President's Page—On the Uses of Great Men

*Preliminary Remarks, Washington-Cincinnati Society
Convocation, April 12, 1935*

Almost exactly a year ago today, many of you recall, we had in this chapel exercises of a different nature. Then we went to the lovely village cemetery and while a little driving snow blinded our eyes we lowered into the earth the body of a man who combined many elements of greatness.

Some of us were thinking then that the supreme tragedy of death is in this fact, that when a great man dies, so much goes with him.

His knowledge, for example, dies—save for such part as he may have transferred to the inadequate modes of type; and his capacity for knowledge, the disciplined mind with its patient searchings and keen appraisals and true interpretations, these die. Progress would be swifter if the great surgeon could transfer to the young doctor the discernment that results from long experience, the skill from great practice; if the statesman could bequeath to the young politician the noble dream of life's autumn past all the summer heats of personal ambition; if the scholar could transmit to the student the zeal for a pursuit of knowledge, a competence upon the path of that pursuit.

In time the great man's orderings of material things, his economic authority, breaks down. His personal impact upon other men passes in a generation or two. His face remains only a lifeless similitude upon prints or paintings; the memory of his personality slowly dissolves.

But of all great men, whether George Washington or Harry Campbell, certain things never die, cannot die.

The honest and unselfish work that they have done, at least in some indestructible central core, is permanent. It is heaven's high concession to us that even in the brevity and the triviality of our day, we may work for eternity. So the poet, contemplating the awful contrast between the everlasting immensities and our own pathetic transiency, could voice the most ambitious of human prayers: "And the work of our hands, establish Thou it."

The character of the great man does not die. It abides, not as an alabaster image to be jealously guarded as perfection, but as a landmark of victory upon heights far ahead, heights won through struggle and denial, heights that we may reach by following such examples.

Most important of all, the loyalties, the spiritual enthusiasms, of great men do not die. They endure, the most precious possessions of our race. They have this amazing power that they can give to even dead material things a shining immortality. Washington, for example, died a man of great property and left a will of great detail, of large dimension; but of all his holdings, only one part now serves the purpose then designated in that will. This is the money he gave to our institution; his generosity endowed that particular money with timeless utility. The faith of great men and the sacrifices in behalf of their faith, these things abide.

All educational institutions that are not of the "cash-and-carry" type are built not of brick and stone but of the contributions made by great men, the work they did, the characters they left as patterns for life, the convictions they proposed as guides for life.

Our University is blessed in the number of such men and in the quality of these men, their eminence and their directions. Today we honor the first two notable benefactions, benefactions of more than money: the gift from Washington and the gift from his friends, the Virginia Society of the Cincinnati.

These men and other rare souls chose this school as the depository of their undying heritage, whether of money or of service. They acted deliberately, without haste of hysteria, electing of free will and of best judgment this institution as the channel through which they would make effective forever their holiest aspiration for mankind, their ultimate faith in the capacity of youth to offer worthy response.

It is a high honor that has thus been paid us. But today and always may we think of it not as a mere compliment, not as a distinction of which we shall boast, but as the measure of a responsibility, the definition of an obligation which we gladly accept.

Francis Leighton Guiney

Two of Washington and Lee's Oldest Alumni

MEET TWO of Washington and Lee University's oldest and most highly respected alumni, men who studied under General Robert E. Lee: George Addison Mahan of Hannibal, Missouri, and James William Lockett of St. Louis, Missouri.

Back in the reconstruction days of 1869 both of these men traveled to Lexington to further their education at the school headed by the man to whom the nation, reunited, bowed in respect. From different parts of the country they came as youths—but now, as two of the University's most beloved alumni, they live near each other.

James William Lockett left the old family plantations down in his native Georgia and came to Lexington shortly after the War Between the States, arriving about the same time that George Addison Mahan trekked to the historic Virginia town from his home in far-away Missouri.

For Mr. Lockett particularly the fame that surrounded General Lee lived on in his academic life. That was because this Georgian had just served through the war as a member of the fighting Georgia Cadets, and had become personally familiar with the reputation of leadership and high character which Robert E. Lee seemed to enjoy throughout the entire South, and later extended to the nation through his wise guidance of the institution to which he devoted the last and richest years of his life.

James William Lockett was at Lexington two years, leaving in 1869. Now he is in St. Louis, far from his native Georgia plantations, but still close to Washington and Lee in his memories.

And in nearby Hannibal, Missouri, lives George Addison Mahan — let's write about his life in "backward fashion," starting with today and working back to his student days under Lee:

Hannibal, Mo., as you should know if you haven't forgotten all your childhood books and fantasies, was the boyhood home of America's Mark Twain, who glorified the youth of the nation in a manner yet unexcelled.

Mark Twain so caught the fancy of George Addison Mahan that he has become possibly the author's greatest admirer. If that statement seems a bit broad, take a trip to Hannibal and see what you see:

At the foot of Cardiff Hill there you will see a monument of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, those happy kids who romped through Mark Twain's pages:

Mr. Mahan erected that monument.

Mark Twain's boyhood home still stands in Hannibal, the property of the city as a memorial to the writer's genius.

Mr. Mahan with Mrs. Mahan and their son purchased the place and presented it to Hannibal.

To complete the Mark Twain theme, Mr. Mahan has erected several markers throughout the city denoting various incidents in the author's life, and pointing out places of interest in connection with his books.

And recently he was made chairman of the state of Missouri's Mark Twain centennial celebration, which officially opened January 15 of this year. The centennial pageant will be staged on June 18, 19, and 20, and a "gigantic homecoming" (Mr. Mahan's own stationery says so!) will be staged the week of September 8. The Mark Twain birthday banquet is scheduled November 30 to climax the celebration.

Mr. Mahan, besides being head of the law firm of Mahan, Mahan and Fuller at Hannibal, is president of the Missouri State Historical Society and a member of the advisory council of the university of Missouri. He formerly was city attorney of Hannibal, was state's attorney of the county, and for a time was a member of the Missouri state legislature. He belongs to the University club and the Noonday club at St. Louis, is a Mason and a Phi Beta Kappa.

Now to skip back to the early life of this distinguished alumnus:

George Addison Mahan was born August 6, 1851 in Marion county, Missouri. He was a student at Bethel college, Palmyra and Missouri before attending Washington college the session of 1869-1870. After leaving Lexington he went to Indiana University, and received his LL.B. there in 1872.

Since 1873 Mr. Mahan has practiced law in Hannibal, practicing alone until some ten years ago when he formed the firm he now heads. He finds time to be a member of the board of directors of the Hannibal National Bank, the Hannibal Bridge Company, and the Hannibal Mutual Building and Loan association. He is, as you would suspect, a member of both the American and Missouri bar associations.

In 1930 Culver-Stockton college at Canton, Missouri, conferred upon Mr. Mahan an LL.D. degree.

While Mr. Mahan has devoted his life to the practice of law, Mr. Lockett has directed the family plantations of the South, and engaged in the brokerage and banking business as well.

James William Lockett was born November 23, 1848, on the Lockett plantation in Crawford county, Georgia. His family was of Revolutionary stock, and settled in the state of Georgia about 1780.

Mr. Lockett's primary education was received in private schools of Macon, Georgia, not far from the family estates. He joined the Georgia Cadets when the bugles first called, and served with distinction during the War Between the States, and following the conflict managed the plantations and became a broker and banker.

In 1870 he was married to Miss Mary Bond of Macon. His second wife was Miss Pauline Ackland of Nashville, Tennessee.

Mr. Lockett's father, William Lockett, was a famous pioneer railroad builder of the old South, and one of the stories has it that he constructed the old Georgia Southern railway from Savannah to the Allamaha river with his own slaves.

Mr. Lockett now makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. J. Vion Papin, in St. Louis.

There is the all-too-brief story of two of Washington and Lee University's oldest and most beloved alumni. There is the story of two men who studied under General Robert E. Lee, who exemplify the traditions of the University, who have carried into the nation's conglomerate trend of life and affairs the richness of what they learned at the school which has the traditions of Washington and Lee as its heritage.—R. # Sixty Seats in the House of Representatives

By F. JAMES BARNES, II

Assistant Professor of Political Science at Washington and Lee

INCREASINGLY impressive is the record of Washington and Lee men in public service being brought to light by a systematic search of the records for alumni achievement in this meritorious field of endeavor.

Twenty-one Washington and Lee governors* of thirteen states were reported in the first part of the study to be released. The second release set forth the exploits of the eighteen United States Senators, from eleven states, who were wholly or partly trained at Washington and Lee. And now we add to this splendid record the achievements of the sixty sons of Washington and Lee who have represented their states in the United States House of Representatives, thus advancing the number of Washington and Lee Congressmen to the extraordinary total of seventy-eight.

Eighteen states have been represented by these sixty members of the lower house of Congress; states as widely separated as Florida and Oregon, Delaware and California. Virginia has been represented in the House by twenty-nine Washington and Lee alumni; West Virginia by six. Arkansas and Kentucky have each chosen Washington and Lee men on three occasions; Florida, Georgia, Idaho, South Carolina, and Texas have been represented by alumni on two occasions. Other states to be represented by alumni are: Alabama, California, Delaware, Louisiana, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, and Tennessee.

Brief biographical sketches follow in the order in which the subjects of the sketches were first elected or appointed to the House:

JOE McDOWELL

Representative from North Carolina, 1797-1799

Born in Winchester, Virginia, February 15, 1756; moved to North Carolina with his parents in 1758; attended the common schools and Washington College. Served against the Indians on the frontier and later took an active part in the revolution attaining the rank of Colonel before the close of the war; engaged in planting; delegate to the State Constitutional Convention, which ratified the Constitution of the United States in 1789; member of the State House of Commons in 1791 and 1792; elected to the Fifth Congress (March 4, 1797-March 3, 1799); was not a candidate for renomination in 1798; moved to Kentucky in 1800, but returned to North Carolina in 1801; died at his brother's home at Quaker Meadows, near Morgantown, Burke county, N. C., February 5, 1801.<sup>1</sup>

PETER EARLY

Representative from Georgia, 1803-1807

Born near Madison, Madison county, Virginia, June 20, 1773; attended the Liberty Hall Academy; graduated from Princeton College in 1792; studied law in Philadelphia, Pa., was admitted to the bar, and commenced practice in Wildes county, Ga. Elected to the Seventh Congress to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John Milledge; reelected to the Eighth and Ninth Congresses and served from January 10, 1803, to March 3, 1807; one of the managers appointed by the House of Representatives in January, 1804, to conduct impeachment proceedings against John Pickering, judge of the United States District Court for New Hampshire, and in December of the same year against Samuel Chase, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; declined to be a candidate for reelection; Governor of Georgia, 1813-1815; elected to the state senate in 1815, and served until his death near Scull Shoals, Green county, Ga., August 15, 1817.<sup>2</sup>

C. C. CLARK

Representative from Virginia, 1804-1806

AUTHOR'S NOTE—The author is conscious of a very real possibility of having omitted Washington and Lee members of Congresses more recent than the Seventieth, the last covered by the Congressional Directory which has been used as a check list for information gathered from such sources as the Alumni Magazine, the Ring-tum Phi, and the oral suggestions of friends and associates. He would, therefore, be grateful for information making possible the correction of omissions and for factual matter which would bring the information cited up to date.—F. J. B.

* To the list of twenty-one governors presented in January Alumni Magazine should be added Peter Early, Governor of Georgia, 1813-15.

Riegel Gets Research Award

THE AWARD of a grant-in-aid to O. W. Riegel, director of journalism at Washington and Lee university, to permit him to make a study of economic factors in the gathering and dissemination of news in Europe, has been made by the Social Science Research Council of New York.

With the assistance of funds supplied by the council, Professor Riegel will leave for Europe in June to spend three months gathering material in England, France, Germany and Russia. Professor Riegel is the author of the recently-published "Mobilizing for Chaos, The Story of the New Propaganda," which describes the political factors in world news.

The study to be undertaken this summer will deal with economic factors in the operation of news gathering associations and newspapers, including questions of ownership and control.

Professor Riegel recently was appointed a member of the Committee on Pressure Groups and Propaganda of the Social Science Research Council. An article by Professor Riegel, "Propaganda and the Press," a study of publicity and propaganda in American newspapers, appears in the May number of the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Shown in the above photograph, provided by Mr. Campbell, are students of Washington and Lee of 1890, gathered on the campus with the sacred banner of the University. To the left of the banner stands J. Randolph Tucker; Professor J. J. White is to the right of the banner; the author of this article is sitting on the ground almost directly in front of Professor White, with his left hand across the colors on the front of his coat. Note the absence of Newcomb Hall, and of old Tucker Hall, the law building that was destroyed by fire in December, 1934.

The Sacred Banner of Washington and Lee

By LESLIE LYLE CAMPBELL, Class of 1887
Cambridge, Massachusetts

IT WAS a soft autumn day in the old town of Lexington. A new generation of students had gathered in the College Chapel to hear read the minutes of the faculty adopted sixty-four years before, on the occasion of the death of their president, General Robert E. Lee, on October 12, 1870.

In the sacred Chapel sat a student of half a century ago. His eyes rested upon the banner that hangs on the wall, over the arch leading to the recumbent statue of Lee. Rushing memories carried the writer back to the birth and first bearing of the banner, that he had not seen for over forty years.

On May 29, 1890, an equestrian statue of General R. E. Lee was to be unveiled in Richmond, Va. From the chief marshal, General Fitzhugh Lee, the students of the College received an invitation to attend the unveiling ceremonies. The students chose the writer as their marshal for the trip to Richmond. A banner was needed to head the student column as they marched in the procession of the unveiling of the statue, and the writer secured the assistance of Professor W. G. Brown in designing a banner that would be appropriate for the occasion. The banner was paid for largely and loyally by the students, out of meagre resources, in those meagre years.

While the banner was being designed and made, the students gathered on the campus in the afternoons, in awkward squads, to learn how to "fall in," to "forward march," and to mix "right by fours" with "left by fours." The student drill caused many a merry smile on the faces of the Virginia Military Institute cadets as they passed by.

At last the banner arrived, in all its silken glory.

The chief banner bearer was William Edgar Darnall, and his aides, who held the guy cords, were Jesse J. Vineyard and Howard Lee Jones.

On the eve of the trip to Richmond, the students gathered on the campus, to hear farewell words from the Hon. J. Randolph Tucker, and from Professor J. J. White. Both of these had known Lee, both as a general and as college president. Other members of the faculty were on the left of the banner group.

The students, in blue and white caps and "blazers," with college colors on coats and canes, and the banner at the front of their column, marched away to the depot about sundown and boarded a special train that took them down by North River, through Balcony Falls, and on down the banks of the James.

That night was not made for sleep!

Early next morning the train pulled into Richmond, and after breakfast the student column formed on the Capitol grounds, beneath the equestrian statue of Washington, the generous benefactor of their college.

The march of the student body up Franklin street was an ovation. Old soldiers cheered Lee's youngest boys. Military companies presented arms as the boys passed. Miss Mary and Miss Mildred Lee waved to and smiled upon their college boys. The alumni cheered along the way. Thomas Nelson Page rushed out in the midst of the students and tossed his silk hat high in the air. The students in their caps and colors captured the smiles of many of the fairest of the South.

At last Lee's old and young boys stood, with bared heads, near the statue as the veil was drawn, and the Great Chieftain was seen on his faithful "Traveller." 'Twas there and then that the banner received its baptism and benediction. Will Darnall and his aides reverently bore the banner back to the College. Today the sacred banner hangs near him, in whose honor it was made and borne by loyal youth, forty-five years ago.

Many of the glorious boys of May 29, 1890 have passed over the river, and now rest under the everlasting trees. Among them are Lee's grandson "Bob," the two banner aides, Vineyard and Jones, and that charming student, Count Hidei Fukuoka, who, while in Richmond, won the heart of the writer's mother by his gentle modesty and dignity.

Lee's grandson, Bolling Lee, who marched with the banner, still survives. The students that still remain will ever cherish the benediction that fell upon them at Lee's statue in Richmond.

The arms painted on the banner comprise portions of the arms of Washington and Lee, which are as follows:

THE WASHINGTON ARMS: George Washington was descended from the Washingtons of Sulgrave Manor, England. The coat of arms that he used was derived from that ancestral family. In heraldic terms, the Washington arms are as follows:

CREST: Out of a ducal coronet or (gold) an eagle issuant (rising), with wings addorsed (back-to-back), sable (black).

SHIELD: Argent (silver field), two bars gules (red), in chief (at the top) three mullets (five-pointed rowels of spurs, pierced) gules (red).

MOTTO: Exitus acta probat.

In one copy of the arms used by Washington, the crest has a raven, while in the arms of his bookplate, the crest has an eagle. The question as to whether the American flag had its origin in the Washington arms is a mooted one. At any rate the three mullets in the Washington arms are not stars, but are pierced rowels of spurs, nor are they blue, but blood-red.

THE LEE ARMS: The Lee family of Virginia is descended from one of the most ancient families in the English peerage. In 1385 Robert de la Lee, of Coton Hall, Salop County, England, married the daughter and heiress of Sir Thomas Astley, of Nordley. After this marriage, the arms of the Lee and the Astley families were combined and quartered. At the quartering of the arms, the original

Lee arms were placed in quadrants one and four of the shield, and the Astley arms in quadrants two and three. In the new combined arms, the Lee crest and motto were retained.

In heraldic terms, the Lee arms are as follows:

CREST: On a staff raguly (tree branch lopped), a squirrel sejant (sitting) cracking a nut or (gold), from the dexter end of the staff an oak branch vert (green), fructed (fructed), all proper (natural).

SHIELD: In first and fourth quadrants, the original Lee arms: gules (a red field), a fess (a band) chequy (checked) or (gold) and azure (blue), between billets (rectangles) argent (silver), four in chief (at the top), and three, two, one billets in the base. In quadrants two and three are the Astley arms: azure (blue field), a cinquefoil (conventional five-leaf flower), ermine within a bordure (border) argent (silver), engrailed (wavy edge).

MOTTO: In some instances, Ne incautus futuri (imperative); In others, Non incautus futuri (declarative).

From the arms of Washington and of Lee, the arms on the banner were evolved, with the exception of the first quadrant of the shield, which quadrant is as follows:

Azure (blue field), an open book, on white pages the words, OMNIA AUTEM PROBATE, from the Latin Vulgate of the New Testament, I. Thess. 5, 21.

The open book and the blue field are symbolic of the blue-blood Scotch, who founded the College on an open Bible.

In quadrant two of the shield on the banner, are the Washington arms; while in quadrants three and four are the Lee arms.

On the banner, no crest was placed over the shield, nor was any motto placed beneath. Above the shield are the words WASHINGTON AND LEE, in gold letters, on a blue scroll, on a white background. Below the shield is the date 1749, the time of the founding of the Augusta Academy, from which the College developed. The banner is made of heavy white silk, with gold border and tassels.

Such was and is the sacred banner, borne forty-five years ago by loyal students, in honor of their immortal president. From the shield on the banner has come the coat of arms of the University.

The writer, when a child, went with his father and mother to see General R. E. Lee, at his first retreat after the war, at "Derwent," in Powhatan county, Va. There the boy received from the soldier a benediction, as a strong, gentle hand rested on a little head.

In early college days, the same boy stood by a simple grave, in the floor of the basement of the Lee Chapel. The Great Chieftain had not then been laid to final rest in the mausoleum. The only flowers about the grave were immortelles, from the hills he loved. Today, across the years, comes a gentle perfume from those immortelles.

In 1883, the same boy was an honored student marshal at the unveiling of the recumbent statue of Lee, in the College Chapel.

In 1890, his hand and heart again paid humble tribute to the Great General in Richmond. And now, after nearly three score years and ten, the head of a long-ago boy is warmed by

"The touch of a vanquished hand."

And in reverence, that boy lays a renewal of his devotion

"On the doubly sacred shield
Of Washington and Lee."

NOTE: The official coat of arms of Washington and Lee University, as used in the University catalogue and on all official publications, has been made available to alumni through the Lee Museum at Lee Chapel. The coat of arms varies slightly from the cut reproduced on the second page of the above article in that there are five cinquefoils. Cost of the arms, framed and done in colors, is $2.00 postpaid to alumni. Order from the Lee Museum, Lexington, Virginia, and please mention The Alumni Magazine.

An Architectural Monument

WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY'S colonnade and the flanking professors' residences are among the three outstanding national monuments of the early federal architectural period in America, Philip Small, nationally known architect, believes. He puts two other Virginia institutions in this select group—the College of William and Mary and the University of Virginia.

Mr. Small, who divides his time between Cleveland and California, visited Lexington several weeks ago to study the Washington and Lee campus and surrounding buildings. He is consulting architect for a critical review and approval of the plans of Carneal, Johnston and Wright, Richmond, Va., firm, for the new law school building at Washington and Lee.

Asked for an opinion on the correctness of the traditional design of Washington and Lee's colonnade, Mr. Small said that "correctness and the precise following of classic formulae are not matters of importance because there are in the architectural richness of the original buildings at Washington and Lee both vitality and charm that put them above a critical appraisal of their accurately following classic forms and details."

He approved in general the present plans for the new law school home that will replace Tucker Hall, but took back to Cleveland with him complete sketches of the campus as it will appear with the new structure at the northern end of Washington college.

Mr. Small, a graduate of Boston Tech and an instructor in the Fine Arts School at Bellevue, France, after the war, was consulting architect for the Terminal Tower in Cleveland. He directed the general remodeling of the Greenbriar hotel at White Sulphur Springs; designed the Cleveland Playhouse; and is consulting architect in charge of plans for the John Carroll university in Cleveland.

VLADIMIR ROMM, first correspondent from the U. S. S. R. to be stationed in Washington, spoke to Washington and Lee journalism students April 5. His topic was "The Press in the U. S. S. R." Izvestia, leading newspaper of Moscow, assigned Romm to cover the American capital shortly after Ambassador Troyanovsky took up his official duties in this country.

Before coming to the United States last year Romm was correspondent for Tass news agency in Geneva and Paris, and prior to that time had been with the same agency in Tokio. The appearance of the Russian newspaperman at Washington and Lee was sponsored jointly by the department of journalism and Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity.

Three Hundred Alumni As Teachers

By R. N. LATTURE

OF WASHINGTON AND LEE'S eight thousand living alumni three hundred are engaged in teaching. It is a matter of interest and pride to realize that so many of our men are exemplifying the spirit and traditions of their alma mater in so many class-rooms and on such widely scattered campuses. These fellow alumni play a prominent part in stimulating the minds and directing the ambitions of thousands of young men and women from grammar schools to graduate schools. In molding the character and shaping the ideals of youth Washington and Lee men have conspicuous opportunity and responsibility.

Approximately one-half of our pedagogical alumni are engaged in college teaching at home and abroad. Their names are listed in this article and in a later issue of The Alumni Magazine another list will appear containing the names of teachers which are not included here. Information as to additions and corrections are welcome.

The list given below contains the names of 145 alumni. Thirty-eight of these men are teaching in Virginia colleges, twenty-two of them being at Washington and Lee. Eight of our alumni are teaching in the colleges of Texas, and eight in the state of Illinois. Five of those in Illinois are on the faculty of the University at Urbana. Six names on the list are connected with colleges in each of the states of Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Of the total number of our professorial alumni twenty-one are teaching in the field of English, nineteen in foreign languages, sixteen in history, twelve in chemistry, eleven in medicine, eight in law, seven in education, and six in mathematics, political science, and engineering. Several other subjects have claimed the interest of smaller numbers of alumni.

The class of 1924 should be awarded the badge of distinction for its rich contribution to the ranks of the teaching profession. Ten men who were awarded degrees at Washington and Lee in June, 1924, are now engaged in college teaching. J. P. Brawner is at Illinois; W. A. Flick at Washington and Lee; L. H. Harris at Omaha; E. H. Howard at Washington and Lee; J. V. Logan at Princeton; S. A. McCorkle at Texas; M. L. Peacock at V. P. I.; W. L. Simmons at Ohio Wesleyan; J. N. Thomas at Hollins; and J. H. Williams at Washington and Lee.

William Spencer Currell

The place of honor in this list is accorded to that inspiring teacher and cultured gentleman, William Spencer Currell of the class of 1878. To him goes the distinction and honor of having adorned the teaching profession longer than any other Washington and Lee alumnus now living. He was a student at Washington and Lee from 1875 to 1882, and a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He has the further distinction of being the first to hold the Howard Houston Fellowship and of being the first editor of The Southern Collegian in magazine form. In 1879 he received the M. A. degree and in 1882 he was awarded the Ph. D.

Dr. Currell was professor of English at Hampden-Sidney College for four years and occupied the chair of English at Davidson from 1886 to 1895. He was then recalled to the faculty of Washington and Lee, where he was made professor of English and modern languages in 1900.

Somewhere in the course of his academic peripatations he acquired the onomatopoeic nickname of "Jingles." We do not know the special occasion which called forth this nickname but all men who have been fortunate enough to sit in his classes will attest to the appropriateness of the appellation.

In 1914, after nineteen years of service on the faculty of his alma mater, Dr. Currell accepted the presidency of the University of South Carolina, his native state. In 1922 he retired from the presidency to become dean of the graduate school. Since 1929 he has devoted himself entirely to his first and truest love, the teaching of English language and literature.

Following are Washington and Lee alumni now teaching in colleges. The date after each name denotes the class to which they belong:

Adams, Nicholas B., 1915, Chapel Hill, N. C., Spanish, University of North Carolina; Anderson, Douglas S., 1890, New Orleans, La., Professor and Dean of Engineering, Tulane University.

Ballagh, James C., 1884, Philadelphia, Pa., History, University of Pennsylvania; Bane, James E., 1929, Richland, Mich., Education, Teachers' College; Barrett, LeRoy C., 1897, Hartford, Conn., Latin, Trinity College; Bear, James E., 1915, Richmond, Va., Bible, Union Theological Seminary; Bear, Robert M., 1922, Hanover, N. H., Education, Dartmouth College; Bennett, Albert L., 1916, Charlottesville, Va., Education, University of Virginia; Blain, Hugh Mercer, 1894, New Orleans, La., Journalism, Loyola University; Blain, Stanton F., 1933, Lexington, Va., Spanish, Virginia Military Institute; Bowyer, John W., 1921, Dallas, Texas, English, Southern Methodist University; Brawner, J. Paul, 1924, Urbana, Ill., English, University of Illinois; Breedin, John K., 1904, Lima, Peru, Director of Education, Peru; Bullitt, James B., 1894, Chapel Hill, N. C., Medicine, University of North Carolina; Burkholder, Aldine C., 1903, San Marcos, Texas, Teachers' College.

Campbell, Leslie L., 1887, Boston, Mass., Physics, Simmons College; Canter, Howard V., 1896, Urbana, Ill., Classics, University of Illinois; Carter, Richard P., 1929, Lexington, Va., Journalism, Washington and Lee University; Coe, Samuel Gwynn, 1916, Lakeland, Fla.,

History, Southern College; Converse, Paul D., 1913, Urbana, Ill., Economics, University of Illinois; Cooper, Robert F., 1902, Holly Springs, Miss., President, Mississippi Synodical College; Cooper, W. Raymond, 1906, Memphis, Tenn., History, Southwestern University; Cox, William Junkin, 1918, New Haven, Conn., Engineering, Yale University; Crenshaw, Olinger, 1925, Lexington, Va., History, Washington and Lee University; Crow, Charles L., 1888, Gainesville, Fla., Modern Languages, University of Florida; Currell, William Spencer, 1878, Columbia, S. C., English, University of South Carolina.

Daniel, John L., 1910, Atlanta, Ga., Chemistry, Georgia School of Technology; Davidson, Herman P., 1913, Chicago, Ill., Medicine, University of Chicago; Desha, Lucius Junius, 1905, Lexington, Va., Chemistry, Washington and Lee University; Dickey, Robert William, 1910, Lexington, Va., Physics, Washington and Lee University; Dillard, James H., 1877, Charlottesville, Va., President of Slater & Jeans Foundations, sometimes Professor of Latin, Tulane University; Dunnington, Waldo G., 1928, Urbana, Ill., German, University of Illinois.

Farrar, Thomas J., 1895, Lexington, Va., German, Washington and Lee University; Flagg, William Junkin., 1913, Baltimore, Md., English, Polytechnic Institution; Flick, Walter A., 1924, Lexington, Va., Psychology, Washington and Lee University; Flournoy, Fitzgerald, 1921, Lexington, Va., English, Washington and Lee University; Flournoy, Frank R., 1905, Allendale-on-Hudson, N. Y., St. Stephens College; Forbus, Wiley D., 1916, Durham, N. C., Medicine, Duke University; Fry, Selvia Oscar, 1918, New York City, Medicine, New York Post-Graduate Medical School.

Gammon, Samuel R., 1911, College Station, Texas, History, Texas A. & M.; Garnand, Harry J., 1910, Emory, Va., Romance Languages, Emory and Henry College; George, John J., Jr., 1919, New Brunswick, N. J., History, Rutgers University; Ghiselin, Charles J., 1912, Taichow, Kiangsu, Mission School; Gilliam, Frank J., 1917, Lexington, Va., English, Washington and Lee University; Gladden, Thomas L., 1885, Annapolis, Md., St. Johns College; Gorrell, Joseph H., 1888, Wake Forrest, N. C., Modern Languages, Wake Forest College; Graham, John A., 1914, Lexington, Va., Modern Languages, Washington and Lee University; Graybill, Henry B., 1902, Lewisburg, W. Va., Education, Greenbriar College; Green, Edwin L., 1892, Columbia, S. C., Ancient Languages, University of South Carolina; Grimes, A. G. M., 1906, Winchester, Ohio, Romance Languages, College Extension; Groseclose, Henry C., 1912, Blacksburg, Va., Agriculture, Virginia Polytechnic Institute; Guthrie, David Vance, 1903, Baton Rouge, La., Physics, Louisiana State University.

Hall, Samuel R., 1927, Syracuse, N. Y., Zoology, Syracuse University; Hamilton, Thomas R., 1917, College Station, Texas, Accounting, A. & M. College of Texas; Harris, Lancelot M., 1888, Charleston, S. C., English, College of Charleston; Harris, Lyman H., 1924, Omaha, Neb., History, University of Omaha; Harrel, Hansen C., 1927, Columbia, Mo., Classical Languages, University of Missouri; Hart, Freeman H., 1912, Hampden-Sydney, Va., History, Hampden-Sydney College; Hartzo, Solly A., 1921, Lake Forest, Ill., Political Science, Lake Forest College; Herndon, John G., Jr., 1911, Haverford, Pa., Political Science, Haverford College; Herold, Amos Lee, 1909, Commerce, Texas, English, Teachers' College; Hesseltine, William Best, 1922, Madison, Wis., History, University of Wisconsin; Hinton, William M., 1929, Lexington, Va., Psychology, Washington and Lee University; Hobson, Robert P., 1914, Louisville, Ky., Jefferson Law School; Houston, Hale M., 1898, Lexington, Va., Engineering, Washington and Lee University; Howard, Edwin H., 1924, Lexington, Va., Accounting, Washington and Lee University; Howe, James L., Jr., 1918, Shanghai, China, Chemistry, Great China University; Hurt, Frank B., 1923, Westminster, Md., Economics, Western Maryland College.

Bill Ackerly

Law and Order Chairman

BILL ACKERLY, 1912, recently appointed chairman of the first Law and Order Committee of the American Legion, department of Virginia, is the author and originator of the department's two-point law and order program. He summarizes these points as follows:

(1) To encourage and promote, in the minds of all citizens, a greater respect for and obedience to law and constituted authority, and a fuller sense of individual responsibility for the maintenance of law and order, and the efficient, fair and impartial administration of justice.

(2) To have Legion posts and legionnaires organized, prepared and ready to actively aid and assist the duly constituted law enforcement authorities in emergencies and situations of grave public danger, especially those involving crimes of violence, when called upon so to do by such authorities.

"I confidently believe," Ackerly says, "this program is filled with much good for the community, state and nation. It does not contemplate the establishment of any vigilante organization, nor any superseding of the duly constituted law enforcement authorities, nor any usurpation of the duties and powers of those authorities, but simply rendering to those authorities intelligent moral support at all times and like practical aid and assistance, when needed and asked for, in emergencies and situations of grave danger to the peace and good order of society. I sincerely hope the idea will receive the whole-hearted endorsement and support of all good citizens and will ultimately be adopted by every department of the American Legion in the United States."

Bill is practicing law at Lexington, and has been commonwealth's attorney for Rockbridge county since 1928.

"President Pro Tem"

TAYLOR H. STUKES, who has been serving continuously in the South Carolina state senate, has been elected president pro tem of the body, according to information received in the alumni office. After completing his undergraduate work at Washington and Lee in 1915, he went to George Washington University for his LL. B. degree, and since that time has been conspicuous as an attorney. He is 41 years old, and was a first lieutenant in the air service during the war.

Win in Charleston Election

WHEN IT COMES to politics, Washington and Lee alumni in Virginia have no monopoly, although the capitol down at Richmond is literally filled with former students of the University.

At Charleston, W. Va., voters went to the polls on April 16 and named two Washington and Lee men to high offices, one as mayor of the city.

Judge D. Boone Dawson, running as an Independent Republican, was swept into office as mayor of Charleston with a majority of 1,886 votes. He received his LL. B. degree at Washington and Lee in 1921.

At the same time, Cyrus W. Hall, LL. B. 1928, was elected police judge by a substantial majority.

Come Back to Finals—June 5, 6 and 7!

NOTHING that could be written would substitute for the phrase that forms the title to this article.

But there are a few things you might know about Finals of 1935 that probably will awaken that old desire to visit the alma mater and see for yourself how green the old campus looks, how beautiful the trees are about Lee Chapel, how Doremus gymnasium will gleam when decorated for the dances . . .

Here, for instance, are a few things you can look forward to in addition to the sheer pleasure of coming back to Washington and Lee:

With Hal Kemp signed for the first two nights, and Glen Gray playing for the last night, the 1935 edition of Finals promises to offer the best dance set that Washington and Lee has had in years. Added to this, there will be a national broadcast the first night, Wednesday evening, June 5, from Doremus gymnasium when Hal Kemp will play over a regular commercial program. Washington and Lee will go on the air over the Columbia network from 8 to 8:30 under this plan. At the present time, some 400 students have subscribed to the dance set, and Lewis Martin, president of Finals, expects more to sign up by June.

The dances will begin with the Inter-Fraternity-Sigma Ball on Wednesday night, June 5; the Pi Alpha Nu-White Friar dansant will be held Thursday afternoon, and the Senior-Alumni Ball will take place Thursday night.

Final Ball, featuring Glen Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra, will be held Friday night and will last until 6 o'clock Saturday morning.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by the Reverend William C. Hill, of the East Presbyterian church of Richmond, on Sunday, June 2, in Lee Chapel. Dr. Robert M. Lester, secretary of the Carnegie Corporation, will speak at commencement on Friday morning, June 7, and William Roger Sphar, of Winchester, Kentucky, will make the valedictory address.

The president's reception to graduates, trustees, visiting alumni, and parents will be held Thursday night at 9 o'clock in the president's home.

The alumni luncheon will take place at one o'clock Friday in the University dining hall, and there will be a meeting of the Alumni Association in Lee chapel at 2 o'clock the same day. The annual crew boat races will be held Friday afternoon at 4 when the local sailors will brave the waves of North River.

The officers and their gals who will lead the Final ball include: Lewis Martin, president, with Miss Doris Martin; George J. McGeory, vice-president, with Miss Thelma Walsh; John M. Dean, vice-president, with Miss Roberta Cover; James E. Brown, publicity director of Finals, with Miss Peggy Ann MacIndoe; Joseph B. Magee, secretary, with Miss Sue Johnson; William L. Wilson, business manager, with Miss Betty Miller.

With this change in dates—a three-day program instead of the inconvenient old five-day program—you can't afford to miss Finals of 1935. The change has been made largely to eliminate the long, unnecessarily dull week-end, and so make it possible for alumni to attend with a minimum of time spent away from business.

Remember again the dates—June 5, 6, and 7. Final ball Friday evening, June 7, will of course last all night as in the past.

Dick Dunaj in Action

Remember Chamberlin, 1931?

The Odyssey of Sports, 1934-1935

By RICHARD POWELL CARTER

LET'S TAKE a look back as best we can at what has happened in the realm of sports at Washington and Lee University since the first smack of toe against pigskin last fall:

Tex Tilson's football team, just by way of refreshing your memory, won both the Southern conference and Virginia championships.

Dick Dunaj, captain of cross country, last fall set a new Virginia record of twenty-eight minutes, forty-six seconds over the five and a tenth mile course here.

Forrest Fletcher, director of physical education, was re-elected president of the Southern conference at the Richmond meeting in December.

Cy Young's basketball team whizzed into the finals of the Southern conference tournament down at Raleigh, losing to the sharp shooting cagers from the University of North Carolina.

The Washington and Lee swimmers, under the tutelage of Cy Twombly, brought home the Southern conference title from one of the fastest meets in the history of the circuit, held at Duke University.

The wrestlers, after a spectacular season that included no defeats, lost the championship to Virginia Military Institute on a succession of tough breaks in the tournament in Doremus gymnasium.

Hugo Bonino, captain of the mat team, went to the finals in the national intercollegiate tourney at Lehigh.

And to top it all, the Washington and Lee athletic council took things in hand after a disastrous season for the Generals in the ring, and abolished boxing as an intercollegiate sport at the University.

Before taking a look at spring sports, just beginning to come into their own as the Alumni Magazine goes to press, let's reprint what the athletic council officially stated following their abolition of boxing:

"While we feel that boxing classes, where a boy is taught the principles of self defense, are desirable, we believe that intercollegiate boxing is an athletic activity in which one of the chief objectives is, in effect, to incapacitate one's opponent. We consider this inconsisent with the aims of an educational institution. Therefore the athletic council has voted to abolish intercollegiate boxing at Washington and Lee University."

That ends the story of boxing for the Blue and White, but here are a few facts you may have forgotten:

Boxing as an intercollegiate sport was inaugurated at Washington and Lee in 1919, according to available records. Several years ago it was boosted into the major sport class at the University. Washington and Lee teams have met with fair success in the past few years, and this season did not win a single meet, although two were lost by one-point margins.

That, in brief, is what happened in the realm of sports at Washington and Lee since the football team hied itself away to Nimrod Hall last fall.

Now for something about spring sports:

Because of the deadline on magazine copy (and deadlines are deadlines no matter what people say) it is almost impossible to present any coherent picture of what is happening to Dick Smith's baseball team; to Ollinger Crenshaw's tennis team; to Forrest Fletcher's track men; or to Cy Twombly's Southern conference championship golfers.

As this is written, the Generals have won six, lost two and tied one ball game. That includes victories over Maryland, 9-3, and a double header triumph over Virginia Tech. Dartmouth brought a strong squad down from the north and handed the Blue and White a 4-0 drubbing, and William and Mary's Indians eked out a 2-1 victory in the second game of the season for the diamond crew.

The weather failed to keep its tryst with Washington and Lee spring sports teams, with the result that cold winds sweeping down off old House Mountain made playing about on Wilson field well-nigh impossible. But the teams have managed to overcome that, and things point to a better than fair spring.

And Here Is a Swimming Record

SWIMMING is not such a spectacular sport, and for that reason one of the most unusual athletic records in the south has been overlooked. It's this way:

Washington and Lee tankmen, who brought back the Southern conference championship from Durham this year, have lost only two dual meets in the past six years. "Cy" Twombly, coach of the Generals, dug up the statistics here as he discussed the team's success in the conference meet at Duke university. In those six years Washington and Lee swimmers have participated in an average of five meets each season.

Leading the swimmers at Washington and Lee is Captain Duncan McDavid of Pensacola, Florida, who has not lost a dual meet race in four years at Washington and Lee, and who now holds the Southern conference records in the 50 and 220-yard events. This year he broke his own mark in the 220, swimming the distance in 2:29.1. His time in the 50-yard dash is 25.1.

The only race he has lost since coming here was the 440 in the Southern conference meet three years ago. He lost only by a touch after leading all the way.

The experts call McDavid one of the greatest swimmers in the South, but he also is captain of Washington and Lee's golf team, holders of the conference title.

The Generals have been foremost contenders in Southern conference meets since 1921, but this year is the first time they have been able to amass enough points for the championship. Washington and Lee men placed in every event in this season's conference tournament.

The Generals' relay team has come out ahead in every conference tournament except the one last year, Coach Twombly said. The two times the team as a whole has lost in dual competition included a defeat by Duke in 1933, and one by Virginia in 1934.

Charlie Brasher of Rutherford, N. J., set a new conference mark in the 100-yard dash at Duke, going the distance in 56.7. Brasher, a sophomore, returns next year.

Six veterans, however, have competed for the Generals for the last time. They are Captain McDavid; George Glynn of New York City; J. M. Franklin of Verona, N. J.; Rod Harris, Guntersville, Ala.; Bob McCauley, Hagerstown; T. K. Williams, Glen Lyon, Pa.—R. P. C.

Local Alumni Association Notes

Pittsburgh

A MEETING of the Pittsburgh Alumni Association was held at Kaufmann's, Friday, March 1.

Those present were Maurice J. Arnd, Fred Fox, Dick Faulkner, William G. Gault, David D. Johnson, John Koedel, Charles T. Lile, Lee McGraw, Charles P. Robinson, Sam H. Showell, and J. C. Whetzel.

The luncheon meeting accounted for the somewhat meager attendance, as Pittsburgh responds more generously to an evening meeting. Matters pertaining to the subscription drive for the new law building were discussed and tentative plans were formulated to contact every alumnus in the Pittsburgh district.

Dick Faulkner was appointed "minister plenipotentiary" to Lexington to gather some information that might be helpful in the drive for a one hundred per cent alumni response in Pittsburgh. A similar meeting will be held in April.

Huntington

WASHINGTON AND LEE alumni of the tri-states region gathered at the Frederick hotel in Huntington, W. Va., on Washington's birthday and heard as a feature of their meeting an interesting address on the battle of Point Pleasant by Dr. E. W. MacCorkle, class of 1874.

Informal discussion followed regarding attendance of members of the association, and Dr. MacCorkle suggested that plans be made for a meeting some time later, at which an invitation would be extended to the United Daughters of the Confederacy to have them meet with the Association. The President appointed a committee to work out such an arrangement with a view to having the same held on the next birthday of Washington. On this committee the following were appointed: Philip Gibson, Joe Fitchett, William T. Lovins, Emmett MacCorkle and John Slagle.

President Mann discussed the question of new students and made reference especially to future as well as present students attending the University from Ashland. He explained some phases of the fraternity life of students attending the University under athletic scholarships, so to speak, and it was the sense of the meeting that students attending the University on athletic scholarships be influenced towards accepting bids from different fraternities rather than allowing them to all become members of the same fraternity. With a view to making some investigation of the proper method of procedure to prevent one fraternity from securing all students with athletic prowess, the president was authorized to appoint a committee to discuss this matter with the proper authorities. The president was made chairman of this committee.

The following were present:

Houston Laird, John McVay, T. Selden Jones, G. D. Mayor, Philip P. Gibson, George Keller, R. Lee Beuhring, J. Ben Lubin, J. W. Fitchett, all of Huntington, W. Va.

Dr. E. W. MacCorkle, E. W. MacCorkle, and A. Wendell Mann, all of Ashland, Ky.

Memphis

IT WAS Washington and Lee night in Memphis on February 23, when the alumni from Memphis and the Tri-States area gathered at the Hotel Peabody to honor the birthday of George Washington.

The event was planned for the day after the birthday of George Washington in order that those alumni outside of Memphis would be afforded the opportunity to join in the gala function which was held that night.

Festivities of the evening were started with a smoker in the Louis XVI room of the Hotel Peabody. After this general reunion of the alumni, in which many a yarn of "when I was a student at Washington and Lee" was swapped, the party gathered in an adjoining room for dinner. The school's colors, pennants of Washington and Lee and of fraternities were used in the cleverly decorated room. Flowers carrying out the colors in perfect harmony adorned the tables which were arranged in the form of a huge "W."

A. B. Knipmeyer, of the class of 1901, acted in the role of toastmaster. One of the most interesting parts of the banquet was the reading of a letter from our beloved Bishop James R. Winchester, of the class of 1874, by Mr. Knipmeyer, expressing his regrets to the secretary of the alumni chapter for being unable to attend the banquet due to a recent illness. It carried a message to the younger generation of Washington and Lee men which made them more fully realize the value of being an alumnus of the University. Several short but impressive addresses were delivered during the banquet by such prominent alumni as T. R. Boyle, of the class of 1876; Dr. Sam Raines, 1921; George Faison, 1915; John S. "Boots" Edmondson; Cooper Turner, 1927, and John K. Speed, president of the local alumni group.

Following the banquet the alumni were joined by their wives and friends for dancing in the Continental room of the Hotel Peabody. Throughout the evening the room was filled with strains of Washington and Lee tunes including the immortal "Swing," "Fight, Fight, Blue and White," "College Friendships" and others.

Those attending included:

President John K. Speed, T. R. Boyle, Dr. Sam Raines, Peter R. Friedel, secretary; H. J. Patterson of Osceola, Ark.; William "Bill" Robinson of St. Louis; F. C. "Crit" Currie; John M. Raines of Little Rock; A. B. Knipmeyer; Russ Pritchard; C. W. Rabb of Helena, Ark.; Vance Brooks; George Faison; George Harsh, Jr.; J. D. Connell, of Banks, Miss.; Newbern of Marianna, Ark.; James Malone McKnight; J. Sturget Shields, Forrest City, Ark.; Cooper Turner; Ed Felsenthal; J. S. "Boots" Edmondson; J. Milledge Nail; T. Seehorn; Monroe Frank; James Durham.

Atlanta

ATLANTA alumni met for an informal dinner at the Atlanta Athletic Club, Friday evening, April 5.

The following alumni were present: Dr. M. Ashby Jones, J. Sam Slicer, Alex M. Hitz, Francis Fuller, T. Hal Clark, Edmond Magers, Bill Stone, Dr. K. C. Rice, George C. Moseley, Ralph Hugh Morrissey, Willis N. Everett, Jr., Thomas M. Stubbs, and E. S. Humphreys, all of Atlanta, Ga.; and John H. Beury, of Carrolton, Ga.

Dr. Ashby Jones made the address of welcome to Dr. Gaines, expressing the confidence and love of the alumni for Dr. Gaines as a worthy successor of the illustrious presidents of Washington and Lee.

Dr. Gaines talked informally, and as he expressed it, giving the group the "gossip and news of Washington and Lee," as well as telling of interesting features regarding the history and endowment.

After Dr. Gaines' address, the meeting continued with a general round table discussion and reminiscences in which practically every alumnus participated.

At the close of the meeting, Ewing S. Humphreys was elected temporary president and Willis Everett temporary secretary, to make plans for an annual alumni dinner, and in fact a more active organization of the Atlanta alumni.

Cincinnati

ON APRIL 2, the Cincinnati Alumni association met for a luncheon at the Metropole hotel. Many phases of alumni activity were thoroughly discussed, including the subscription campaign for the erection of the new law school. The association voted its wholehearted support to the movement.

The group also decided to offer a joint gathering with the University of Virginia alumni to take place at a designated camp somewhere along the river.

The following members were present: Roger Bear, 1914; Walter McDonald, 1910; Walton H. Bachrach, 1926; Clyde Hoge, 1908; Judge Horace J. McFarlan, 1893; Henry N. Moses, 1926; Monte Goeble, 1891; Dr. Charles Tabb Pearce, 1889; Harold J. Effron, 1926; John J. Phillips, 1929; Walter C. Preston, 1915; John Hatfield, 1927; and Merrill I. Budnich, class of 1926.

It was unanimously agreed to hold a meeting at the Metropole on the first Tuesday of each month.

Washington

WASHINGTON AND LEE alumni in the city of Washington have begun holding monthly luncheons, and judging from attendance at the first two, the plan seems to be meeting with deserved success.

The luncheons are held at the University Club, and alumni who visit the nation's capital are asked to contact either Ed Campbell or Woodson Houghton at the Southern Building so they can attend the affairs. No specific dates have been determined upon, but twenty men were present at the first affair in March, about an equal number in April, and plans are going forward for a "bigger and better" luncheon in May.

Richmond

WASHINGTON AND LEE alumni of Richmond gathered at the Westmoreland club the evening of April 19 for a dinner meeting and heard talks by both Cy Young and Dr. Gaines at what was generally considered "one of the best meetings in some time." Lieutenant Governor Price presided.

The Washington and Lee-Duke game to be played in Richmond October 5 this year was discussed at length, and a committee was appointed to work with Dick Smith in arranging one of those traditional "big days," only this time plans will be made for one of the most colorful football events ever staged in the capital of the Old Dominion.

Those named on the committee were Lewis Powell,

Ran Tucker, George Haw, Clyde Allen and Ed Bailey.

Following is a list of those who attended the dinner :

Don P. Boyer, 1908; A. O. Houser, 1907; George E. Haw, 1904; Clyde Allen, 1925; Henry MacKenzie, 1932; C. J. Biddle, 1932; Dewey Dain, 1917; Ed T. Bailey, 1919; T. T. Moore, 1926; C. L. Riley, 1924-29; F. W. Harrelson, 1924; H. S. Liebert, 1925; George T. Riggs, 1923; James N. Williams, 1926; Richard Towckes, 1915; M. Cary Johnston, 1910; A. Mason Harris, 1912; L. T. Stoneburner, 1907; Charles H. Phillips, 1923; Carleton E. Jewett, 1921; Eugene W. Ford, student, Thomas Jefferson high; E. J. Bostwick, 1930; Ben McClure, student, Thomas Jefferson high; Otto Stumpf, 1918; LeRoy Hodges, 1910; J. R. Tucker, 1900; M. L. Anderson, 1934; O'Donnell Lee, student, Thomas Jefferson high; D. Minge Jackson, 1933; Reno R. Porter, 1931; William G. Tarrant, Jr., 1930; Walter H. Shirley, 1914; G. M. Lapsley, 1931; Roy D. Thompson, 1904; W. M. Pope, 1927; C. H. Hamilton, 1926; William R. Howell, 1932; Stuart Sanders, II, 1931; Harry Burn, 1931; L. M. Curtis, 1933; Matt Wiltshire, 1923; R. W. Jordan, Jr., 1928; W. K. Timberlake, 1926; Robert Francis Nelson, 1932; L. L. Shirey, 1916; J. D. Faison, 1917; W. L. Carson, 1915; Samuel A. Anderson, 1919; Richardson L. Simpson, 1895; Bryan Conrad, 1897; C. H. Morrisett, 1914; J. Morrison Hutcheson, 1902; James H. Price, 1909; B. M. Rosebro, 1897; Lewis F. Powell, Jr., 1929.

New York

IN THE MOST successful organization meeting of recent years the New York alumni met for their tenth annual dinner at the Hotel Lexington on Friday evening, March 8. Sixty members were present to welcome Dr. Gaines on his return from his European vacation.

In addition to our many distinguished alumni and Dr. Gaines who, while not an alumnus, is as true a son of Washington and Lee as any of us, we had as our guests J. M. Weems, perennial president of the local V. M. I. alumni; Charles A. Sweet and H. W. Roberts, both fathers of honor students now attending Washington and Lee.

The main topic of discussion was the new law school, and Dr. Gaines stirred the assembled alumni to loud and sincere cheers when he closed his informal talk by saying, "Tucker Hall is no more, but, with the help of our ever loyal alumni, there will arise from its ashes a newer and finer structure that will not only fill our cultural need but will also do justice to the natural beauty of our campus."

John W. Davis, 1892, former ambassador to Great Britain and Democratic presidential candidate in 1924, then spoke informally about the plans for the New Tucker Hall and the financial arrangements that would be necessary for the successful completion of the project.

Edward W. Lee, 1913, secretary and treasurer of our local alumni group since its inception, then arose to astound the alumni with the fact that depression or no depression the number of active alumni in New York had risen steadily every year since we were organized. "We started in 1925 with 56 members and at this moment we have 111 paid-up members," he said. Ed concluded with the good news that the books as usual showed a profit for the year.

A further pleasant shock was in store when the newly appointed dinner committee composed of Nelson W. Burris 1926, chairman, Paul L. Bock 1924, and Stuard A. Wurzburger 1928 announced that it too had made money and would turn over the surplus for the building of the new law school.

The annual election of officers was then held and Clarence L. Sager 1914, our retiring president and also the evening's jovial toastmaster, then turned the meeting over to Hugh R. Hawthorne 1910, our new president, who introduced the other new officers for 1935:

Vice-president, Emmet W. Poindexter, 1920; secretary-treasurer, Edward W. Lee, 1913; members of the Council for three years, J. T. Lykes, Nelson W. Burris, 1926, Clarence L. Sager, 1914.

A cordial invitation is extended to any alumnus who might be in New York to attend our monthly get-together luncheons. We'd be delighted to have you drop in.

The date, first Wednesday of every month; the place, Planters restaurant; the time, 12:30.

Those present at the annual dinner at the Hotel Lexington, March 8, 1935:

James A. Castner, 1929; Haven Walton, 1932; J. F. Broome, 1932; Nelson W. Burris, 1926; Stuard A. Wurzburger, 1928; Paul L. Bock, 1924; Benjamin A. Judd, 1893; Bernard Yoëpp, 1929; Robert O. Bentley, Jr., 1926; Allan McDowell, 1912; Thornton W. Allen, 1913; W. E. Johnston, 1920; John Drye, Jr., 1920; James A. Lee, 1917; W. R. Burton, 1917; H. C. Robert, 1933; J. H. Bailey, 1932; M. B. Rogers, 1915; John Hoffman, 1933; Philip J. Seraphine, Jr., 1934; William J. Newland, 1932; Neil C. Pascoe, 1934; Frank Brady, 1932; Hugh R. Hawthorne, 1910; Walter Wilcox, 1929; Joe C. Broadus, 1930; John P. East, 1888; Edward W. Lee, 1913; Lawrence J. Roose, 1932; Wil-

ference title, are well on the way to repeating if they continue on their so-far triumphant march. In the first match of the season, played over the hilly Tri-Brook course at Lexington, Twombly's charges defeated the University of Florida linksmen and walked off with a 12-6 victory. Then the Generals walloped the University of Virginia on the same course, 13½ to 4½; and entertained Hampden-Sydney by blanking them, 18-0.

The golf team this spring is composed of a quartet of veterans. They are Jimmie Watts of Lynchburg, Va.; Bill Alexander of Washington, D. C.; Charlie Cross of Portsmouth, Va.; and Captain Duncan McDavid.

The Washington and Lee track team went to V. P. I. April 13 for the first meet, made a clean sweep of the broad jump, and came back victors by 67-52.

The Virginia "Big Four" track meet will be held on Wilson field May 11 this year, after which the cinder path artists will go down to Durham for the Southern conference meet on May 18.

The tennis team, kept off the courts until late in April by consistent rains, took courage and went to Lynchburg for the initial meet April 13 without a single day of outdoor practice, and lost 7 to 0.

So, briefly, the sporting odyssey of 1934-1935 ends for the Alumni Magazine. All in all, it has been a great year. The wrestlers and the basketball team lost their conference titles, but as this is penned (I should say typed) the Generals still hold three Southern conference championships, and it looks as though they will cling to them.

And if you don't think it's a record of some sort for one school to hold three places of absolute supremacy in the Southern conference, just take the trouble to look over all available records.

That's what I've been doing for nine months.

Now I need a rest. See you next fall.

Class Notes

1879

HUNTER McDONALD, WALTER FORRESTER, WILL McCLUER, and WILLIAM McELWEE, all of the class of 1879, have been wintering in Florida. They attended some of the big league baseball games together at St. Petersburg, and had a great time of it, as they are all baseball fans.

1881

JULE W. PARKS of Loch Lomond, La., paid his first visit to Lexington last summer, stopping at the Old Blue hotel and occupying the same room he lived in while a student here. His son, Jule, Jr., will finish high school this year, then attend a junior college, then Washington and Lee. Mr. Parks is a planter living on the family estate within three miles of his birthplace. He expects to live in Lexington while his son is a student.

1890

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE W. ST. CLAIR and Dr. and Mrs. Gaines returned March 10 from a six-week Mediterranean cruise.

1891

FRANK A. NELSON is manager of the Chattanooga Clearing House, with offices at 417 Hamilton National Bank building.

JOHN THOMAS BARNES is located in Richmond, Va., in the office of the collector of internal revenue.

CLIFFORD LANIER is an attorney-at-law, 405 Adams street, Montgomery, Ala.

1892

LYNE STARLING SMITH, Erie, Pa., captain of the unbeaten baseball team of 1892, was a visitor to the campus the week-end of April 12-13. Mr. Smith while here recalled his days at Washington and Lee and expressed great interest in the physical developments since his time.

1893

ROBERT LEE PECK, Springfield, Tenn., was a visitor in Lexington the week-end of April 12-13.

DR. ANDREW H. WOODS is director of the Psychopathic Hospital, the State University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa.

1894

EDMUND PENDLETON COLES, immediately after leaving college went with the General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y.; on foreign work for them in South America from 1895 to 1900; engineer, Philadelphia office, 1900 to 1908; manager Charlotte, N. C., office since 1908.

JAMES N. VEECH, 1250 Everett Ave., Louisville, Ky., is a farmer, breeder of trotting and light harness horses and financier. He has a son and daughter, John Alexander Veech, instructor at Washington and Lee, and Agnes Ross Veech, counsellor, high schools, Louisville. Miss Veech is an A. B. of Vassar and a Ph. D. of Columbia. Mr. Veech is class agent for 1894. He was a visitor to Lexington the week-end of April 12-13.

The REV. JOHN J. FIX, Box 404, Bristol, Tenn., spent three years in Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., then held pastorates in West Virginia, near Winchester. He also taught in Fairfax College, Richmond, Roanoke, and Wytheville; has been director of religious education in Synod of Appalachia for nearly fifteen years.

1895

JOHN P. WALKER lives at 907 N. 17th St., Boise, Idaho. He writes: "Chief criticism of your magazine is that alumni notes in the last two issues omit the class of 1895. Surely some of them have died if nothing better can be said. Personally I have followed the topographic branch of the U. S. G. S. Some railroad location and construction and public land surveys under U. S. G. L. O. in western states, Indian Territory and ten years in Alaska. Am now district cadastral engineer U. S. G. L. O., for Idaho and Washington. Have a boy graduating in June from the University of Idaho with B. S. (Chem. Engr.), with top grades in engineering school and looking for a job other than E. R. A. Come on you business big shots and give a kid a break. At sixty I find nothing more interesting than a word from or about any of the 1895 boys, their joys and sorrows."

SAM PRICE is a member of the firm of Price & McWhorter, Attorneys and Counsellors at Law, Lewisburg, W. Va.

A. B. WINFREE is a lawyer in the firm of Teal, Winfree, McCulloch & Shuler, Spalding Building, Portland, Oregon.

1896

A sale has been made of "Brushwood," the old Weiss place on Brushy Hill, to C. Cabell Tutwiler of Philadelphia, who plans to return to Lexington to make his home. Mr. Tutwiler was a former Lexington resident and has, since his graduation from Washington and Lee, made his home in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Tutwiler formerly was Miss Rebecca Glasgow, a sister of the novelist, Ellen Glasgow.

1897

AVERY H. REED is a consulting mining engineer and geologist and lives in Marion, Ky.

ALEX C. BIRCH, Montgomery, Ala., is in the general practice of law with Weatherly, Birch, McEwan and Hickman, of Birmingham, Ala.

HARRY BERTRAM LEWIS, 208 Winthrop Road, Columbus, Ohio, practiced law after leaving school until 1900, when he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church. Has held many pastorates. In his 34 years in the ministry he has received into membership in all the churches he has served 3,415 persons, an average of a little more than 100 a year.

1898

W. ROSS McCAIN, president, Aetna Fire Insurance Co., 670 Main St., Hartford, Conn., after leaving Washington and Lee went to the University of Arkansas, graduating in 1898, taking A. B. and A. M. degrees in one year. He spent one year at the University of Bonn, Germany, and one year at Sorbonne, Paris, France. He has risen rapidly in the insurance business and was elected president of all Aetna Insurance Companies in September, 1933.

1899

SILAS B. MASON is president of the Mason and Hanger Company, general contractors, of New York City. He is living at Mason City, Washington. The Mason and Hanger Company, with its present allied companies, is perhaps one of the largest firms of its kind in the United States. At present the firm of Walsh-Atkinson-Mason-Kier Company is building the Coulee Dam, which is one of the government's largest projects. They are now moving 50,000 yards of material a day, he writes.

EWING SLOAN, Jackson, Miss., is recovering from a serious operation and has returned to his office as examining engineer for P. W. A. in the state of Mississippi.

JUDGE SCOTT M. LOFTIN spoke at the University assembly on March 16. He recently was elected president of the American Bar Association, and was initiated into Phi Beta Kappa here on his visit.
