*O*_N January 20, 1942,

JAMES HUBERT PRICE, class of 1909, governor of Virginia since 1938, retires from his office, as he must under the law.

So far as we are concerned, Jim Price has been more than a good governor of Virginia—he has been a good alumnus of Washington and Lee—one of the many men who are at the same time outstanding Americans and active alumni.

Because he is both, and because he is just now leaving a job that he has done magnificently well, we consider it a privilege to have his picture on our cover and to dedicate to him this issue of The Alumni Magazine.

The Student and the Crisis

(THE PRESIDENT'S PAGE)

THE Committee on Public Occasions, together with certain officers of administration, suggested an assembly to consider the relations of the University community, and particularly the students, to the present crisis. I was asked to attempt a brief talk. It was not easy to find the appropriate word; but I submitted for the consideration of the boys the following possible procedures.

* * *

1. To clarify and affirm their own convictions. This struggle is not a European squabble with colonial implications. It is a clash between two ideas of life. The clash is in every important domain of our being: in the economic world between our conception of the flow of goods from nation to nation and a conception of the ordering of goods for the peculiar benefit of one nation; in the international relationship, a clash between honored treaties with respect for the pledged word against mendacity and deception as acknowledged instruments of diplomacy; in the intellectual world, a clash between freedom of inquiry and controlled instruction or information; in the social world, a clash between kindness with tolerance and respect for personality against arrogance of race with cruelty and discipline of utter brutality; in the religious world, between the dignity of religion with an inherent liberty for it and the debasement of religion as an organ of political program.

* * *

2. To quicken and enlarge their sympathies. As the prophet of old spoke for Jerusalem, the race of man might cry today, "Is it nothing to you, O ye that pass by? Behold and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow!" From the heights of Norway where men shiver to the heights of Greece where they starve and the herded cities of China where they die, humanity today suffers as never before in civilized history. In our comforts and in our relative security, we must develop awareness of the grief of the world, response to its need, sacrifice for its relief.

3. To fortify their idealism. This generation of youth might well purpose, more resolutely than any group before, that out of this chaos of terror must be wrought some system of safety, out of anarchy some abiding order, out of the aggressions of force some protective policy for the defenseless. One profoundly convinced generation of Americans might do more than any other group in the world to overthrow, once and for all, the methodology of brute force as a factor in world affairs.

* * *

4. To simplify their own lives. Nobody would want the college campus, even in these dreadful days to become grim or drab. The gayety of youth is the tonic of the world. Yet our college students might well recognize the gravity of the circumstances that surround us, might develop a new economy in response to the great cost of our defense, might ponder the modes of serious help open to them as citizens, before any military call sounds in their ears. All of us must forego pleasures, accept responsibilities; and college youth constitute no exception to the general urgency.

* * *

5. To use advantageously every opportunity of the present. This attitude is always important but today is more so than ever. Whether for military effort, for some significant collateral responsibility, or for the mysterious years that lie beyond the end of this struggle, the credential of excellence has more value today than it has ever had before.

* * *

6. To cherish stubbornly their own long-time purpose for life. It would be pure tragedy, and immense tragedy, for the individual as well as for the nation, if the temporary should triumph over the permanent. It would be tragedy for the nation to lose the varied competence of a whole generation of youth that suddenly abandoned its plans for useful civic life in behalf of a military training useful only for an emergency. It would be a tragedy for the individual life of the boy who might fail to achieve his happiest and most influential plan of self-expression, might surrender his ambition and his dream. Whatever interruption may come, whatever its dimension of time or of momentary authority, the student should cling to his dream and resolve strongly to make it come true.

New Record for S. I. P. A.

THIS is by no means the first time this magazine has had occasion to comment on the annual activities of the Southern Interscholastic Press Association, but we bring it to your attention again in this issue because we think you would like to keep informed of the progress of an organization which is doing so much to make Washington and Lee, particularly its department of Journalism, better known and more highly regarded in the South.

Every year, late in the fall, Washington and Lee gathers boys and girls from all over this section—high school children who have conceived a special interest for newspaper work—young people whose interest may be cultivated and enlightened by contact with those who are at the top of the newspaper profession.

This year was a banner year: 485 delegates—145 more than the record attendance of last year—gathered for the 17th annual two-day convention, heard speeches, one by an alumnus, Maxwell Wilkinson, 1920, attended banquets, went to a dance, won prizes, and received criticisms of their work.

To illustrate how wide-spread the interest is in the Association: the new student-president comes from Amherst, Virginia, but he just beat out a boy from Baltimore; prizes in a Current Events contest went to Roanoke, Virginia, and Winston-Salem, North Carolina. A banquet was in charge of the Huntington, West Virginia, high school, while the retiring president came from Fort Knox, Kentucky. Altogether, ten states and the district of Columbia were represented.

The delegates heard a speaker who has been a war correspondent and has been in a Nazi prison; the whole college benefited from an address concerning American history as it can be seen in a study of mail-order catalogues. Delegates had conferences with advisers, saw Natural Bridge, looked at motion pictures about newspaper work, and met important men whose places in the newspaper business they may some day fill.

It is not hard to see that Washington and Lee is doing a very real service in this work and is following out the belief of Robert E. Lee, the Journalism School's founder, that an enlightened press in this country is of supreme importance. These children, perhaps the future hope of the Southern Press, must have gone home enlightened.

The credit goes to Professor O. W. Riegel, general chairman of the Convention and head of the Department of Journalism; Robert M. Hodges, his assistant; C. Harold Lauck, director of the Journalism Laboratory Press; and all the present students in Journalism who enthusiastically assisted in making this year's convention a success.

A. THOMAS (JUNIE) BISHOP, JR., 1941, a star of last year's football team, has accepted a sales position in the Floor Division of the Armstrong Cork Company and is in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, for an intensive nine months training program.

Altogether, 44 college graduates representing 41 educational institutions were offered employment by the company from among several thousand applicants who received interviews.

One Hundred Years of Geology

EDITOR'S NOTE: It occurred to the editors the other day that many alumni must want to know something about the academic as well as the extra-curricular side of Washington and Lee, and so we are embarking on a series of articles which we hope will describe in general the work being done by several of the academic departments. In our last issue we started with a page on the department of Chemistry; for this edition, still staying with the sciences, we propose a brief survey of the work of the geology department since the death, seven years ago, of Dr. Henry D. Campbell, 1885, who directed its destinies so many years.

ACCORDING to Professor Marcellus H. Stow, present chairman of the Washington and Lee department of geology, the present war is being fought over rocks. In old wars, the fighters used to throw rocks at each other; present armies use materials extracted from rocks with deadly purpose.

To be more specific, it is evident to anyone that underlying the whole vast struggle is the desire of nations to get geologic materials that they do not now possess—oil, and tin, and whatever aluminum is made of and a whole lot of minerals with peculiar names. Hence the position of geologist today is a strategic one; hence colleges must train geologists.

For some inexplicable reason, not all colleges offer courses in geology—small colleges in particular—and this puts Washington and Lee in rather a unique position, since we not only offer geology, but we have offered it for more than a century. The records go back to 1835; the department must be one of the oldest in the country.

Washington and Lee has rare advantages for geological study; we are situated in one of the finest districts in the world from a geological point of view—a region with variety enough to demonstrate almost every phase of geological study; and we have as good teachers of the subject as could be found anywhere.

These professors, Marcellus Henry Stow, a Ph.D. of Cornell, and Edward C. H. Lammers, ditto of Chicago, have a definite purpose for their department. Primarily they want to make the courses cultural for the benefit of the majority who will not go into geological work; but at the same time, all study is on a level which will prepare professional geologists.

Instruction is personally supervised even in the introductory course for freshmen which, though smaller than it was in Dr. Campbell's day, still numbers between ninety and one hundred. In the advanced work, everything possible is done by means of individual projects and seminars. For instance, for some time past, a group of undergraduates has had the opportunity of doing important geological research on its own, discussing the results of the professors, and finally presenting its findings in papers read before the Virginia Academy of Science. Three such papers will be published this year in the Academy's Journal. Students really learn something when they do things this way!

Washington and Lee's leading position in the Virginia Academy is shown in other ways than this. Dr. Stow is the president-elect of this important organization; furthermore, he is chairman of its James River Project Committee which is going to study the whole James River Basin in Virginia with the intention of finding ways to improve the region as a human habitat.

As a tribute to the excellence of our student - geologists, the Academy of Science awarded five of our young men a grant from its Research Fund of seventy-five dollars to be used in work they are carrying out. These boys: N. C. Steenland, Lane Sartor, Robert O. Wilbur, Henry S. Woods, and Robert W. Root, are going to make minutely detailed maps of a small area about five miles square with Lexington as center.

Dr. Lammers' class in a laboratory equipped by Nature

Geology students have other unique advantages at Washington and Lee. They go on more field trips than are undertaken in most other places—there are more important rocks to take field trips to! In the summers some go to Montana where they take part in the researches of the Yellowstone-Big Horn Research Association, a geological organization founded by a Washington and Lee alumnus, Dr. W. T. Thom, Jr., 1913, and still under strong Washington and Lee influence. The recently-organized course in military geology gives students a chance, still rare in American colleges, of learning that all-important subject. An unusual opportunity to study airplane maps shows, too, how up-to-date the work is and how successful is this department in its aim of making work in geology not only a method of giving historical perspective but also of integrating geology with life as it is today.

No complaint comes from the geology department about their hopelessly cramped quarters or their inadequate equipment. They are capable of doing splendid work even against somewhat discouraging obstacles. After all, their real laboratory is the great outdoors.

Young men who want to learn geology—and all modern young men ought to—should come to Washington and Lee. Nowhere in the United States—in the world perhaps—could they find a better place.

Prospects for Winter Sports

By MARSHALL JOHNSON, 1942

WITH football out of the way and the emphasis now on winter athletics, practices in three sports—basketball, wrestling and swimming—have revealed a fairly bright outlook for Washington and Lee for the next three months.

Sophomores are being counted on heavily in basketball and swimming, but the wrestling squad, with only one letterman missing and four Southern Conference champions on the roster, stacks up as one of the strongest in recent years.

Freshman drills are being held in all these sports, but the coaches say there has not been sufficient time to judge the potentialities of the yearling squads.

Conference champions Sam Graham at 118 pounds, Bud Robb at 126 pounds, co-captain Tommy Fuller at 136 pounds, and Lillard Ailor in the heavyweight division, head an imposing array of eight lettermen on the wrestling squad.

Also present from last year's squad, which captured the conference team championship, are co-captain Charlie Lanier, Doug House, Jim Davidson and Bob Schellenberg. The only vacancy on the team is in the 175-pound division, and Coach Archie Mathis has four sophomores to call on if the veterans start slipping—Dave Embry, Ed Waddington, Roger Soth and Ned Lawrence.

The basketball squad, twice Southern Conference champions in the last ten years and long a terror to other southern teams, appears to be weaker than in previous years with only two lettermen available, Captain Ed Cuttino and Leo Signaigo.

Gone from last year's team which finished fourth in conference standings, only to be eliminated in the first round of the annual tournament at Raleigh, are Dick Pinck, All-State forward for three years; Bob Gary, all-around guard; Captain and center Howard Dobbins, and two sophomore stars, Jeff Hudson and Johnny Ligon.

The success of Coach Cookie Cunningham's quintet rests largely on four sophomores and a junior from last year's team who did not win his letter. The junior is Johnny Kirkpatrick, and the first-year men on the squad are George Wood, Clancy Ballenger, Leon Harris and Bill Bryan.

Coach Cy Twombly wasn't exactly gloomy as he discussed the chances of his swimming team, but he too is counting on sophomores to furnish a winning season. He says the chief loss to the swimmers was the graduation of Captain Bob Boyce, leaving him with no adequate replacement in the dives.

At least six lettermen from last year's squad are returning, headed by Captain Evans Jasper. The others are Don Garretson, Don Crawford, Lin Murdock, Don Richardson and Bill Webster.

Twombly hopes that sophomore Bob DeHaven might fill the diving shortage, and says the key to a successful season lies with the performances turned in by other first-year squad men: Bill McKelway, Bill Babcock, Bob Metherer and Lynch Christian.

Campus Comment

By WALTER DOWNIE, 1942

ONE of the best stories coming out of the recent Homecoming and Opening Dance weekend concerns Washington and Lee sophomore who wouldn't say die. The boy in question, who lives in a small Western town where men are men and women are supposedly mad of it, about a month before the dance - set up negotiations with one of his fair feminine acquaintances for a date over the weekend. The young lady was sorry, but her family was coming to visit her and she'd be unable to accept his kind invitation. Undaunted, our sophomore proceeded to write to another of his many girl-friends. Her excuse was just about as air-tight as that of the first. Well, this sort of thing continued until three days before the big weekend, and the persistent student received "ICC's" (I can't come) from exactly one fair maiden. He was just about to pack up and call it quits, when, on Wednesday morning before Friday, the tenth girl accepted his invitation. This was fine thought for hero, until that afternoon, when a telegram informed him that girl number one had reconsidered and would be on hand for the dances. With typical Western resourcefulness, our Washington and Lee gentleman rose to the situation, corralled an unsuspecting freshman to whom he gave girl number ten. He then explained to number ten that he had merely asked her for a blind date with a freshman, and everyone was very happy.

* * *

Washington and Lee men took a verbal beating at the hands of a sophisticated young thing who was a cadet's date at the recent VMI Thanksgiving hops. A W&L student, attending one of the dances, upon learning that she was from the same city as one of his fraternity brothers, asked the girl if she was acquainted with the brother, and with the girl to whom the brother was pinned. The reply he got went something like this. "I know of the girl you mentioned, but I have never heard of the boy, and I'm not particularly interested in Washington and Lee men anyway." So there!

Living in a college town affects the customs and thinking of many persons. They unconsciously pick up college language and customs. For example, take the two colored butlers at one of the fraternity houses. One day last month, the intramural sports manager of this house was attempting at lunch to recruit enough boys to make up two full teams for a practice scrimmage in intramural football that afternoon. He needed one more man, and after listening to excuses from the various members was ready to give up in despair. Some witty guy piped up, "How about Sambo?" Sambo, never cracking a smile, replied, "No suh, I've got a lab this afternoon." In the same house, the other butler came through the kitchen door one evening with his hand full of cups of hot tea. Unaccustomed to such haste on the part of the usually slow fellow, one of the boys asked, "Why the hurry, William?" "This is de 'T' formation," was the ready reply.

Merry Christmas to the alumni from the students!

A New Type of Varsity Show

By E. J. McCARTY, 1942

THREE years ago, as readers of this magazine may remember, a group of boys, led by Ross Hersey, spontaneously put together an entertainment called "W & L Zapoppin'" to raise money for the Red Cross. Last year, something of the same sort was tried again with apparently less success because the idea was no longer spontaneous or fresh. So this year, the students are branching out into a standard "Varsity Show" of the type well-known for years at Princeton, the University of Pennsylvania and other schools. The only important difference between our show and theirs, according to "Dusty" Millar, the under-graduate director of the performance, is that ours will be better.

By the time most of you receive this copy, the show (slated for December 12 and 13) will be over, but we think we shall do better to forecast its success now than to relate ancient history in our next issue.

Most older alumni, we are sure, will remember the old type of varsity show, coached by a local lady who once went to elocution school or an elderly faculty member who was indulgent towards the stage—the show that featured the football and wrestling teams dressed up in pink tights and trying to do chorus routines. It was pretty sad whether anyone admitted it or not.

But nowadays? This year's show, "Say It Again," will be directed by no less than Lee Collins, a professional from New York who has directed 300 big stage shows already and is now condescending to try to teach the college boys how to do it. A football chorus?—perish the thought!

Real girls, with beauty and talent, will be imported from Southern Seminary, whose Dean, Mrs. Russell Robie, has consented to let them practice and perform. The rest of the actors will be students.

The whole show is original Washington and Lee. Tommy Fuller, an unusual combination of wrestler and poet, wrote the script for "Say It Again," while Paul Thomas has furnished fourteen original songs so good as to have "received praise from experienced men of the theatre."

They are going to have a standard 42-foot stage, constructed in that building-of-all-work, the Doremus Gymnasium, with scenery and other appurtenances; and costumes from a professional theatrical supply house in New York.

The proceeds will go to the Lexington Children's Clinic, a decidedly worthy charity which, perhaps, needs the money more than the Red Cross does.

These boys have not forgotten the reality of war that faces them—how could they?—but they are not letting it get them down. Up comes a varsity show, bigger and better. Maybe there is a future after all!

Lee Collins, Director

Real Appreciation of Beauty

JONATHAN DANIELS, well known author of A Southerner Discovers the South and a more recent book on North Carolina, Tar Heels, has recently given Washington and Lee a tribute which seems to us to sum up admirably not only how this campus looks, but also what it stands for as a Southern monument.

The exact quotation is from a recent article by Mr. Daniels in the November issue of Harper's Magazine. It is called, "Seeing the South" and describes what the author calls a "Grand Tour" of this region. The pertinent sentences read as follows: (The italics are ours.)

"We are on the home stretch now: north by Roanoke to Lexington. Without knowing it you ride on the highway over the Natural Bridge of Virginia. It is a serviceable natural wonder and also a profitable one. It is fenced in by owners who rake in the fees. If you are strong for natural wonders, I suppose you must see it,

Lieutenant-Governor Tuck, 1921

NOVEMBER elections in Virginia brought good news for Washington and Lee as Virginia elections so often do, because William M. Tuck, LL.B., 1921, was chosen by the people of the state as lieutenant-governor.

And, by the way, Abram Staples, 1908, was again chosen as attorney-general.

The Calyx for Mr. Tuck's year printed a remarkably accurate prophecy about "Bill," as he was called, saying that with his ability as a speaker, he would surely succeed in law and in politics. These things he has notably done, and since he is a farmer as well, owning and operating two tobacco farms in Halifax County, we might call him, if nothing more, a well-rounded alumnus.

Mr. Tuck came from Halifax County, having been born in its "Red Bank" district. He went to William and Mary before coming here. When he had received his LL.B., he went into practice in South Boston, and he is still the senior member of the firm of Tuck and Mitchell there.

Like his father before him, he was elected to the House of Delegates, and he served in that body in the sessions of 1924, 1926, 1928, and 1930. In 1931 he was elected to the state senate, and he has remained in that body up to the recent election.

A member of many of the important committees in both legislative houses, Mr. Tuck was particularly noted for conducting important legislation through to passage. He successfully supported the reform measures adopted during the Byrd administration; he likewise supported such measures as Old-Age Pensions, Unemployment Insurance, Slum Clearance, and a miniature AAA for the state of Virginia. During the administration of Governor Peery he was the patron of a bill refunding the Century Bonds, which bill has saved many millions of dollars to the taxpayers of the state.

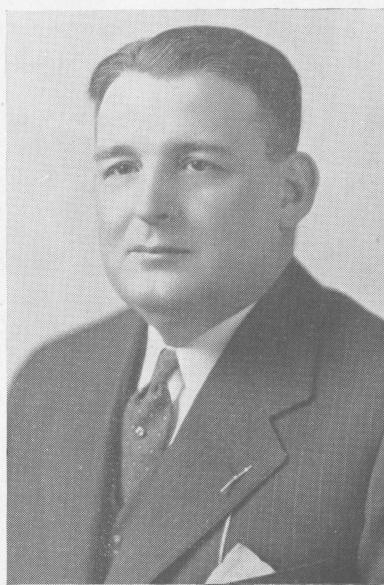

An active democrat since the day he reached voting age, he has been an effective campaigner for many years, frequently carrying his county and section of the state for democratic candidates.

In the other World War he was a private in the Marine Corps, and he is active in the American Legion today. He is also a member of the Virginia and American Bar Associations, is a director in the Citizens Bank of South Boston, and counsel for the same, as well as the Bank of Halifax.

In 1928 he married Eva Lovelace Dillard, and has one step-son, Lester L. Dillard, now a law student at Washington and Lee.

Mr. Tuck is a Baptist, and is a member of the Masons, the Woodmen of the World, Sigma Phi Epsilon, and Phi Delta Phi.

All alumni acquainted with Mr. Tuck, as well as those who do not know him personally, will, we are sure, wish to join us in hearty congratulations to Virginia's new lieutenant-governor.

William M. Tuck, LL.B., 1921

About "Ran" Shields

In answer to an inquiry by the alumni secretary concerning Dr. Randolph T. Shields, 1898, John M. Glenn, 1879, wrote:

"You may be interested in the following, which was received from the secretary of the Associated Boards for Christian Colleges in China recently, in reply to an inquiry about Dr. Randolph T. Shields:

"Just the other day I was talking with one of the staff on furlough from the Shantung Christian University Hospital. He stated that Dr. Shields was working harder than ever in his life and that the whole staff at the hospital is likewise overburdened.

"The Board of Governors at the Annual Meeting urged that Dr. Shields take a trip to Chengtu in Free China where we have another unit of the University working in connection with West China Union University. Recent advices make it appear that Dr. Shields feels that such a trip is impossible due to the responsibilities at Tsinan."

Mr. and Mrs. Emil T. Cannon announced the birth of a son, Thomas Edward Cannon, on November 9, 1941.

Homecoming Roundup

By MARSHALL JOHNSON, 1942

MARRIED only by the 13-13 tie with Davidson in football, one of Washington and Lee's biggest weekends in history was held November 14 and 15, as Homecoming and Opening Dances combined to lure nearly 1,000 dates and alumni to Lexington for the two-day affair.

Declared "successful from every standpoint—socially and financially" by students, campus leaders, faculty representatives and alumni—the weekend will long be remembered as perhaps the largest fall weekend ever held at W&L.

Dave Spencer, 140-pound Davidson halfback, provided most of the gloom as he ran and passed the Wildcats to the upset tie with an overconfident and sluggish General eleven, worn down from its peak by six consecutive crucial contests.

Pacing the Blue attack were junior fullback Frank Socha and sophomore halfback Harry Baugher. Socha provided the plunging, and Baugher gave the weekend crowd its biggest thrill by taking a Davidson punt and returning it 77 yards for the second W&L score.

But it was the mighty mite from Davidson, the elusive Spencer, who outshone everybody else on the field as he employed his triple-threat talents to set up both Wildcat touchdowns and keep the Generals in hot water most of the game.

Closing their worst season in many years, the Generals had the dope bucket kicked over on them again Thanksgiving when an alert Maryland eleven handed them a 6-0 licking in Baltimore. The season's record shows one win, six defeats and two ties.

The Generals scored 69 points during the season to 93 for the opposition, but in only two games did they lose by more than a one touchdown margin. Kentucky and Maryland triumphed by one touchdown, and Sewanee and West Virginia emerged victorious by a single point.

The Homecoming weekend was launched by the traditional rally and freshman pajama-torchlight parade. The glee club, band and student body all had a hand in the rally, featured by talks by Student Body President Howard Dobbins, Head Coach Riley Smith and Captain Bob Pinck.

Mainly of interest to alumni, besides the football game, were the buffet luncheon Saturday, the semi-annual meeting of the Alumni Board and the Alumni Council, and open house by fraternities.

Swelling the attendance at the football game were high school students from all over the state—guests of University as part of the annual High School Day. Other prominent feature was the 85-piece Davidson band which performed between the halves. The game marked the last home appearance of five seniors—Captain Phil Joe Baugher, Pres Brown, Bert Nelson and Charlie Didier.

Highlight of the Saturday night dance was a nationwide broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting System during which President Francis P. Gaines addressed alumni who could not be present.

Alumni Secretary Cy Young said the fraternity orations "were the best we have ever had, and even our alumnus who came into the Student Union headquarters commented on them."

First prize was won by Kappa Sigma for their living wildcat decoration with the "Beat Davidson" theme. Second place went to Sigma Nu, the third award was won by Sigma Chi and fourth honors went to Phi Epsilon.

But despite the result of the football game, all who attended will be a long time forgetting Homecoming and Opening Dances, 1941.

though I found its commercial setting more depressing than inspiring. It is a caged wonder now and looks like a cage. I brought you this way only because I wanted you to see the South at its most beautiful: the green sloping campuses, the red-brick buildings with the tall white porticoes of Washington and Lee University. I wish it were the picture of the South. I wish, indeed, it were the picture of America.

"That is the end of the Grand Tour."

In Memoriam

A member of the guard of honor at the funeral of General Lee in 1870, Bishop Winchester attended the Protestant Episcopal Seminary at Alexandria after receiving his A. B. here, and graduated therefrom in 1877. He was ordained a deacon in that year and a priest in 1878.

Bishop Winchester was born in Annapolis, Maryland, eighty-nine years ago, and his long life was a very full one. For fifty-three years he was an active clergyman, having been for five years rector of Calvary Church in Memphis before being called to Arkansas as Bishop Coadjutor in 1911; and for twenty years Bishop of Arkansas. He retired in 1931. He was a trustee of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee, and this institution awarded him an honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1893 as did Washington and Lee in 1894.

During the Spanish-American War Bishop Winchester was chaplain of the 1st Tennessee Volunteers and at one time was chaplain of the Arkansas Society, Sons of Confederate Veterans. He was active in fraternal organizations and was past grand prelate of the Knights Templar, past grand prelate of the United States Red Cross of Constantine, past noble grand of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and a thirty-third degree Mason. In college he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon (which fraternity then had a chapter on this campus) and of the Washington Literary Society whose Debater's Medal he won in 1874.

He traveled widely, visiting Europe, Turkey, Egypt, and Palestine. In his travels he made a special study of archaeology.

At his bedside when he died were Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery; a son, Lee Winchester of Memphis, and a grandson, James Winchester Montgomery. The Bishop's wife, the former Eliza Atkinson Lee, died on the second day of August, five years ago.

In Bishop Winchester, Washington and Lee has lost not only one of its oldest and most eminent alumni but one of its most faithful and most helpful as well.

EDWARD WEEKS LEE, for the last twelve years secretary of the New York Association, died at his home in Port Washington, Long Island, New York, on October 26th. He was fifty-one years old.

At the time of his death he was an insurance broker associated with the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

A native of New Iberia, Louisiana, Mr. Lee attended Jefferson Military College, Washington, Mississippi, before coming to Washington and Lee. During the first World War he was a lieutenant in the United States Navy and afterwards he was in the Naval Reserve for several years. He was a mason and a member of the Virginians.

1910

GILBERT EUGENE PENCE, SR., died at his home in Woodstock, Virginia, November 11, 1941, after a long illness. Mr. Pence served as mayor of Woodstock and Commonwealth's Attorney of Shenandoah County. He took his L.L.B. at Washington and Lee in 1910 and was awarded the Orator's Gold Medal of the Washington Literary Society in his senior year.

Electric Power Company in Welch, West Virginia. His youngest son is eighteen years old and has just finished high school. Mr. Pobst's associate lawyer is a lady who graduated two years ago from the University of Virginia.

By D. W. M. MACCLUER, Class Agent

WILLIAM R. J. DUNN (Route 4, Cahaba Road, Birmingham, Alabama). Unfortunately there was a hole torn in this letter and so we cannot give the name of the firm he built. The letter says, "Have been busy on defense construction work and built Ft. M...n and now we are building the Anniston Ordnance Depot. All hair left (Editor: What does he mean by all hair left? Does he have it all or has it all left him?) Weight 215."

I. P. GASSMAN (Arcade Manufacturing Company, Freeport, Illinois) "I am still hanging out at the stand, having given up active law practice to go into the manufacturing business in the late fall of 1918. I have been living in Freeport since January, 1912. My weight is now about the best I have ever had—180-pounds stripped, with very little waist line. Trout fishing opened here about the middle of the month (May) I do more golfing than anything else for recreation; though a little hunting and fishing during the proper seasons."

G. W. KELLER (Huntington-Oklahoma Gas Company, Huntington, West Virginia) says: "Am engaged in natural gas business. We are producers and sell our product to the utilities. By profession I was a pharmacist first in Virginia and later in West Virginia. I was half owner in the Frederick Pharmacy under the ownership of the Keller Drug Company. In 1916 I sold out my interest so I could devote all my time to my natural gas business. The only prize I could hope for in our class would be for the 'bald pate.' We have a son 20 years old. He entered W&L in 1939. He was taking rather heavy course and this year had qualitative and quantitative chemistry. He heartily disliked it. He wants to study for the diplomatic service. Dean Tucker advised him to take up his work at Marshall College, this city, and return to Washington and Lee this coming fall so he can enter with a certain standing at that time."

J. O. KNOTT of 3611 Fourteenth Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., got his Ph.D. from Washington and Lee in 1907. He is now a research worker for the Library of Congress. He has crossed the Atlantic about three times, being a lecturer on the big Atlantic steamers. "One of my tours, I was permitted to be present by the grace of the Egyptian Government, when the lid of the Tut-ankh-Amen sarcophagus was lifted, and to be one of four to see the great sight first."

I. L. LLEWELLYN, Pastor of the Methodist Church, Stuart, Virginia, says: "Am just a plain parson, serving a happy and successful pastorate here in Stuart for my third year. Have one wife, one child, one vocation (preaching), one avocation (fishing), one passion (to serve), one eternal hope (Heaven)."

1908

MARVIN COENHAVER is Secretary-Treasurer of the Marion Hardware and Supply Company, Marion, Virginia.

Academic Notes by OTIS HOWE, Class Agent

TOM BEMIS is in the real estate business in the city of Scott, Arkansas. He and Doug (Tiny) also are inter-ed in the manufacture of lumber. Tom has a wife and fine daughters, eleven and nine. French McKnight, and I had the pleasure of a short visit with him a year ago.

EDDIE CAMERON is still connected with athletics at the University, where he has made a fine record. He is married, and Jim Thomas, 1923, tells me they have a beautiful home in Durham.

BERRY BROOKS continues to buy cotton in and around Memphis during the cotton season and travels and hunts the summer. He, his wife and daughter, spent last summer in Hollywood.

RALPH BURCH is assistant manager of the branch office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in Charleston, West Virginia. He is married and has a son years old named "Mike."

JOHN T. BOLD also has two daughters. He practices law in Evansville, Indiana, where he is active in church, Masonic and civic affairs.

CHARLES F. BARRETT, JR., is Lieutenant Colonel in charge of "the best regiment in the army," the 179th Infantry, 45th Division, Camp Barkeley, Texas. He regrets the fact that he seldom crosses the path of his classmates at Washington and Lee. He says, "There is a paucity of them in my part of the country in the first place and in the second our particular class was just the right age to miss both wars, so none of them show up even in such big troop concentrations as we have just finished."

By BRUCE F. GANNAWAY, Class Agent

EARL MATTINGLY is now treasurer of Washington and Lee, which assures us that the old Alma Mater will stay out of the "red." We extend him our congratulations on this promotion. Now we feel that he can seriously consider the matter of taking to himself a wife. He's got to be honest as a treasurer, so he may as well stop cheating the girls out of one more good man.

BILL BROCK is still running the Brock Candy Company, and from the amount of his sweets I see in the local stores, he must be doing a pretty good job.

PHIL HOWERTON writes from Charlotte, where he has been General Agent for the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company for the past six years. In 1926 he married Miss Lemma Shepherd, a Hollins girl, and they are the proud parents of a five year old son who should be laying his books around the Washington and Lee Campus about 1953.

DICK BEARD, after 17 years in the flour and milling business in Birmingham, formed, with his brother, The National Distributors Company, Incorporated, and the American Flag and Decorating Company, of 1925 Fifth Avenue North, Birmingham. They represent manufacturers of various items for the states of Alabama, Mississippi, and Georgia. In 1926 Dick married Miss Mary Emma Pope, of Columbus, Georgia. They have two fine boys, Richard, Jr., thirteen, and Edward Ewin, seven. Looks like Dick is pretty good at raising "Beards" and Washington and Lee will welcome them in a few years.

MILLEDGE NAIL is an attorney, practicing in Memphis. Besides his general practice, he is assistant attorney for the FCA in five states. Milledge has two boys, ten and eight, and he says the older is headed for Wilson Field right now, being able to wear some of his dad's clothes.
