Cole bequest of $400,000 made in honor of 1920 law graduate

A portion of his estate expected to be in excess of $400,000 has been bequeathed to Washington and Lee's School of Law by Dr. John E. Cole of Fredericksburg, Va., who died March 19.

The bequest was made in memory of Dr. Cole's brother, William Benjamin Franklin Cole, a 1920 law graduate of the University. William Cole died in 1964 after a career as a school teacher, newspaper reporter, sailor and, ultimately, Commonwealth's Attorney in Fredericksburg, a post he held nearly 40 years.

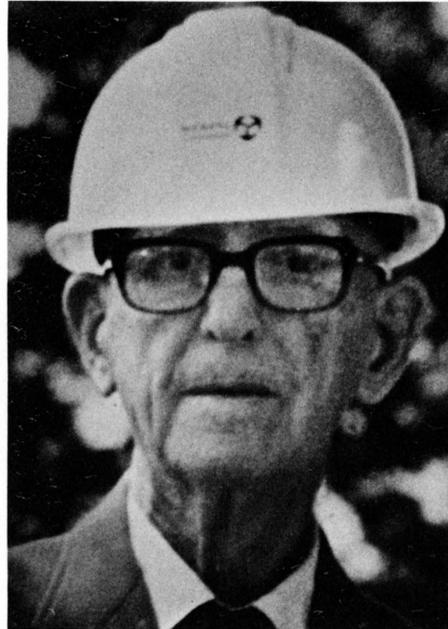

The University said the Cole bequest would be added to the endowment in the law school portion of the current development program. Income will be designated for faculty salaries in the School of Law, in accord with Dr. Cole's wishes.

With the addition of the Cole bequest, the law school has received $11,368,000 toward its 1976 development objective of $13,125,000. Funding for the new law building and for necessary endowment to support an expanded academic program is being sought by a special committee of 10 alumni who are working with W&L Trustees Ross L. Malone and E. Waller Dudley. Malone is general counsel of General Motors Corp.; Dudley is a member of the Alexandria law firm of Boothe, Prichard & Dudley.

In all, Washington and Lee's development program has raised more than $23.5 million toward its overall objective of $36 million by 1976.

Dr. Cole, himself a graduate of the University of Virginia, included Washington and Lee in his will because of his brother's extraordinary affection for his alma mater. Also sharing in Dr. Cole's estate were the medical school of the University of Virginia and the University of Richmond, where William Cole received his undergraduate education before entering W&L's law school.

Said Martin P. Burks of Roanoke, chairman of Washington and Lee's Estate Planning Council: "Dr. Cole's bequest to Washington and Lee speaks clearly not only to his lifetime devotion to his brother, William Benjamin Franklin Cole, but also to his strong interest in the future of private education in Virginia." Burks is general counsel of Norfolk and Western Railroad.

Hall's 'little red schoolhouse' is dedicated in his memory

Virginia's last one-room schoolhouse was dedicated this spring in memory of a Washington and Lee alumnus and benefactor who had guaranteed its preservation by bequeathing it to the University when he died.

Ceremonies and an old-fashioned picnic lunch at Mountain Gap School, near Leesburg, honored the late Wilbur Curtis Hall, a 1915 law school alumnus who in his will left Washington and Lee an estate valued at more than $1 million—plus one "little red schoolhouse."

Hall, known as the "Winston Churchill of Leesburg," purchased Mountain Gap School after it ceased operation in 1953. He planned its restoration and preservation as a museum reflecting the kind of education he had received there himself.

Hall left two instructions to Washington and Lee: preserve the past, as symbolized by his little red schoolhouse, and prepare for the future, by realizing his fondest dream for Washington and Lee—construction of a truly adequate library for the School of Law.

And so W&L carried out his first wish, deeding Mountain Gap School to the National Trust for Historic Preservation, the nation's premier organization of its kind, last fall.

His second wish is being carried out as faithfully: the Wilbur C. Hall Memorial Library is a major element in the University's new law building, Lewis Hall, begun last year and scheduled for completion in 1975.

The National Trust will integrate the one-room schoolhouse into activities at Oatlands, a 260-acre estate across the road from it, where Hall lived as a child. Oatlands was donated to the National Trust in 1965 by the William Corcoran Eustis family.

At this spring's festivities marking the dedication of the little red schoolhouse, a plaque was unveiled jointly by Washington and Lee and the National Trust to mark Mr. Hall's generosity permanently. President Robert E. R. Huntley was the principal speaker at the ceremony, attended by a large number of Mountain Gap graduates, four former teachers at the school, representatives of local and state education boards, Hall's colleagues at the Loudoun County bar, and many of his friends.

In his remarks, President Huntley spoke of Hall as "a very wise and very generous man," and emphasized the mutual interest shared by both

Hall and Washington and Lee in historic preservation. It was shortly before Hall died in 1972 that the Washington and Lee Front Campus area was designated a National Historic Landmark, and the University's current Development Program has earmarked $1.3 million for restoration and preservation of the ante-bellum Front Campus buildings.

Also speaking at the dedication ceremonies was David E. Finley, chairman of the National Trust's board of directors from 1949 until 1962 and a founder of the organization. In thanking Washington and Lee for its crucial role in preserving Mountain Gap School, Finley remarked: "The 'little red schoolhouse' long has been an American institution, and today this particular schoolhouse assumes a permanent place among our nation's historic structures."

During the ceremony, B. Powell Harrison, chairman of the Oatlands Council, which will have immediate jurisdiction over Mountain Gap School, announced that the building and other historic buildings in the immediate Oatlands area had been placed on the National Register of Historic Places. Earlier in the year, the same buildings had been designated State Landmarks by Virginia's Historic Landmarks Commission.

The schoolhouse retains its old Acme Giant stove, gabled roof and clapboard walls—and turn-of-the-century textbooks sit on the 1872 double desks. "It stands as a reminder of a bygone era in American public education," commented James Biddle, president of the National Trust.

Hall was a prominent Leesburg attorney and state legislator, who was the youngest delegate in the Virginia House when he was first elected in 1918 at the age of 24. In 1935, he became Virginia's first full-time Conservation Commission chairman.

After attending Washington and Lee from 1910 to 1914, he passed the Virginia Bar with the highest grade. When he received his Phi Beta Kappa key, he remarked, "Pretty good for a one-room school, don't you think?"

When he was awarded an honorary doctorate by Washington and Lee in 1967, he said it was "the happiest moment of my life." He was extremely active in promoting development of the University's new law school and was especially interested in its library facilities.

First Distinguished Alumnus Awards presented to Rex, DeVan, and Brock

The Alumni Association's first annual Distinguished Alumnus Awards went to the late C. Walton Rex, '25, of Orlando, Fla.; Rugeley P. DeVan, Jr., '34, of Charleston, W. Va.; and U. S. Sen. William E. Brock, III, '53, of Tennessee.

The awards were announced at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association on May 11. Outgoing Alumni President William H. Hillier presented the awards, and University President Huntley read the citations.

Sen. Brock could not be present for the meeting; his award will be presented to him at a later ceremony.

The posthumous award to Rex was received by his widow, Mrs. Lottie Autrey Rex. DeVan received his award in person.

The award, the highest that can be conferred by the Alumni Association, honors the recipients for outstanding character and distinguished service to society and to Washington and Lee. The choices were made by a committee of the Alumni Board of Directors from nominations submitted by the recipients' fellow alumni.

Rex was president of Rex-McGill Investment Co. in Orlando until his death in December and was cited for his "personal courage . . . professional excellence, unselfish public service, and active interest in his alma mater."

DeVan is president of DeVan-Gallagher, Inc., insurance brokers in Charleston. The citation noted "he always finds the time to lead a worthwhile community endeavor, or serve on a committee for his alma mater, or contribute his talents and his substance in an effective and productive fashion."

Brock served four terms in the U. S. House of Representatives before being elected to the Senate from Tennessee in 1970. He was cited for "excellence in public service, his high ideals, unquestioned integrity and genuine concern for those he serves. . . ."

The texts of the citations follow:

C. WALTON REX

Courageous Leader to His Profession and State

The life of C. Walton Rex, Class of '25BS, was a happy combination of professional excellence, unselfish public service and active interest in his alma mater, in the finest traditions of Washington and Lee. In his chosen field of real estate investment and appraisal, he was an organization member No. 42 of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers and a president of Florida Chapter No. 2 of that organization. His special knowledge and skill in the area of citrus grove appraisal led to positions on the Governor's citrus advisory committee, the Florida Farm Bureau and the Florida Citrus Commission. He was author of articles on citrus grove appraisal in various professional publications.

His was a lifetime of service to his home city of Orlando and his home state of Florida. He served as director and officer of the Orlando Chamber of Commerce, the state chamber and the Central Florida Development Committee, he was a member and chairman of the Orlando Planning and Zoning Commission, president of the Kiwanis Club and president of the Orlando-Winter Park Board of Realtors. He was on the president's advisory committee of Rollins College. He was an active member and elder of the First Presbyterian Church of Orlando. Truly it can be said he was one of the most distinguished citizens of that city. He was a strong and consistent supporter of his alma mater.

For his lifetime of professional excellence, unselfish public service and for the personal courage inherent in his many achievements, Washington and Lee is proud to grant to C. Walton Rex, posthumously, the award of Distinguished Alumnus.

RUGELEY PIERSON DEVAN, JR.

Scholar, Churchman, Good Citizen and Loyal Alumnus

Honor graduate of the University where he was recognized for his academic attainments by both Phi Beta Kappa and Beta Gamma Sigma; successful businessman and dedicated civic leader in his native Charleston, West Virginia, this 1934 alumnus typifies the active achiever who always finds the time to lead a worthwhile community endeavor, or serve on a committee for alma mater, or contribute of his talents and of his substance in an effective and productive fashion.

A three year varsity letterman in wrestling, he served as a lieutenant-commander in the Navy during World War II. He has served as president of the Chamber of Commerce, of the Rotary Club, of the United Fund, as an elder in the First Presbyterian Church and for ten years as chairman of the Greater Kanawha Valley Community Foundation, all in Charleston.

He has been a Class Agent and served a term as Alumni

Representative on the Athletic Committee; he headed a capital funds drive for Washington and Lee in the 50's and his son, Rugeley P. DeVan, III, is a graduate of the University. There is also an R. P. DeVan, IV, on the scene who should be a candidate for membership in the class of about 1993.

In recognition of his many and varied contributions and in gratitude and admiration, the Washington and Lee University alumni bestow their Distinguished Alumnus Award on this outstanding graduate.

WILLIAM EMERSON BROCK, III

United States Senator from Tennessee

In the short time that has passed since Bill Brock received his Bachelor of Science degree from Washington and Lee, he has accomplished more than most men do in a lifetime. In 1964, he was selected as the Outstanding Young Man in Tennessee by the Jaycees, and the Outstanding Young Republican of the Year by the National Young Republicans.

This resounding vote of confidence was to be repeated time and again as he was elected to four successive terms in the House of Representatives and, at the age of 39, to the United States Senate. For both the House and Senate seats, he was the first Republican winner in more than four decades.

A keystone of his strength and support has been his interest in our young people. In the Spring of 1969, he organized a group of 22 Congressmen who quietly visited troubled campuses across the country to listen to the students. This effort produced the highly acclaimed Brock Report to the President outlining student attitudes and hopes and making recommendations during a very critical national period.

As a Senator, he has been vitally interested in making the government more responsive to the individual. He is a strong backer of Congressional reform, revenue sharing and reorganization of the executive branch of the Government. He is a member of the Committee on Government Operations, the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committees and the National Commission on Consumer Finance. He is currently serving as chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee.

Bill Brock's personal commitment to excellence in public service, his high ideals, unquestioned integrity and genuine concern for those he serves makes this University extremely proud of this Distinguished Alumnus.

Spring Reunions, 1974

Alumni from the classes of 1924, 1934, 1949, 1959 and 1964, together with the pre-1924 "Old Guard," returned to Lexington this spring for Class Reunions—and a splendid time it was. As any good reunion should, it began with a cocktail party (photo 1); George D. McClure (left) and W. Gilbert Faulk, classmates in '34, had a cup for old times' sake. Students that night, lusting for victory over Cortland State in the next day's lacrosse match, held an old-fashioned pep rally in the Freshman Quad, and for a while it was the reunion types who stole the show (photo 2).

Tucker is new president of Alumni Association

Everett Tucker, Jr., '34, of Little Rock, Ark., is the new president of the Alumni Board of Directors. He took over his duties from outgoing president William H. Hillier, '38, of Chicago at the Alumni Association's annual spring meeting on May 11 in Lee Chapel. The association meeting coincided with Spring Reunions.

Tucker is president of the Industrial Development Co. in Little Rock. He has served as treasurer of the Board and has been a member for three years.

The Board also elected other officers, and the Association named three new Board members to serve four-year terms and a member of the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics to serve a two-year term.

The new Board members are:

Marion G. Heatwole, '41A, '46L, of Pittsburgh, general counsel of U. S. Steel Corp.

Samuel B. Hollis, '51, of Memphis, Tenn., president of Federal Compress and Warehouse Co., a subsidiary of Southwide, Inc.

Courtney R. Mauzy, Jr., '61, of Raleigh, N. C., president of Carolina Components Corp.

The new member of the Athletics Committee is Charles R. Beall, '56, of Martinsburg, W. Va., a representative of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co.

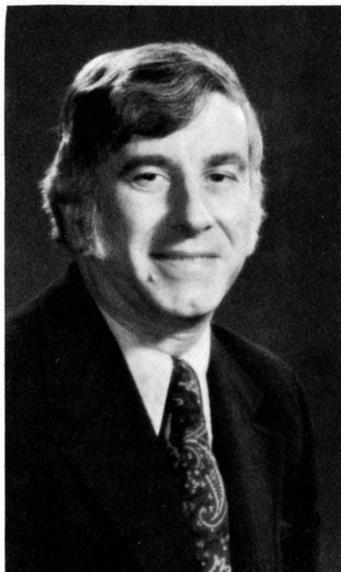

Other new officers of the Board are Richard D. Haynes, '58, of Dallas, vice president, and C. Royce Hough, '59, of Winston-Salem, treasurer. Bill Washburn, '40, was re-elected executive secretary.

Retiring members of the Board were Hillier, T. Hal Clarke, '38, of Atlanta, and J. Peter G. Muhlenberg, '50, of Wyomissing, Pa.

In taking over the presidency, Tucker praised Hillier's leadership of the Alumni Association during the past year, saying that he could think of no higher tribute than that Hillier "is in all respects the perfect Washington and Lee gentleman."

At halftime of the W&L-Towson State lacrosse game, the Student Planning and Development Committee staged the "W&L 500"—a 500-foot race featuring full-sized students aboard kiddie-sized tricycles. Seventeen student organizations paid a $20 entry fee to compete for a prize of two kegs of beer. President Huntley rode the pace tricycle to start the race.

Junior Jim Baird, riding for Sigma Chi, pedaled to the front about halfway down the track and won going away. A burly student in drag—proclaimed "Miss W&L" in competition with two stray dogs—gave Baird a smooch and a garland of beer cans as a token of his victory.

Following the award to the winner, the chairman of the student Planning and Development Committee, senior Paul Perkins, presented a check for the proceeds of the race to University Trustee Gordon Leggett to be applied to the University's scholarship funds. The Student Planning and Development Committee was organized three years ago to involve students in W&L's Development Program.

Tricycles for the race were donated by Best Products, the company of which Trustee Sydney Lewis is president. After the race the tricycles were given to the Rockbridge Area Social Service Department for distribution to the children of needy families.

W&L students experience the pain and joy of the Boston Marathon

MAR • A • THON: n. 1. A long-distance race esp. one on foot. 2. A contest of endurance.

—The American Heritage Dictionary

The Boston Marathon is 26 miles, 385 yards long. The distance is standard, but to the runners, the April race in Boston is far from ordinary. Indeed, since its origin 78 years ago, "the Boston" has been something special. Today it is recognized as the oldest, most prestigious marathon in the United States. The Boston is THE marathon in America and is rightly regarded as one of the three "class" marathons on an international scale. Along with the Fukuoka in Japan and the Olympic Marathon, the Boston is renowned for attracting the world's best distance runners.

This year there were 1,705 official starters at Hopkinton. Among them were five students representing Washington and Lee: Mike Burns, a sophomore from Martinsville, Va.; Bill Kalal, a senior from Garfield Heights, Ohio; Ferris Mack, a freshman from Babylon, N. Y.; Tem Washington, a sophomore from Alexandria, Va., and I, Mike Brittin, a senior from Great Falls, Va.

The odyssey had begun months before. The rigorous training and preparation lay behind us. To compete at Boston, a runner is required to qualify by finishing an A.A.U. sanctioned marathon in less than three hours, 30 minutes. Burnsie and Tem were distinguished veterans, both having run the distance in the superb time of 2:43. Bill also qualified under the three-hour mark; Ferris was a 3:15 qualifier. I was less experienced; my qualifying time beat the necessary mark by only two minutes and four seconds.

The W&L contingent, replete with sleeping bags and track shoes, gathered over a period of time in Boston. Burnsie and I drove up a week early, excited by the prospect of a week in Boston. "Cap'n K" (Bill Kalal) arrived shortly thereafter. Ferris came in later. Tem was the last, landing at Logan International only one day before the race. We stayed in a dorm at Harvard, ran along the Charles River, and rode the subway. We were on vacation and shrugged off the pressures of recent exams with pleasure.

Like all the runners, each of us came to Boston with different goals and aspirations. That is only natural. Of the nearly 2,000 athletes participating in the Boston this year, only a handful—perhaps a dozen or two—had a real chance of capturing first place. That fact is significant and goes to the essence of long-distance running. Clearly, what attracts the marathoner is not the glory of being No. 1. Rather it is the satisfaction and self-awareness one might derive from an experience which challenges the very limits of human capabilities.

"The loneliness of the long-distance runner" is often quoted and is suggestive of the desolation which so often accompanies seclusion. The phrase is somewhat misleading. Though the runner struggles alone, it is in solitude that he finds the strength of individuality and independence. Through his training and his trials, the marathoner develops the truest sense of competition—competition with himself. He is dependent upon no one. His goal is to fulfill his own potential. My mentor and inspiration, Mike Burns, sums these sentiments in buoyant and profound terms: "Success breeds success. And in running, success means winning. But the great thing about running is that you can win without finishing first. A runner sets personal goals for himself and if he attains these goals, he wins. In a marathon, anyone who finishes wins; he wins the competition between himself and the course—the distance."

The challenge of a marathon deserves further comment. It is a test of the physical and mental reserves of any runner and provides ground for interesting psychological study. When athletic physicians and doctors examined the marathon and its demands and effects on the human body, their findings were startling. An average distance runner may stock up enough energy through food intake, especially carbohydrates, to allow for approximately 15 miles of running. Thereafter, the body must draw on a backlog of natural fat. This source is good for another five miles. With six miles to go, the marathoner must depend upon emotion and will power to keep running. The final stretch can be a most telling and painful experience. Again, Burnsie offers adequate description: "You can finish a marathon in one of two ways, if you finish at all. You either feel bad, or you feel so utterly horrible that there are no words to describe it."

What makes the runner endure? Be assured that we enjoy pain no more than the next person, though we do learn to handle our own special type of pain. "Cap'n K" suggested with characteristic simplicity during an interview with the Harvard Crimson that "the pain and distance impose a meaning on the run." One thing is certain: in the last few miles of a marathon "the runner meets himself face to face." It is this challenge which makes the runner run—which prods the distance man through endless hours, days, and months of training.

The Boston Marathon was a thrill, a progression of sights, sounds, and feelings from the rural simplicity of Hopkinton's Town Green to the urban complexity of downtown Boston. Over a half a million fans turned out, lining the entire course on both sides of the road.

They shouted encouragement, offered refreshments, and occasionally doused the runners with a cooling spray of water. Radios blared, dogs barked, children bid for a slap on the hand. The girls at Wellesley were beautiful. The spectators pleading and hurting with you at Heartbreak Hill were an inspiration. The fans were an integral part of the experience that was the 78th Boston Marathon.

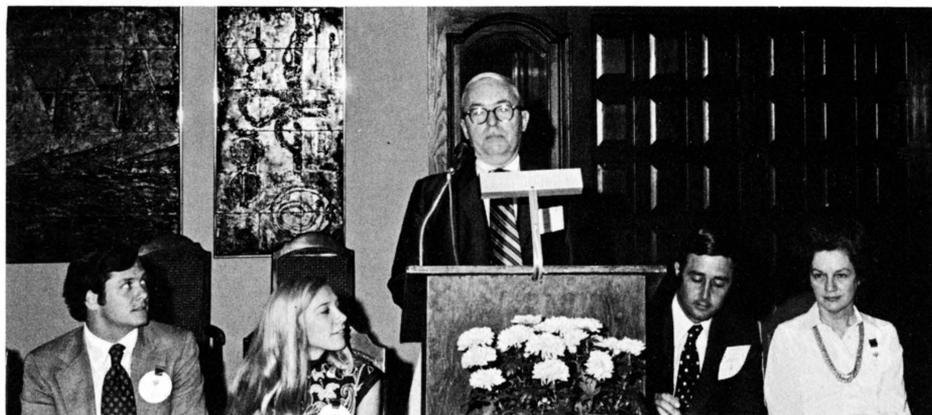

Burnsie finished in 2:41 and placed 177th. Less than a minute behind was Tem. Bill reached the Prudential Center in 2:53. Ferris stopped at 25 miles, the victim of severe leg cramps. Myself, I finished in 3:20—"back in the pack," happy to have participated and delightfully exhausted.

TIDEWATER. Umbrellas and raincoats were the order of the day as Norfolk area alumni gathered on March 16 for an oyster roast. Despite almost torrential rains, the occasion at Bayville Farm was a gala event, and everyone had a delightful time. Guests from the University were Law Dean and Mrs. Roy Steinheimer, Dr. and Mrs. Jay Cook, and Alumni Secretary and Mrs. Bill Washburn. Chapter president, Peter A. Agelasto, III, '62, along with the secretary, Richard C. Burroughs, '68, made the arrangements. The oysters and refreshments were plentiful and delicious. Entertainment was provided by two bluegrass guitarists.

JACKSONVILLE. Alumni together with parents of current students from the Jacksonville area joined for a reception and dinner at the Florida Yacht Club on March 22. The special guest and speaker was history Prof. William A. Jenks, a native of Jacksonville, who was accompanied by his wife. Dr. Jenks reported on activities at the University — a report that was well received. E. Ellis Zahra, Jr., '68, who was elected chapter president at a recent business meeting, presided and made the introductions. Other officers named were Willis M. Ball, III, '69, vice president, and Harry M. Wilson, III, '69, secretary. President Zahra, before adjourning the meeting, outlined future plans for the chapter, especially activities involving students from the Jacksonville area applying for admission to Washington and Lee.

PALM BEACH-FORT LAUDERDALE. An enthusiastic group of alumni joined for cocktails and dinner on March 25 at Stouffers Restaurant in the Holiday Inn in West Palm Beach. The guest of honor was Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn. Chapter president Hugh Glickstein, '53A, '55L, presided and introduced Washburn, who gave a brief report on the University and showed color slides of University activities. A question and answer period followed the slide presentation. Bev H. Smith, '32, was host for the cocktail party. During the program, special recognition was extended to Horner C. Fisher, '17, and Judge Russell O. Morrow, '32.

NEW ORLEANS. Director of Development Farris Hotchkiss and Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn were guests of honor on April 18 at a meeting of New Orleans alumni at the Southern Yacht Club. Chapter president Gus A. Fritchie, Jr., '50, presided, and the arrangements were made by Mr. and Mrs. John H. McMillan, '42. Hotchkiss, the principal speaker, surveyed life at the University during the past 10 years, discussing those facets that had changed and those that remained the same. His review was well received. Special recognition was paid to those at the head table, including Judge and Mrs. John Minor Wisdom and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Lykes, Jr. Both Wisdom and Lykes are Trustees of the University.

GULF STREAM. Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn was the special guest at a stag luncheon for alumni of the Miami area on March 26 at the University Club. Washburn reported on activities at the University, answered questions, and showed color slides of University scenes. Mercer Clarke, '66, made arrangements for the luncheon, and Larry Craig, '66, presided during the program.

LITTLE ROCK. Alumni and their guests joined for a very festive occasion on April 20 at the Little Rock Country Club for a reception and dinner in honor of President and Mrs. Robert E. R. Huntley. Presiding was Everett Tucker, Jr., '34, who was recently elected president of the Alumni Board of Directors. President Huntley reported on the current status and outlook of the University. He emphasized the strong need for continued financial support and complimented the chapter for its past generosity. His talk was enthusiastically received. During a short business session a nominating report was presented by Peyton Rice, '40. The following officers were elected: William C. Norman, Jr., '56, president; Howard T. Shepherd, '40, vice president, and Everett Tucker, III, '72, treasurer. Earlier in Little Rock on March 4, a small group of alumni met with James W. Whitehead, treasurer of the University. # Alumni Notes

Alumni Chair Sales Raise Additional Scholarship Funds

Sales of the Washington and Lee Chair continue to produce substantial sums for the John Graham Scholarship Fund, which helps worthy young men attend the University. The sales are a project of the Alumni Association.

This spring the Alumni Board of Directors turned over a check for $2,200 to the University for addition to the fund, which honors John Graham of the Class of 1914. This most recent gift brought the scholarship total to about $19,200. Last year, the Alumni Association's contribution to the fund, also representing profit from chair sales, was $3,000.

So when you buy a W&L chair, you not only acquire a fine piece of furniture, but you also help the University's ever-needful student financial aid program.

Alumni at Home

These alumni are hardly unlocated. They were very much in Lexington for Spring Reunions and are here living it up at a cocktail party on the verandah of the Alumni House. If you look closely, you will see one alumnus taking a picture of President Huntley (left foreground) perhaps as a memento to show the folks back home.

Alumni gather in front of Lee Chapel for coffee before the annual meeting of the Alumni Association.
