THOUGHTS ABOUT WASHINGTON AND LEE

In last year's University Report, I presented highlights of the past year derived from reports compiled by the deans and other administrative officers. This year I would like to take a little different approach. I want to share with you some reflections of my own about Washington and Lee and its institutional objectives. Most of you are familiar with Washington and Lee's essential qualities. But I think you will agree with me that it can be rewarding from time to time to recapitulate those characteristics that make Washington and Lee worthy of our support and affection.

Washington and Lee's commitment to the liberal arts tradition in education is strong and unwavering, the more so in these days when the tradition is under considerable attack, tacitly or explicitly, from various sources.

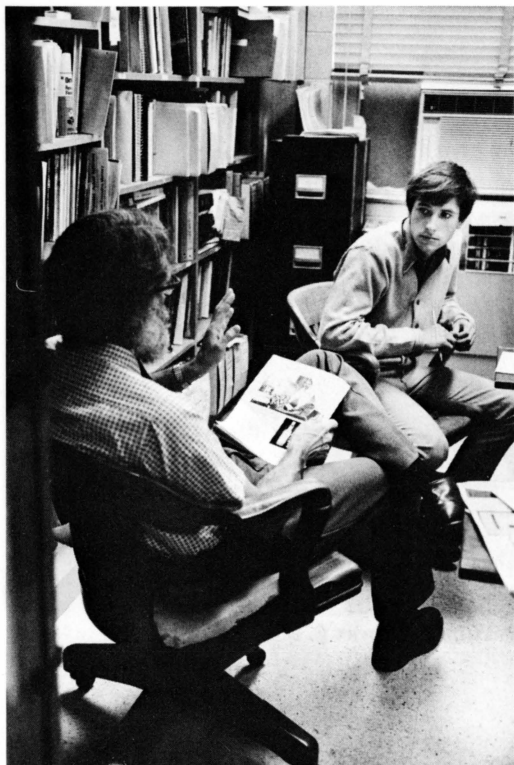

I am aware that the term "liberal arts" is neither distinctive nor self-defining. While I am sure that no definition I could offer is likely to be adequate or complete, I believe that at Washington and Lee we mean by the term "liberal arts tradition" something like the following:

A commitment to the premise that education of the youthful mind is best achieved by a curricular program during the undergraduate years which requires rigorous inquiry and study of one of the disciplines which time has proven to be intellectually demanding, and which simultaneously requires of the student at least some significant study in a number of other similar disciplines. The objective—never quite accomplished, of course—is the achievement of intellectual discipline and self-confidence through deep involvement and approximate mastery of at least one demanding area of study, and at the same time the achievement of some perspective on what might be called the human condition, particularly the accumulated achievements of the human intellect, the power of reason, its strengths and its limitations. The liberal arts tradition to which we adhere would hold that this kind of educational objective is not a luxury, as some would assert, but rather an extremely efficient way to prepare for a useful and fulfilling life.

In my judgment, the major weakness of the liberal arts tradition over the years has been the occasional but persistent notion, both in and out of academia, that it can only be successfully pursued if abstracted from reality, that it is somehow sullied if it is conjoined with studies which pertain to specific career objectives of the student. At Washington and Lee, we have for more than a century rejected the notion that any such dichotomy exists. On the contrary, we have embraced the opposite notion: that professional or pre-professional education is best achieved if begun at the undergraduate level in a way which closely interweaves studies usually thought of as oriented to the professions with studies traditionally regarded as liberal arts. Such interweaving occurs through curricular organization and teaching methods. Here, we think it occurs best in a small college atmosphere where close interdisciplinary relationships can occur among faculty and where the relationship between faculty and student can go far beyond the limits of the classroom.

As you would expect of an institution with the kinds of objectives I have alluded to, the vast majority of our students both now and in the past have found their way into the professions. We take great pride in their achievements. Far out of proportion to their number, they consistently achieve distinction of the best kind in business, in law, in medicine, in the ministry, in teaching and research, in journalism, and not infrequently in the arts.

We try very hard to tie everything we do here to our educational objectives. For example, we try to attract and retain a faculty of persons whose principal objective in life is teaching. We have a number of programs which encourage and assist our faculty in research and writing, and their achievements in these pursuits are often significant. But we never think of these pursuits as ends in themselves, though it might be quite appropriate for some other kinds of institutions to do so. Rather we approach them as effective ways to strengthen our faculty as teachers, never believing for one moment that professional achievement and professional pride by a faculty member need be inconsistent with commitment to the institutional objectives of effective teaching.

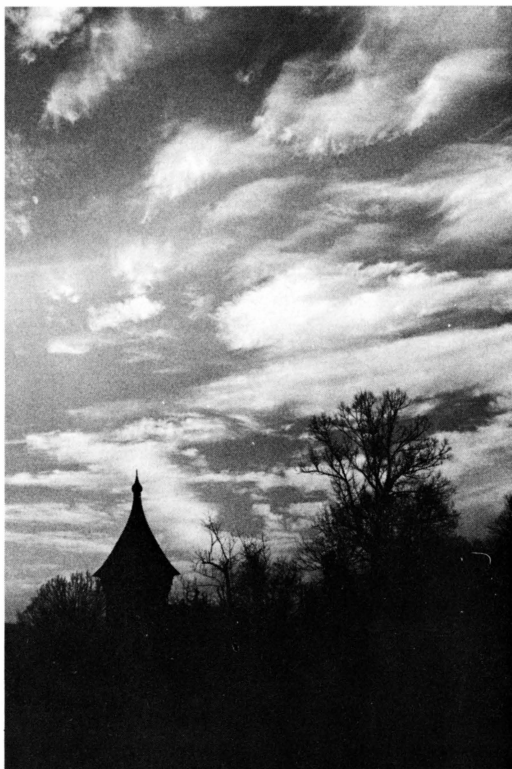

Similarly, our athletic program is justified by its relationship to our educational objectives. More than twenty years ago, at a time when such a move was rather unusual, Washington and Lee moved boldly away from the kind of specially financed athletic program which sometimes tends to become almost a separate enterprise revolving in an orbit of its own. We probably spend no less money on athletics—perhaps more—than we would be spending under the so-called “subsidized approach,” but we spend the money in an effort to assure each student the opportunity to participate and compete to the fullest level of his ability and desire.

One further point I cannot close without mentioning. Since the time when General Lee was president here following the Civil War, the responsibility entrusted to the students for self-governance has been extraordinarily broad. A wide array of student activities falls entirely under their aegis, and this fact is not a result of some token bow in the direction of student activists of the '60's, but pre-dates that turbulent era by many decades. The most significant aspect of student life here is the pervasive influence of the system of honor, which, again, dates from the Lee years. I do not believe that there are many places in which the concept of honor is taken so seriously or guarded so jealously by the students as is the case at Washington and Lee. Again, this notion of an honorable community is closely related to our educational objectives, for we think that the teaching-learning process flourishes best in a situation where mutual trust and respect form the bedrock of relationships within the community.

As for the future, I am convinced that all higher education institutions in America, particularly independent ones, will be well advised to concentrate effort where past achievements demonstrate special capacity and strength rather than to proliferate their programs in a futile effort to achieve every worthy educational objective in a single institution.

All college presidents, I am sure, spend much of their time worrying about finances, and I am certainly no exception. Our single most pressing need at the moment, I think, is the need to complete the funding of our undergraduate library on which work began this summer. The current facility is inadequate, though it can be used in quite satisfactory fashion to provide new quarters for the school of Commerce, Economics, and Politics which is presently squeezed into space far smaller than it requires. This move in turn will allow us to accommodate several departments of the college in a more generous fashion than is now possible. In addition to these changes to the physical plant, we know that we will need to increase our endowment resources if we are to remain financially healthy while at the same time charging a tuition which our students and their families are able and willing to pay.

We have a number of special programs and needs that we hope to provide for in the years immediately ahead. For example, we have recently embarked upon a program in professional ethics for the undergraduate designed for students who have already made a professional career choice. The program is still somewhat experimental but appears to be quite successful, and if we decide to continue it we will need additional financing. Further by way of example, our programs in faculty development will require additional resources before long if we are to continue to encourage our faculty to improve as scholars and teachers. Our computer facility is becoming obsolete and will soon require a large capital expenditure.

The list could go on—and as one need is met another will arise. But I have confidence that Washington and Lee will move through her third century strong and vital—for two simple reasons: her ideals are good and valuable, and she has friends who love her.

THE ROBERT E. LEE ASSOCIATES

The Robert E. Lee Associates was established by the Board of Trustees of Washington and Lee University in 1967 to identify and recognize leadership in support of the University's educational program. Members welcome any alumnus or friend of the University who chooses to join this fellowship.

Qualification for Membership: An alumnus, parent or friend may join the Robert E. Lee Associates by contributing $1,000 or more to the University through its Annual Fund for support of current operations in the educational and general budget. This gift may be paid in one or more installments during the fiscal year—July 1 to June 30.

General's Council: A Lee Associate becomes a member of the General's Council for cumulative gifts totaling $10,000 or more in 12 consecutive years or less, or for a pledge to accomplish this result. Thus, a donor may fulfill this requirement by giving—or by pledging to give—$1,000 in any 10 years out of 12, by making larger gifts at less frequent intervals, or with a single gift of $10,000 or more. Asterisk (*) indicates those who gave at the Lee Associates Level in 1975-76.

Many alumni and friends of Washington and Lee make gifts to the University's capital and current support programs in the form of memorials in honor of fellow alumni, relatives, and friends. Donors of the memorial gifts are included among the alumni, parents, and friends whose names are listed in this report in the appropriate places. The names of those honored by such gifts are listed here.

All of these memorial gifts add immeasurably to the spirit of the University. This year, two such memorials warrant attention: The Oliver and Ronald O. Scharnberg Memorials and the Marcellus H. Stow Scholarship Fund. And as always, the numerous gifts to the Adrian L. Bendheim Jr. Physics Library are most helpful and greatly appreciated.

BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY/ VIRGINIA FOUNDATION FOR INDEPENDENT COLLEGES

The University's friends in the business and industrial community contributed a significant 12.1% of the total gift income received for support of current operations in 1975-76. The cornerstone of this support in 1975-76 was the $123,000 received through the statewide program of solicitation carried out by the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges. Under the direction of a board that includes 34 business leaders and the presidents of the 12 independent member colleges, this organization enlisted the support of 970 Virginia business establishments to raise $1.3 million for private higher education in Virginia. The remainder of the contributions from business and industry came in the form of direct grants and matching gifts made through programs especially designed to aid independent colleges.

A foundation's grant to an educational institution is a welcome addition to operating income and more: it is also a public endorsement of the institution's leadership and educational program that is universally respected by other foundations, corporations, and individuals. Therefore, Washington and Lee acknowledges with gratitude the gifts it received from foundations in support of current operations during 1975-76.

FRANK J. GILLIAM SCHOLARSHIP FUND

In August, 1973, following Mrs. Gilliam's death in May of that year, Dean Frank Gilliam established an endowment to provide scholarship assistance. In March, 1976, when Dean Gilliam died, it seemed altogether appropriate that those who wished to remember him and Mrs. Gilliam, through gifts to Washington and Lee do so by adding to the Gilliam Memorial Scholarship Fund. Below are those who to date have memorialized Dean and Mrs. Gilliam through the scholarship. The fund, of course, remains open for additional gifts.

THE ESTATE PLANNING PROGRAM

Some natural phenomenon allowed Dick Gooch, '30, to hear, at his home in Lynchburg, the signal of WLUR-FM, Washington and Lee's radio station, a signal that was normally audible only in Lexington. Perhaps in part because of this atmospheric accident, Gooch had throughout his later life the keenest interest in Washington and Lee, particularly in its journalism program. At his death, under the provisions of his will and through his life insurance, about $1.6 million came to Washington and Lee to perpetuate this interest in his Alma Mater.

Each alumnus of Washington and Lee hears, in one way or another, a signal from Lexington. For some, the signal comes as a memory of red brick and white columns, of autumn days on Rockbridge hillsides, of spring-time at Goshen. For one alumnus the signal is the image of a beloved teacher, a remembered voice suggesting new ideas and leading a receptive mind down new paths. For another it is an ideal, a pattern of behavior, a high standard of honesty and civility. For most, perhaps, the signal is a love of ideas, a commitment to an education that never ends.

The signal is powerful. It is heard and its influence is felt by parents of Washington and Lee men, by their widows, their brothers, by neighbors of the University and by those who merely recognize and love what the University stands for and does.

As the liberally educated Washington and Lee alumnus never stops learning, the University itself is never completely built, never ceases to grow and to change. There are many who have through the years, like Dick Gooch, shared their estates with

Washington and Lee, participating in the University's development and assuring that the signal it sends will not weaken.

During the past year, the University received distributions of money and property from ten estates having a total value of more than $2.5 mil-

TYPICAL GIFT TO W&L'S POOLED INCOME FUND

Mr. A is 63; his wife, three years younger. In planning for retirement, Mr. A, who is presently in a 50% income tax bracket, knows that he will need additional income from his investments to offset the anticipated loss of salary. He also knows that, when he retires, he will be approaching the 45th anniversary of his graduation from Washington and Lee. Mr. A values his Washington and Lee education and wants to help make such an education available to other young men by creating a scholarship fund.

In conversation with his accountant and attorney and with the Office of University Development, Mr. A learns of Washington and Lee's Pooled Income Fund, a way in which he can accomplish much of what he wants. This is how he does it.

Mr. A owns stock which he bought twenty years ago for long term growth. The stock, acquired for $15,000 has proved a good investment; in fact, it now has a value of $90,000. But the yield is only 2%, $1,800 per year. Sale of the stock by Mr. A will result in capital gains tax that will greatly reduce the amount Mr. A has available for reinvestment.

Instead of selling the stock, Mr. A executes an agreement with United Virginia Bank, Trustee of Washington and Lee's Pooled Income Fund, and transfers the stock to the bank. Mr. A's agreement directs the bank to add his gift to all similar gifts in the fund, to assign Mr. A a number of shares of participation in the fund based on the full market value of his gift, to pay to Mr. A during his life and then to

Mrs. A during her life a proportionate share of the income earned by the fund. At the death of the survivor of Mr. and Mrs. A, the bank is directed to withdraw their share of the principal of the fund and to pay it to Washington and Lee to create the A Scholarship.

What is the tax effect of this gift to Mr. A? First, he may deduct from his income tax in this year, the year of the gift, about $25,220, the present value of Washington and Lee's interest in the gift based on the ages of Mr. and Mrs. A and the average rate of return of the fund. Second, at Mr. A's death his estate is entitled to an estate tax deduction based on the value of Washington and Lee's interest in the gift at that time.

During the lives of the A's, they, or the survivor of them will receive income, not at the 2% rate paid by his present investment, but at the rate of return earned by the fund. That rate is now a bit over 6%. The fund will pay no capital gains tax when Mr. A's stock is sold.

The A's will, therefore, have increased their spendable income, assured the creation of a scholarship fund at Washington and Lee, and saved considerable income and estate taxes—all through one simple transaction.

Washington and Lee's Pooled Income Fund now manages slightly more than $1 million. This amount is earning income now for the living beneficiaries of the fund. It is available for generations of new beneficiaries—the W&L students of the future.

Chairman
Estate Planning Council

lion. Gifts were received from the estates of Christopher Chenery, '09; John Cole (brother of the late William B. F. Cole, '20L); Albert S. Cummins, '14; John Edmondson, '20; Francis Flournoy; Richard Gooch, '30; Wilbur Hall, '15L; Ross Malone, '32L; Oliver Scharnberg (father of the late Ronald Scharnberg, '63); Emily J. Williamson, George W. Diehl, '13; and Ben Rives, '17.

During the year, the University also learned of new estates in which it will share including those of Harvey Smith, '30; Lucille W. Chaffin (mother of the late William Wells Chaffin, a member of the faculty); H. Graham Morison, '30; Eben Jackson, '33; Miriam Caperton McCluer (widow of Matthew T. McCluer, '04) and John Lee Pratt.

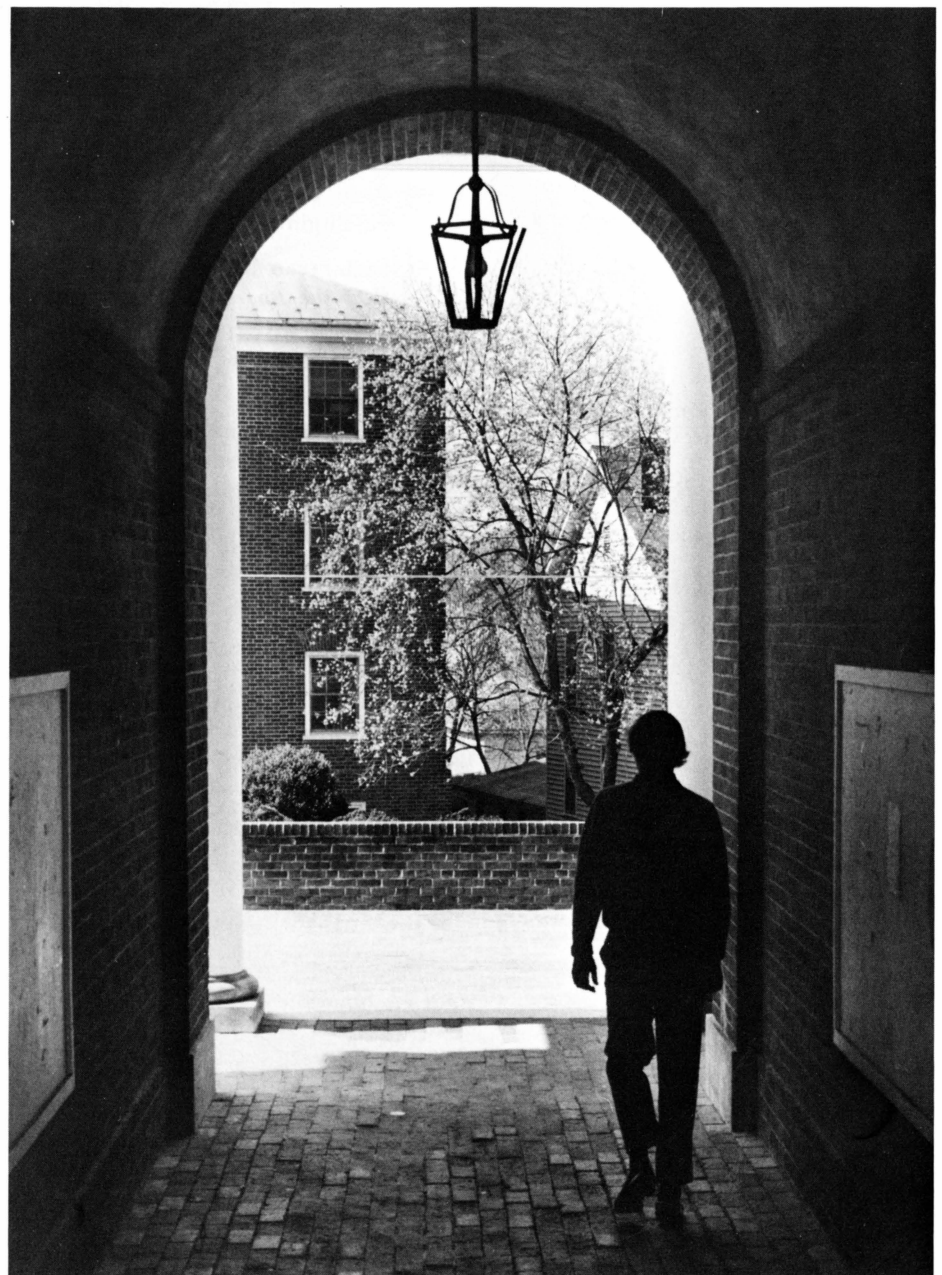

Some who want to make a portion of their capital available to Washington and Lee, either for the University's unrestricted use or to further a particular interest are doing so, not through their wills, but by making life income gifts. Such gifts may take different forms (an example of a typical gift to Washington and Lee's Pooled Income Fund is in the accompanying box), but they have certain common characteristics.

Each donor of a life income gift parts with some capital but retains or gives to another the income produced by this capital. Each life income gift enables Washington and Lee to anticipate in its planning an identifiable future addition to its funds. Life income gifts enable a donor to remove assets from his estate, saving some of the costs and delays incident to estate administration, and to obtain professional management of his assets during his lifetime. Finally, there are significant tax incentives to making life income gifts, incentives that encourage a donor to be more generous than he may have thought possible, and enable him to accomplish a great deal for Washington and Lee at relatively little cost to him.

The staff of the Office of University Development is ready and happy to discuss with any alumnus or friend of Washington and Lee, in confidence, ways of including the University in an estate plan. There can be no more satisfying way of returning the signal that W&L sends.
