometimes keep their children from being admitted to the University and (b) the racial balance issue.

4. Approximately half of the alumni surveyed (53 percent) feel they should be consulted with regards to University policies.

UNIVERSITY FINANCES

1. Most alumni seem to feel the University is either extremely well off (48 percent) or fairly secure (25 percent). Only 8 percent feel it is in financial trouble.

2. Only 38 percent felt that alumni contributions are Washington and Lee's most important source of support.

3. Alumni are just about evenly split on the question of whether Washington and Lee's contributions come from a relatively few large donors or a larger volume of smaller contributions.

4. There is a tremendous amount of variability in the estimates alumni give regarding the average contribution to the Alumni Fund. The average of these estimates is approximately $128. Non-contributors overestimate this figure ($189) when compared to those who contribute ($104).

(Editor's Note: This perception of Washington and Lee's financial condition is the most glaring misconception revealed by the survey. The University operates on a delicately balanced budget each year. In drawing up the University's $56,000,000 development program for the 1970's, the Board of Trustees determined that Washington and Lee will need nearly $8,000,000 in an nual gifts during that period for current support and $24,000,000 in additional endowment to maintain the University's level of excellence. Annual giving in increasing amounts and numbers of donors from alumni, parents, and friends is essential to the University's continued ability to operate on a balanced budget.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

1. Approximately 61 percent claim to have contributed during the past two or three years.

2. Feelings of loyalty, gratitude, and appreciation (41 percent), a sense of duty or obligation (22 percent), and a desire to keep Washington and Lee operating (21 percent) are the most frequently given reasons for making a contribution.

3. Virtually all of the alumni surveyed (97 percent) had been contacted within the last year. Most of the contacts were made by mail. Among contributors there was a slightly higher incidence of personal contacts.

4. Approximately half (51 percent) do not remember any points made in the contribution request. Those who do primarily remember a financial need appeal (13 percent) and that it is a percentage drive (11 percent).

5. The great majority of alumni (72 percent) have no fund raising suggestions. Those who do stress primarily the need for more personal contacts (5 percent) and more frequent local chapter activities (5 percent).

CONTRIBUTION AND AGE EFFECTS

1. A comparison of contributors vs. non-contributors for all of the above trends has been included in the report. They are too numerous to be summarized here. In general, contributors tend to be more positive toward Washington and Lee throughout.

2. Age comparisons have also been included in the report. Throughout there is a tendency for younger alumni to be more involved or vocal about Washington and Lee affairs. Older alumni seem out of touch and uninvolved.

MAJOR CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The study assumed that two factors are at play in the creation of a climate for giving: (a) a favorable predisposition toward and (b) a degree of involvement with the University. In this context, Washington and Lee has fairly high marks in the first factor but it could stand some improvement in the second.

2. In order to encourage involvement, Washington and Lee would do well to work at the grass-roots level, in the alumnus' own turf, rather than through annual meetings at Lexington.

3. This would call for more and better organized local chapter activities under the centralized encouragement and guidance of the Washington and Lee alumni relations staff.

4. Strong consideration should also be given to fostering involvement through the special activities described above (point 10 under Alumni Activities). Reactions to most of these were quite enthusiastic even among the non-contributors. Since they can be engaged in at the alumnus' convenience, the problems of scheduling specific times would be bypassed.

The Steves family and W&L: a four-generation connection

For nearly 100 years, the prominent Steves family of San Antonio, Tex., has been sending sons to Washington and Lee. In all, 16 members of the clan—spanning four generations—have attended the University. This is a remarkable record probably unmatched by any other Washington and Lee family.

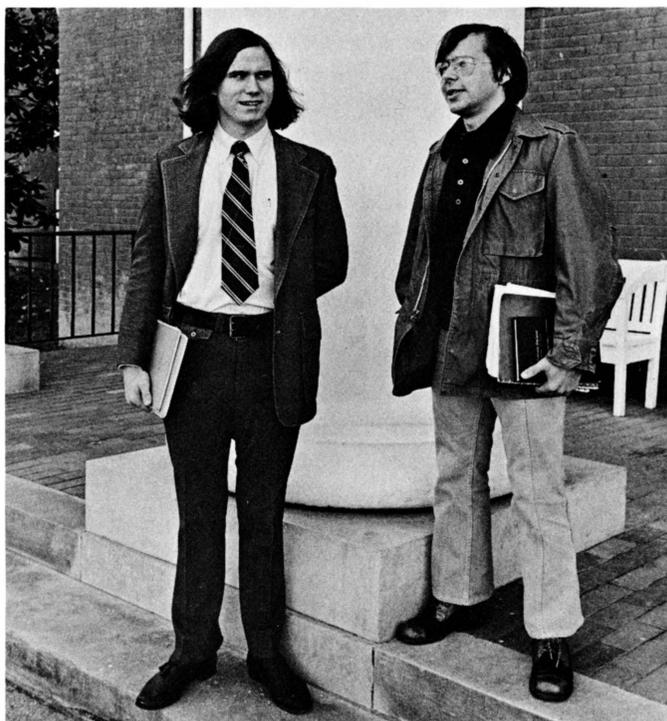

Two fourth-generation members of the family are at W&L now: Sam Bell Steves, II, a freshman, who became the 16th Steves to come to W&L when he registered in September, and his cousin, John Pipes Steves, a senior, who will graduate this spring.

W&L's Steves connection goes back to 1874 when three brothers, Edward Steves, Jr., Albert Steves, and Ernest Steves, enrolled at the tender ages of 16, 14, and 12 respectively. Their father, Edward Steves, Sr., was the founder of a lumber business in San Antonio that is today the Steves Sash & Door Co. and still a family-operated enterprise.

The second generation of Steves came to W&L in the early 1900's. They were Edward Martin Steves (1905-07), son of Edward Steves, Jr.; and Albert Steves, Jr. (B.A., 1901-06) and Walter Steves (1910-13), sons of Albert Steves.

The third generation of Steves was represented by five members of the family. Four of these were sons of Albert Steves, Jr.: Albert Steves, III, (B.A., 1926-30), Sam Bell Steves (1929-32), Walter Steves, II (1935-38), and Marshall T. Steves (1940-42). The other third generation representative was C. Ganahl Walker, Jr., (B.S., 1936-40), son of Stella Steves, a daughter of Albert Steves.

Five representatives from the fourth generation of Steves have attended W&L. Three of these have completed their work: Albert Steves, IV, (B.A. 1954-58), son of Albert Steves, III; Walter E. Steves

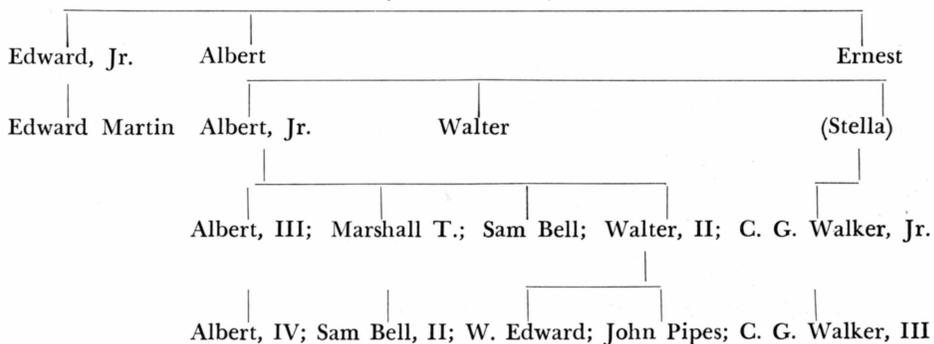

Sam Bell Steves, II and John Pipes Steves—fourth-generation members of the Steves family to attend Washington and Lee.

(1960-61), son of Walter Steves, II; and C. Ganahl Walker, III, (1962-66), son of Ganahl Walker, Jr., and great-grandson of Albert Steves. And carrying on the Steves tradition at W&L are current students, senior John Pipes Steves, son of Walter Steves, II, and freshman Sam

Bell Steves, II, son of Marshall T. Steves, president of Steves Sash and Door Co.

Washington and Lee is proud of the Steves family record and regards it as a high compliment that so many members of this Texas family have attended the University and that they keep coming.

University is host to 1,200 during Parents' Weekend, 1973

Washington and Lee's 19th annual Parents' Weekend brought approximately 1,200 parents and other relatives of students to the campus on Nov. 2-4. The weekend was designed to give parents a better understanding of the University's aspirations and goals and to impart to parents a sense of partnership in the University's role of educating their sons.

The parents held private conferences with their sons' professors and attended small-group seminars in which they discussed the whole range of the University's activities with students, faculty members, and administrative officials.

At a "Report to Parents" meeting in Lee Chapel, they heard talks on the state of the University by President Robert E. R. Huntley and Student Body President Douglas R. Schwartz. President Huntley told of the University's curricular developments, discussed the $56-million development program for the 1970's, and stressed the institution's determination to hold tuition at a level that does not exceed 60 percent of the cost of an education at Washington and Lee. Schwartz discussed the efforts of the Student Body Executive Committee to strengthen ties within the University community and to preserve the Honor System as the most cherished aspect of student life at W&L.

Introduced at the meeting was the chairman of the 1973-74 Parents' Fund. He is W. Martin Kempe of Orange, Va., the father of M. Alexander Kempe, a junior. Kempe succeeded Robert A. Hemm of Pelham, N. Y. The Parents' Fund last year raised $62,624 in unrestricted funds for the University.

Other Parents' Weekend activities included a musical program in Lee Chapel, featuring performances by the newly formed W&L Jazz Ensemble, the Washington and Lee Brass and Percussion Ensemble, and the Glee Club; the traditional reception for parents at the President's House; and a Saturday afternoon football game in which W&L faced Southwestern of Memphis.

Faculty Art Exhibit

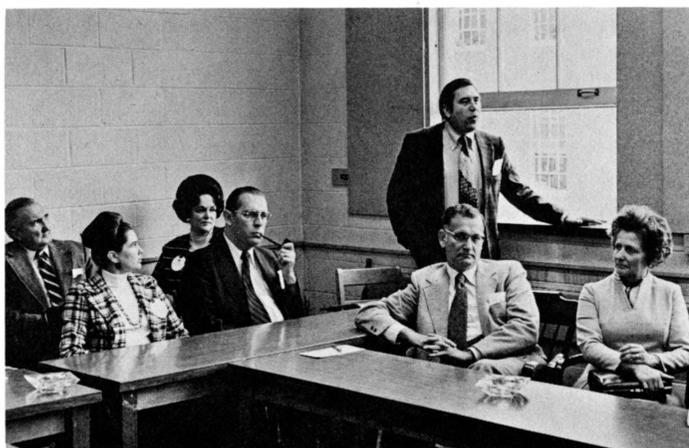

Almost 40 works by members of the art faculty at Washington and Lee were displayed during early November in the University's duPont Gallery.

The works included 12 recent oil paintings by Dr. Gerard M. Doyon, art professor and curator of the gallery. Doyon's works are oil paintings of scenes in Lexington and Rockbridge County.

Also included in the faculty showing were a number of paintings by I-Hsiung Ju, W&L's artist-in-residence, including serial studies of a barn and of a tree house and 10 other recent paintings in water colors, pastels, Chinese inks and mixed media.

Pamela Simpson, art instructor, had three lithographs on display in the show. They represented her debut in Lexington. Simpson joined the W&L faculty in September.

Eleven sculptures and one print by Joseph Blouin, also an art instructor, were in the show. Five of the sculptures are of forged steel, and six are small-scale models for proposed works.

Boatwright is NB Judge

James Boatwright, III, professor of English at Washington and Lee and editor of Shenandoah, the University's literary quarterly, is a judge in the fiction category for this year's National Book Awards.

Boatwright is one of five fiction panelists. The others include Truman Capote, author of In Cold Blood and The Grass Harp, and Donald Barthelme, the author of children's and adult fiction.

The National Book Awards, to be announced in April, honor literary works written or translated by Americans which are considered to be the most distinguished books in their field in the preceding year.

Boatwright has edited Shenandoah for 11 years, and during this time it has become widely known for publishing the work of established authors and poets as well as new young writers.

Himself a critic and essayist, Boatwright is a longtime member of both the board and executive committee of the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines and last year was the group's acting chairman. He is a member of the advisory panel of the National Endowment for the Arts and active in several other professional associations as well.

PBK Visiting Scholar

A young expert in government regulation of business and the interplay between political and corporate power visited the campus on Nov. 26 under the Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar program.

Kenneth G. Elzinga, associate professor of economics at the University of Virginia since 1971, spoke on "Politics, Power, and the Large Corporation" in Lee Chapel.

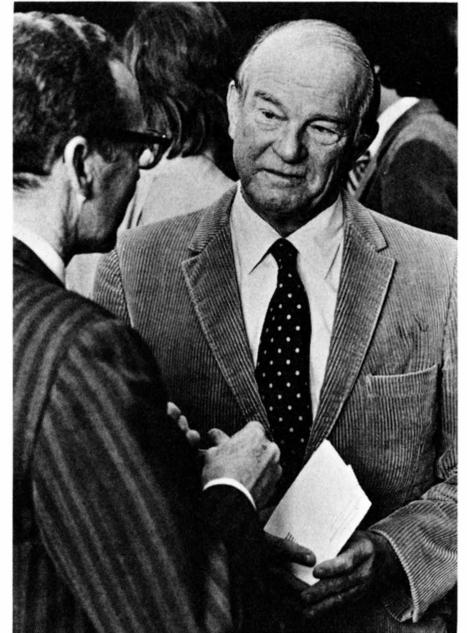

Elzinga's course in economics is the largest at the University of Virginia and is known for its application of economic analysis to social problems. His own research interests lie in government regulation of business, particularly in the fields of antitrust laws and consumer protection. He joined the U.Va. faculty in 1967, the year he received his Ph.D. from Michigan State.

Fritchey is Visiting Fellow

Clayton Fritchey, the journalist and syndicated columnist, was the first senior fellow to visit Washington and Lee under the newly inaugurated program sponsored by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation of Princeton, N.J.

Fritchey was in residence at Washington and Lee from Nov. 12 through 15. He visited informally with students and faculty members, spoke to classes, and delivered a public lecture on "Perspectives on the Presidency."

the Cleveland Press, Fritchey has also been editor of the New Orleans Item, and has served in a variety of governmental posts. He has been active in Democratic party politics.

The Woodrow Wilson Senior Fellow program, established by a gift from the Lilly Foundation of Indianapolis, is designed to permit businessmen, politicians, and others who have achieved prominence outside the academic world to visit college campuses for periods of a week or so. Washington and Lee is one of 59 American institutions designated to participate in the new program.

WLUR Election Coverage

Complete election results, compiled and reported by a news staff of 40 journalism students, were broadcast on a continuous basis Nov. 6 by WLUR-FM, WLUR-FM newsroom was a busy place during election night coverage.

the Washington and Lee University radio station.

Reporters from two journalism classes at the University were stationed at polling and ballot-counting places as well as at candidates' headquarters throughout the Ninth House District and at the state level. The Ninth District includes Lexington, Rockbridge County and Buena Vista, the primary areas covered by WLUR (91.5 FM).

In addition to the teams of reporters in the field, others were stationed throughout the night in Reid Hall, the journalism building, as tabulators and announcers.

Votes cast in the Ninth District for all races were tabulated by W&L's computer, a first for WLUR-FM. A terminal was located in Reid Hall.

On-the-air reporters covered not only all Virginia contests, but other important elections in the nation as well.

Election coverage was produced by Tom Mattesky, a senior journalism major from Carlisle, Pa. Chet Burgess, a senior journalism major from Lexington, station news director, directed the 40-man staff and anchored the election-night broadcast.

Chemistry Speaker

Leon Mandell, professor of chemistry and chairman of that department at Emory University, spoke at Washington and Lee on Nov. 8 on science and non-science education. His visit was sponsored by the Department of Chemistry in cooperation with the University Center in Virginia, Inc.

Mandell joined the Emory faculty in 1955 after service with the U.S. Army Chemical Corps. He has also worked as a chemist in industry with Merck & Co., the pharmaceutical manufacturer. He is the author of the text Organic Chemistry: A Concise Approach and about 35 research publications as well.

Slavitt Discusses Films

David R. Slavitt, author, poet, translator, teacher, and critic, visited Washington and Lee on Nov. 12. He read from his poetry and delivered "A Vituperative Indictment of Film Studies."

Slavitt's visit to W&L was sponsored by the Department of Journalism and Communications. His evening talk followed a screening of the classic Ingrid Bergman film "Gaslight" (1944).

Slavitt was writer and editor of the film department for Newsweek magazine between 1958 and 1965. In addition, four volumes of his poetry have been published, most recently Child's Play in 1972.

Colorful Drama Staged

Royal Hunt of the Sun, the moving 1965 drama about the Spanish colonization of South America, was staged in October by the University Theatre.

The production was directed by Douglas Thomas, a W&L senior from New York City, as his senior-year thesis project for a major in drama.

Leading roles in the play were performed by Mark Daughtrey as Pizarro, commander of the expedition; Brock Johnson as deSoto, second-in-command; Will Cantler as young Martin, and David Minton as old Martin; and Jack Arnold as Atahualpa, the sovereign Inca of Peru. Except for two early scenes set in Spain and Panama, the action of the play takes place in the upper province of the Inca empire—what is now southern Ecuador and northwest Peru—in the years between 1529 and 1933.

O. K. Barnes, assistant drama professor at W&L, designed sets and lights, creating what resident drama director Lee Kahn described as "a spectacle."

Almost 100 W&L students were involved in the production as actors or technicians.

Leach Heads Library Unit

Maurice D. Leach, Jr., University librarian and professor, was elected chairman of the Colleges and Universities Section of the Virginia Library Assn. at its annual meeting in October. The section, with more than 350 members, is the largest in the association.

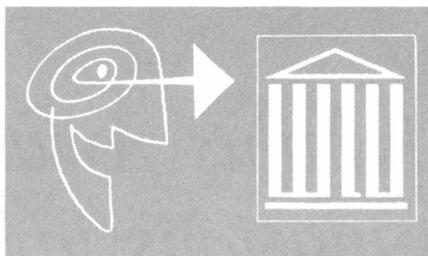

Leach, who holds an A.B. from the University of Kentucky and the B.L.S. from the University of Chicago, became head of the University library system in 1968. He has held library positions at Texas College of Arts and Industries and with the U.S. Department of State. At the time of his appointment at W&L, he was a special adviser to the Ford Foundation at American University in Beirut and was on leave from his post as professor and chairman of the department of library sciences at the University of Kentucky.

Weiss is Speaker

Paul A. Weiss, professor emeritus of biology at Rockefeller University and an internationally known researcher in the fields of nerve cells and nervous systems, visited Washington and Lee on Nov. 14.

Weiss spoke to classes and delivered a public address on "The Systems Concept as a Guide to the Future."

Weiss' visit to Washington and Lee

NOTICE

More than 75 alumni attended the Special Alumni Conference on Nov. 8, 9 & 10 for an in-depth study of W&L's current status, challenges, and out-look for the future. A report on the conference will be carried in the January issue of this magazine.

is sponsored jointly by the W&L Department of Biology and the University Center in Virginia, Inc.

Weiss, 75, is a native of Vienna. He has lived in America since 1931 when he accepted a fellowship at Yale University. He has also taught at Chicago as well as at Rockefeller. His principal fields of research are the organization of nervous tissues and individual nerve cells.

Shenandoah Chairman

Dr. Edward L. Pinney, professor of politics at Washington and Lee, has been elected chairman of the board of publishers of Shenandoah, the University's literary magazine. He succeeds Dr. Sidney M. B. Coulling, professor of English.

Miss Barbara Brown, reference and public-services librarian, and Paxton Davis, professor of journalism and head of the Department of Journalism and Communications, were also elected to six-year terms on the Shenandoah board.

Shenandoah, one of the most prestigious "little" quarterlies, celebrates its 24th anniversary next spring. Its editor is James Boatwright, also an English professor at Washington and Lee.

Sen. Brock Visits Campus

U.S. Sen. William E. Brock, III, of Tennessee, a 1953 graduate of Washington and Lee, visited the campus on Nov. 12 and, in an informal talk, emphasized the need for congressional reform and the inevitability of campaign law reform. His visit was sponsored by the W&L Republican Club.

Sen. Brock, chairman of the National Republican Senate Campaign Committee, said campaign law reform is needed to alleviate pressure on the executive branch of government. He said the existence of large, unreported sums of cash in campaigns must be eliminated and that laws governing campaign activities must be strictly enforced. In dealing with these matters, he said, Congress must acquire more knowledge of the fundamental problems involved.

After his speech, Sen. Brock talked at length with students in a lounge at the University Center.

Mrs. Thomas' New Book

Nancy White Thomas of Richmond, wife of the rector of the Board of Trustees at Washington and Lee, is the author of Five Years in Jail, a sensitive account of her work counseling female inmates in Richmond City Jail.

Mrs. Thomas has been "behind bars" since 1968, as coordinator of an informal group of volunteer workers who call themselves Helpmates. Five Years is a sequel to her first book on the Helpmate program, One Year in Jail. Mrs. Thomas is also the author of a number of other books and monographs, including On Bended Knee and And If I Should Die. Her husband, John Newton Thomas, a 1924 Washington and Lee graduate, has been a Trustee of the University since 1938 and rector since 1970. He will retire from the board in January.

The book is available at the W&L Bookstore at $3 plus tax and postage. Proceeds from its sale are used to acquire furnishings and equipment for women prisoners which they would not otherwise be able to have.

Stewart's Quartet Performed

String Quartet No. 3 by Robert Stewart, professor of music and acting head of the Department of Fine Arts, was performed on Dec. 2 over national radio. The performance was part of a series of 13 programs by the Stradivari String Quartet over 156 public radio stations. The program was carried by the University's station, WLUR-FM.

Drake Heads State MFLA

Dr. G. Francis Drake, professor of French and head of the Department of Romance Languages at W&L, will become president of the Modern Foreign Language Assn. of Virginia in January. Dr. Drake has been president-elect of the organization since 1972 and was program chairman at its annual meeting in Richmond this fall.

The Virginia MFLA executive board will meet in Lexington in April together with the American Assn. of Teachers of Foreign Languages, both under Dr. Drake's guidance.

Distinguished Alumnus Awards established; nominations invited

With the approval of the University Board of Trustees, the Alumni Board of Directors has initiated an awards program which will be known as the "Distinguished Alumnus Award of Washington and Lee University" and which will be awarded annually to not more than three alumni. The award will be made jointly by the President of Washington and Lee University and the President of the Alumni Association at the annual meeting of the Association held each May.

The awards, considered to be among the highest made by the Alumni Association, are to supplement the honorary degree program currently conducted by Washington and Lee University. An anonymous committee to receive nominations from the membership of the Alumni Association and to select the recipients of the awards has been established. The committee will place emphasis on the "whole man" and his service to Washington and Lee University along with consideration to all other activities such as civic or professional service. Consideration of posthumous awards are not to be excluded.

The Alumni Board of Directors encourages members of the Alumni Association to sponsor and nominate highly qualified alumni. Should a nominee not be selected in a given year, his name will be carried forward for consideration the following year, and the sponsor is encouraged to submit any additional pertinent information.

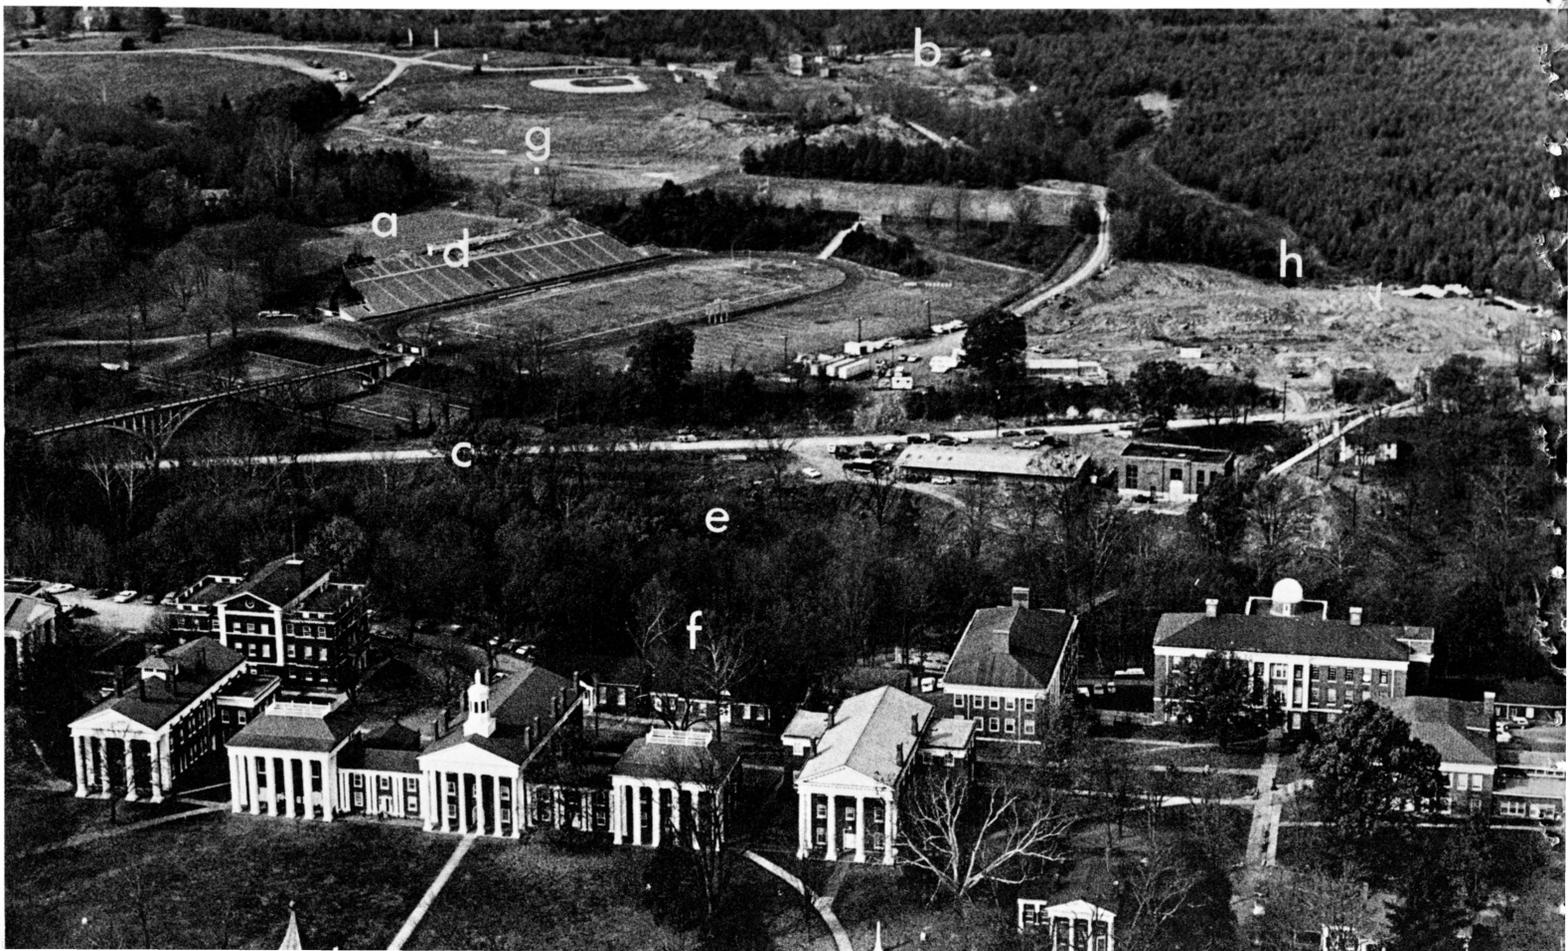

Adjacent to this article is a nomination form. The selection process will be a difficult one for the committee and each sponsor is encouraged to be as brief and as thorough in making his nomination as is possible.

DEADLINE FOR NOMINATIONS FOR 1974 DISTINGUISHED ALUMNUS AWARDS IS FEBRUARY 4, 1974.

Work is under way and in some instances nearing completion at Washington and Lee on several construction projects totaling more than $1.1 million in value.

The projects include the addition of eight all-weather tennis courts, construction of a new maintenance building, addition of cooling facilities for campus buildings, various lighting, landscaping and grading projects, major improvements to water supplies on the "new" campus to the west of the historic campus area, and development of parking areas and access roads in the vicinity of new construction.

All the projects are part of the capital portion of Washington and Lee's $56-million Development Program. More than $24 million of that sum has been earmarked for physical additions, improvements and restoration.

The eight new tennis courts are to be located immediately behind Wilson Stadium, on two levels. They are being built of specially formulated asphalt to permit their use under any conditions, and the University anticipates they will be ready in the spring.

Griswold, Winters, Swain & Mullin of Pittsburgh, Pa., designed the two-tiered tennis court site and nearby spectator areas. The firm has been Washington and Lee's landscape architect in each portion of the development program and other recent campus improvements.

The new maintenance building—to replace the old facility, which will be removed to permit other campus construction—is located on the edge of the University's pine forest, near the baseball field to the northwest of the site for the new law school building.

The new maintenance building will be connected with both U.S. 60 at the edge of the campus and internal roads leading to the new law building. University officials estimate the maintenance building will be completed by March.

Other contracts and projects completed or in progress are:

—Grading and paving new access roads, related site preparation, and development of new parking lots near the new Doremus Gymnasium just off U.S. 60 (Charles W. Barger & Son of Lexington, general contractor), almost completed;

—Exterior lighting at the gymnasium addition and in parking lots and on the law school access road (Davis H. Elliot Co. Inc. of Roanoke), with work scheduled to begin shortly;

—Planting and landscaping near Doremus Gymnasium and at the new parking lots by the gym (Waynesboro Nurseries), continuing;

—Additions and improvements to water service in the athletic stadium area;

—Development of walkways, fences and related improvements to serve new and expanded athletic fields.

In all, contracts for the various projects total $1,101,000, according to University officials.

Other capital projects already undertaken in the decade-long Washington and Lee development program include construction of the new law center, Lewis Hall, $7.4 million (to be completed by September, 1975); a major addition to Doremus Gymnasium and renovation of the old structure $3.25 million (completed last year); erection of 40 apartments accommodating 178 students, $1.4 million (to be completed by next September), and expansion of the University's central utility plant to provide a central cooling facility, $1.1 million (to be completed in 1975).

New England alumni organize official chapter

NEW ENGLAND. Alumni in the New England area came together on Oct. 23 and established a new chapter of the Washington and Lee Alumni Association to be known officially as the New England Chapter. It was the first time in many years that alumni in the area had gathered on an organized basis. A large number of alumni attended the meeting at the Marriott Motor Inn in Newton, Mass., all expressing a desire to organize and develop an ongoing program. Horace Gooch, '31, presided at the banquet meeting which was preceded by a cocktail party. He introduced the representatives from the University; Ross Malone, rector-elect of the University Board of Trustees, President Robert E. R. Huntley, and Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn, all of whom were accompanied by their wives. John Mello, '72, was elected president of the chapter and accepted on behalf of the members an official certificate of chapter membership from Alumni Secretary Washburn. Mello spoke briefly, describing the formation of the chapter and his plans of organization. He encouraged members of the chapter to help build a strong organization and to accept committee assignments. Gooch, in introducing the University speakers, thanked them for being present at the organizational meeting. Malone congratulated the new chapter on behalf of the University Board of Trustees. He also reported on the progress of the University's development program for the '70's and stressed the important part that alumni play in the life of W&L. President Huntley also welcomed the new chapter into the national alumni organization on behalf of the entire University and reported on the status of the University today. His remarks were eagerly received. Mello adjourned the meeting by saying that all alumni in the area would receive further information about the plans of the chapter.

RICHMOND. A number of alumni gathered on Nov. 14 at the Westwood Club for a brief business meeting. Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn was present. Outgoing chapter president Dan Balfour, '63, presided, and the following officers were elected: Sam Dudley, '58, president; Robert Payne, '63, and Lewis P. Nelson, III, '61, vice presidents; William B. Jacobs, '29, secretary; and Robert Priddy, '67, treasurer. In accepting the presidency, Dudley called on all members to continue to support the active program initiated by Dan Balfour. He reminded

At the New England organizational meeting were (seated) Ross Malone, '32; Mrs. Bill Washburn; John P. Mello, '72, president; Mrs. Robert E. R. Huntley; and Horace Gooch, '31, and (standing) Mrs. Malone; Mr. Washburn; Mrs. Gooch; and President Huntley.

Among the participants at the Richmond meeting were Robert Priddy, '67, treasurer; Sam Dudley, '58, new president; and Dan Balfour, '63, outgoing president.

New officers of the Tidewater chapter included David Shufflebarger, '69, vice president; Peter Agelasto, '62, president; Richard Burroughs, '68, secretary; William H. Candler, '63, and Parker Neff, '51, directors.

them of the luncheon meeting on Dec. 6 at which Dr. Sidney M. B. Coulling, professor of English at W&L, was the principal speaker.

TIDEWATER. The Holiday Inn-Scope was the setting of a buffet luncheon on Nov. 15 attended by a large group of alumni from the Tidewater area. Frank Callahan, '52, the outgoing president, presided. The principal speaker was Dr. Robert Huntley, professor of English at W&L, who was in Norfolk on a student recruiting trip for the admissions staff.

Dr. Huntley discussed recent curricular developments in the English department and explained the student recruitment program. He said alumni could be helpful in admission matters. Also representing the University at the meeting was Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn. During the business session, Lionel Hancock, '64, reported for the nominating committee, and the following officers were elected: Peter Agelasto, '62, president; David Shufflebarger, '69, vice president; Richard C. Burroughs, '68, secretary; and J. Davis Reed, III, '60, treasurer. Elected directors of the chapter were William H. Candler, '63, John P. Garrett, '60, H. Michael Walker, '63, and Parker Neff, '51.

ST. LOUIS. Alumni of the St. Louis area met on Nov. 16 at the St. Louis Country Club. A banquet-style dinner was served following a cocktail party. Andrew N. Baur, '67, presided. The principal speaker was Dr. George Ray, professor of English at W&L and also chairman of the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics. Dr. Ray reported on the changes in the curriculum at Washington and Lee, particularly as they relate to the English department. He also reported on the study-abroad program in England, which he directed during the spring term last year. Also present from the University were Athletic Director and Head Football Coach William D. McHenry, Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn, and the co-captains of the 1973 General's football team, Robert Brand of Bethesda, Md., and Bill Wallace of Roanoke, Va. McHenry made a brief report on the football team's season and called for the support of alumni in recruiting student athletes. This meeting came on the eve of the W&L-Washington University football game in St. Louis.

CHARLES W. KAUFMAN is the recipient of an award given monthly by the publication, Arizona Artisan, to an outstanding citizen of Arizona. Kaufman's award is inscribed "a Tucson based friend of the world." After graduation from W&L and an affiliation with National Fruit Products Co. in West Virginia, Kaufman went to work for the National Canners Assn. in San Francisco in 1936. In 1939, he joined General Foods in New York and played a major role in research. In 1950, he was plucked from General Foods by Kraft Foods and became vice president in charge of research and development. During his career he has had further associations with such organizations as Foremost Dairies, Inc., and Mars, Inc., the candy firm. His operations have taken him to almost every country in Europe. In addition to his associations with the food firms, Kaufman has also been active in education. In 1969, he became dean of administration for Pima Junior College, and he was later called to help start work on the Pepperdine University campus. In 1970 and 1971, Kaufman was asked by the government to go to Bogota, Colombia, to reorganize a dairy company. In view of these assignments, Kaufman has more than an average lingual ability. The award citation said he has truly symbolized a Tucson friend of the world.
