Front cover: lobby of the main building—bulletin board—students considering their future in the armed services—General Lee in the background as superintendent of West Point in 1852. The boys on the cover may be thinking about General Lee in another war. The back cover shows the SATC in April, 1917, just 25 years ago—perhaps you remember it. These are but three of the wars in her history. Washington and Lee goes on.
Years ago I was walking across our campus with one of the noblest men that ever lived in Lexington—or anywhere else. We passed the chapel. He stopped suddenly and said, "When I feel that the circumstances of life depress me, even defeat me, I just slip down here and stand and look for a long time into the face of Lee."

Certainly today the circumstances of life are depressing. Even this copy of The Alumni Magazine, I dare say, reflects the seriousness of our thinking. The magnitude of the war effort we must make grows more apparent; citizens are paying heavier taxes, are being called upon to make severe denials in the ordinary comforts of life; the immediate prospects of the University, dear to all of us, are shadowed.

Whatever be the stringency of life for us who are older, it is small compared to the drastic readjustment of ambition and hope that must be made by these, our boys, who go not along the path of their dreams but into the actual defense of our country.

For all of us, these who are younger and those of us who are older, the time has come to draw upon the reserves of our faith.

We must remind ourselves not only that we defend the things that humanity can not lose, the liberties and the values and the convictions that alone make life worthy, but that we shall also be privileged to make a better world, a world in which these things will be firmly established for the generations that are to come. The method of global war is not the method we would have chosen, but it seems to be the only method; we shall use it for the larger and the enduring results.

Alumni of Washington and Lee do not have to be told that General Lee passed through darker hours than we have or shall have, and that he saw always the light. He gathered patiently the tumbled fragments of life as he had known it and with them he built a better life.

To think of him is to rise above these momentary moods of frustration and fear and defeatism.

If during the years we have been able to make the Washington and Lee training mean what it ought to mean, then it has a distinctive quality. Like other experiences of higher education, it should make a man gracious and cultured in his person, competent in terms of his achievement. But it should also make him a peculiar contribution, that he is brave in frightening environment, adequate for the heroic moment.

Herein, I believe, is our greatest opportunity. I have formed within my own heart a resolution that we must give greater emphasis to this resource of the institution's faith. The alumni, we are confident, will endorse and will help.

President
"I wish, indeed, it were the picture of America"

Facing Our Third Century

By the time this issue of the Alumni Magazine reaches its subscribers, every alumnus of Washington and Lee will have had the opportunity to know the facts about his university in the crisis that menaces us all. The bulletin written by the president of the university, dated February 16, 1942, gives you all these facts. It leaves you to draw your own conclusions, and there is but one conclusion to draw. Your university is in danger, as is your country, but Washington and Lee faces a special danger, shared only by American universities of a particular type.

It is not the purpose of this article merely to repeat the essential truths put forth in President Gaines' bulletin. This article is intended rather to amplify the bulletin and to emphasize its message—to make sure, so far as is possible, that every alumnus realizes deeply the obligation which his past and present association with Washington and Lee University puts upon him to fulfil at this time.

Everyone knows that the United States is fighting for its very existence. Everyone knows that all thought, all planning today, is predicated upon a successful termination of this war. But colleges of our type—men's colleges without state aid and without military education—could conceivably fail to survive, even though a long war came to successful termination.

It is well enough to remember that Washington and Lee survived another war, even though it ended in defeat, or that Washington and Lee went beyond that war, through the poverty and trials of the Reconstruction. One might even hope that another Robert E. Lee would arise this time, if worse came to worse, to bring educational victory out of defeat. Perhaps; but we can hardly count on another Lee.

Though the present situation might look less menacing on the surface than did the last one, we must realize the significant fact that colleges in 1865 were rare; today they are legion. Dr. Gaines pointed out in the pages of this magazine as early as February, 1939, that the situation of the privately endowed college was precarious even then—that the money poured into state institutions by state and federal governments drove students into less expensive forms of education than ours. Who was to tell these students that for the cheaper price, they got what they paid for; that Washington and Lee has values far surpassing any price?

No Washington and Lee man expects his college to face actual catastrophe, even in the face of the war, the draft, and the competition afforded by other institutions— institutions that must seem, to the uninformed prospective student, to offer something more practical for his immediate future than can be obtained here at the moment. Yet every Washington and Lee man must realize that the most hideous possibilities cannot be ignored in time of war.

With such realities clearly in view, even the most sensitive graduate of this institution will certainly rise to action. Something out of the past will come into his mind. More than ever he will realize his debt to the college that gave him very much for very little. Perhaps he will recall the words of Jonathan Daniels quoted in our last issue: "I brought you this way only because I wanted you to see the South at its most beautiful: the green sloping campus to the red-brick buildings with the tall white porticoes of Washington and Lee University. I wish it were the picture of the South. I wish, indeed, it were the picture of America."

Dr. Gaines has fully described, in his recent bulletin, the steps being taken by the university to cope with the terrible problems that confront us. He has shown that our first effort, naturally, has been to co-operate as fully as we can in the war effort of the United States. That part of the program will go on, and no one need ponder it further.

The next part of the program must also be well understood from the bulletin. Like most other American colleges we are going to adopt the "accelerated curriculum." For the first time in the 193 years of our history we are going to undertake a summer session. So far as the war effort is concerned, this summer session will insure to the United States a larger body of educated citizens for the armed forces. So far as the college is concerned, it will afford a way to keep boys below the draft age in school.

Into this summer session the Board has decided to admit some women. This decision, appearing to be a spectacular departure from our tradition, has aroused more comment than anything else. The Memphis Commercial Appeal commented, "W&L Goes Sissy." Naturally, a newspaper, seeking to make as much as possible out of the news at hand, would indulge in this form of comment. Yet a moment of reflection shows that Washington and Lee has done nothing remarkable in allowing a few girls to participate in a few courses during a summer session.

The admission of women to a summer session does not change a man’s school to a co-educational institution any more than the granting of an honorary degree to an outstanding woman writer made a co-educational institution out of Bowdoin College some years ago, when criticism leveled at Bowdoin might have led one to think so. If the admission of women is a departure from tradition, so is the summer session itself. What Washington and Lee stands for cannot be changed because girls are in classrooms who are not weary dates after a dance.

The relative proportion of women to men in the summer school at Harvard has been large; so has that at Yale; yet no one has ventured to call Harvard or Yale co-educational. Our situation here is quite unlike that faced by Washington and Lee in 1896 (as described by Dr. Howe in our issue of December, 1939). Were the present faculty and board now confronted by a situation comparable to that one, with the proposal that women be admitted unconditionally as regular students, the vote would be unanimous against it—co-education would not lose by one lone vote as it did then.

The summer session will be undertaken, on a year-to-year basis, as a necessary evil, for better or for worse. Gladly, the faculty is doing its part without compensation. We hope that the session will be helpful both to the University and to the country. It is an experiment. Only time will tell.

Such, in general, are the plans so far proposed for the salvation of your college—plans made with much gratifying alumni help. The question is whether or not these plans will be sufficient.

The problem is difficult because the perils facing your university are peculiar to it alone. Bad as the difficulties you or your business may be now encountering, those of your college are probably worse. How you may help has been already told you by the president of the university.

If every alumnus will, as he should, adopt the problems of Washington and Lee as if they were personally his own, there can be no doubt that eventually we shall go ahead to a second two hundred years, finer than the first.

A Wistful Apologia to Subscribers

Most of our subscribers, we imagine, have not noticed the shrunked size of recent editions of the Alumni Magazine, but some may have happened to perceive that our usual 32 pages are down to 24.

We're sorry. We wouldn't have had it happen. It grieves us if nobody else. The budget did it, and the budget is law. We recall the day during the depression when the Saturday Evening Post was cut in half. We were working for the U. S. Mail at the time and had to carry heavy bales of the Post every week; so we were delighted at their misfortune. But the Alumni Magazine never hurt a postal employee. This is war.

Though our page-length has been cut down, we have tried to keep the usual number of class notes and trust we have in no way changed the quality of our output. We hope the reduced magazine will not reduce the subscription list but will enlarge it. No postman will be harmed; Washington and Lee will be benefited greatly. So will the subscriber.
Thomas James Farrar, 1869-1941

Born April 17, 1869, at Oak Springs, Fluvanna County, Virginia, in the very heart of the Old Dominion, educated at Washington and Lee University, Thomas James Farrar typified the noble and genuine Virginian of the Old School. A large circle of alumni and friends will be grieved to learn of his passing at his home in Charlottesville, December 21, 1941. He entered Washington and Lee in 1891 and soon took an active part in student life, as first editor of the Ring-tum Phi, manager of football, and president of the YMCA. His fraternity membership was in Delta Tau Delta, and he was later its faculty advisor. Washington and Lee conferred on him the A.B. in 1895, M.A. in 1897 and the Ph.D. in 1901. His later graduate training as a philologist was gained at the University of Gottingen, Germany, in 1906 and at Paris in 1908.

Dr. Farrar immediately began to teach and devoted his entire career to this profession, beginning by serving as a Washington and Lee instructor, 1895-99. He was married on December 28, 1899, to Miss Margaret Lynn Harris of Albemarle county, who survives him. After several years in Georgia, during which he both taught and did administrative work, Dr. Farrar returned to his alma mater in 1905 as a professor of German, serving in this capacity until his retirement in June, 1939. Since that date he had resided in Charlottesville. It is pertinent to note that forty-two years of his total life-span of seventy-two were spent on the Washington and Lee campus, where he loyally gave of himself.

During World War I, Dr. Farrar was stationed at Camp Lee, and acted as secretary of the War Work Council. He organized the first Inter-Fraternity Council, was its first president, and for many years served in this office. In later years he became a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity.

Dr. Farrar, who possessed ability as an organizer, organized and served as president of the Lexington Rotary Club. His wholehearted, zealous interest in community projects was further evidenced by his work with the Red Cross. Most citizens of Lexington were familiar with his cheery greeting to people on the street. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church and active in Masonry, having participated in organizing the Square and Compass, a body of college Masons. His hobby was the development of fine trees on a beautiful lawn with its flowers and shrubs, surrounding his home, Stone Cottage, on the outskirts of Lexington. Many hours of loving labor were spent there; a more pleasant spot was difficult to find. Within the home the visitor was at once struck by social charm, graceful dignity, and quiet refinement of attractive antique furnishings.

It is difficult to sketch the character, personality and teaching of Dr. Farrar in a few words. His greatest achievement was just being himself—"Tommy" as he was affectionately called by students. Two of his chief characteristics were a spirit of broad tolerance and the quality of patience. In the classroom he possessed humor, a steady flow of clear illustrations and apt anecdotes. He moved others, particularly students, by the straightforward honesty of his thinking and acting. His was the serene "wisdom of the heart." Kindly and approachable in his hearing, he drew young men to him.

From his youth on, he was always interested in anyone in trouble. At prep school he interceded once for a younger boy in danger of expulsion, and this trait of securing a fair deal for all stuck with him. Few people connected with Washington and Lee have more friendships. His interest in student welfare is shown by his long-time chairmanship of the faculty committee on scholarships, medals and prizes and by work on the fraternity and curriculum committees.

A member of the Modern Language Association of America and its Virginia section, Dr. Farrar was more interested in teaching than in research for publication. He edited La Cigale chez les Fournis and published The Gerund in Old English (1901), as well as a number of papers, book reviews, and articles. In the classroom he combined accuracy and precision of work with breadth of view. It was an unforgettable experience to hear him expound the philosophical truths of Faust or Nathan der Weise. Students of German language and literature gained from him a real enthusiasm for further study. Superficiality and sham in any form were far from him.

Many will miss a sincere friend, a delightful companion, and a charitable gentleman who trod the path of duty.

G. W. Dunnington, 1928.
Eight Faculty Members Called

The student body of Washington and Lee is not the only part of the university that is shrinking; the faculty is also growing smaller all the time as the government increasingly calls upon those with special training.

The first to go was Professor Charles P. Light, who held a reserve commission in the Judge Advocate's Department and was ordered to Bermuda early in 1940. Next to depart was Dr. Herbert Trotter, a physicist, who is doing special research for the government.

This year, Dr. Marcellus H. Stow, chairman of geology, became Assistant Administrator of Mines and Quarries for the War Production Board. Larkin H. Farinholt is in Pittsburgh doing chemical research; Dr. L. C. Pettit of biology is a 1st Lieutenant of Infantry, while quite recently Professor Oscar W. Riegel has gone to Washington to apply his expert knowledge of journalism and propaganda to the problems of the Coordinator of Information. Almond Coleman, '26, professor of accounting, reports on March 12th as Captain in the army.

Best known to alumni among the eight so far called is Dr. Reid White, Jr., '19, university physician and treasurer of your alumni association. Dr. White held a reserve commission, as Captain, in the medical corps, with the understanding that he would not be called unless the United States actually went to war. Consequently, the 31st of December saw him leaving Lexington to join the University of Pennsylvania medical unit at Fort Custer, Michigan, whence he has gone to an unnamed destination.

Dr. White's place is being filled, until his return, by Robert S. Munger, '35, who took his M.D. from Tulane after two years here.

Other vacant positions are being carried on as follows: Charles V. Laughlin is teaching law for Mr. Light, while Thomas E. Lothery has the courses in physics left by Mr. Trotter. At present, Professor Edward Lammers is taking over Dr. Stow's classes, with the help of a student assistant; the chemistry department, meanwhile, has absorbed Dr. Farinholt's work aided by J. J. McDermott, who is doing some of the laboratory work. Thomas H. Alphin, '36, has returned and is taking Dr. Pettit's work in biology. Robert M. Hodges, instructor in journalism and director of the news bureau, has taken over Professor Riegel's work, with the exception of three courses, one of which is being taught by G. S. Jackson of the department of English, another by C. Harold Lauck, of the Journalism Laboratory Press. A third was combined with Professor Watkin's class in Creative Writing.

War and Dr. Gaines

A well-known president of an American college has been quoted as saying that "the sole duty of a college president consists in the giving and receiving of pain." This description, succinct though it may be, hardly sums up the duties that a college president is burdened with, and all alumni of this institution must be aware that President Francis P. Gaines, administering the university in accordance with the three sometimes conflicting views of undergraduates, trustees, and alumni—has a real job on his hands. And Dr. Gaines, in addition, teaches "The Bible as Literature."

Yet, in the war emergency, Dr. Gaines has found time for outside activities which alone ought to be enough to take anyone's full time.

He is a member of the 5-man Presidential Commission on "Patent Planning," to seek to redirect the creative energies of American industry into peace-time opportunities after the war.

He is State chairman, Virginia Committee for Defense Savings.

He is a member, representing men's colleges, of the American Council on Education's Committee on Military Affairs, principally to advise with the Selective Service Board in regard to occupational training.

He is chairman, special committee of the American Association of Colleges, "to relate non-military colleges to the war effort."

It is not by chance that Dr. Gaines has been appointed to these important committees. His ability has long been recognized by national as well as state authorities.
Sorrells Named Assistant Director of Censorship

JOHN H. SORRELLS, '18, who has served as Executive Editor of all Scripps-Howard newspapers since 1930, has been named to the position of Assistant Director of Censorship to deal with problems affecting the press. No alumnus needs to be told that this is an extremely big job and a really great honor at this time.

Byron Price, Director of Censorship, in making the appointment in December, said, "Mr. Sorrells is a newspaper man of wide experience and recognized ability." Price stressed the fact that Sorrells was accepting the position "at considerable personal sacrifice."

The new director, after graduating from Washington and Lee in 1918, went overseas, serving as a First Lieutenant in the infantry, and then went into newspaper work in which his subsequent experience has been very extensive. He began his career as a reporter on the Daily Graphic in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, in 1919 and rose to the position of editor three years later. He spent another three years as news editor of the Daily Oklahoman. Since 1926 Sorrells has served as managing editor of the Cleveland Press and the Memphis Press-Scimitar and as editor of the Fort Worth Press.

While taking up his duties as Executive Editor of the Scripps-Howard papers, this veteran newspaperman found time to write The Working Press, which was published in 1930.

The Sorrells have four children: John Harvey, Jr., Peggy Ann, William Gordon, and Robert Talliafero. Their home is in Pelham Manor, New York.

John Harvey Sorrells, Jr., is a member of the freshman class at Washington and Lee this year.

Weddings

News reaching the Alumni Office indicates that those hereinafter named are to be congratulated on their good fortune in being recently wedded to the following brides:

1933
ALBERT OGLESBY BURKE to Miss Nancy Bruce Mc Culloch at the bride's home in Lexington, Virginia, on February 25th.

1937
FREDERICK ARELL MARSTELLAR to Miss Ruth Mary Quinn on December 27th at St. Ann's Church, Washington, D. C.

1938
SETH NOEL BAKER to Miss Geraldine Teresa Sullivan on Christmas Day at the Church of Saint Brendan, New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are living at 172 South Long Beach Avenue, Freeport, New York.

1940
HERBERT LINDSAY LITTLE to Miss Belle McLaughlin Hearon on January 24th at Trinity Episcopal Church, Columbus, Georgia.

1941
WILLIAM PATTERSON AMES, JR., to Miss Mary Jane Kiser on December 31st at Clarendon Methodist Church, Arlington, Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Ames are living at 638 North Jackson Street in Arlington.

ALFRED THOMAS BISHOP, JR., to Helen Elizabeth Lewis on December 20th, in the Raleigh Court Methodist Church, Roanoke, Virginia.

RICHARD HAROLD FINCK to Alexa Thomas McColl in Bennettsville, South Carolina on February 14th. Mr. and Mrs. Pinck will be at home at 3220-A Hanover Avenue, Richmond, Virginia.

The new president of the Orange County (Florida) Bar Association is S. E. Durrance, '17. The organization consists of about 150 members.

"He has practiced in Orlando since 1917," according to the Orlando Sunday Sentinel, "earning the esteem of his clients and colleagues and gaining a wide acquaintance in the state and nation, not only through his appearances in court but also through his memberships in the Florida Bar Association and the National Bar Association."

Mathis to Retire

A large group of alumni and his splendid record as wrestling coach at Washington and Lee will regret to learn that he has resigned his position as coach, and assistant professor of physical education, effective next September. During his seventeen years here he has acquired a farm in Vienna, Illinois, where he has spent all his summer vacations. He feels now that it needs his attention all the year round.

Few coaches at Washington and Lee have ever been as successful as has Mr. Mathis. The seventeen varsity teams trained by him engaged in 104 contests, won 80, tied 2, and lost only 22. His teams have brought home 11 Southern Conference wrestling championships, and this year's group missed the twelfth by a small margin. Eight seasons have seen Washington and Lee wrestlers undertake difficult schedules with neither loss nor tie. His freshman teams were undefeated in state and Southern Conference competition for ten years up until 1939. This year's team had won six out of six matches up to the conference tournament and had rather badly defeated their rivals from North Carolina who were this year's victors.

Mathis came to Washington and Lee from Illinois where he graduated from the state university, to which, by the way, he hopes soon to send his daughter. That he wishes, under these circumstances, to go back home and operate his farm, is easily understandable; but at Washington and Lee, Coach Mathis will certainly be missed.

Wrestling

Coach Archie Mathis' grapplers have put through a victorious season with six wins and no defeats in as many starts. Winners of the Southern Conference title last year, the Washington and Lee wrestling team was definitely a contender this year for the same coveted title. In the dual meets this year, the wrestling team had one that was a shut-out with the Apprentice School of Newport News, 28-0. The closest contest was with the strong mat team of the University of North Carolina, but the Generals came through with a 17-11 score over their opponents.

The squad this year is practically the same as last year's. Southern Conference champions, red-headed Sam Graham, 121-lb., Bud Robb, 128-lb., Captain Tommy Fuller, 136-lb., and Lillard Ailor in the unlimited bracket, will be in the running for the same honors again this year at the Southern Conference meet at Greensboro, North Carolina, February 27. Sammy Graham and Lillard Ailor have been defeated only once this year, and Bud Robb and Captain Fuller have finished the season undefeated in dual competition. Jim Evans, 128-lb., competed twice in this division with as many wins. At the 145-lb., slot, Dave Embry had one win and two defeats, and in the same class Charley Lanier has had two wins with no defeats. Doug "Phantom" House, 155-lb., finished his season with five wins and one defeat, and Bob Schellenberg, 165-lb., has compiled four wins and two losses. Roger Soth, 165-lb., suffered one defeat and no wins. At 175-lb., Ed Waddington won three times and lost twice. The team totals according to individual calculations have been fairly impressive: 38 individual wins with 11 of these by falls; and only 10 individual losses.

Basketball

Staging an up-hill battle after dropping their first six contests in a row, Washington and Lee's fighting basketball team gained a berth in the annual Southern Conference tournament for the tenth year in a row in addition to grabbing off second place in the Big Six title chase.
The Generals literally "backed" into the tournament, gaining their berth by losing to George Washington on the same night that their nearest competitors, Furman and Virginia Tech, were eliminating themselves from consideration by dropping conference games.

Coach Cookie Cunningham held little hope of a successful season for the cagers at the start of the campaign with only two veterans—Captain Ed Cuttino and Leo Signaigo—returning, but a band of seven sophomores from last year's mediocre frosh team changed the complexion of things entirely.

Stellar soph guard, Clancy Ballenger, has waged a scoring battle with the two veterans all year, gaining the lead near the end of the season. At the same time, Harry Baugher, Lanky Leon Harris, Bill Bryan, George Wood, Jack Roehl and Don Johnston have helped in the stretch.

The Blue courtmen ended up the state race with five wins and three losses for second place, and chalked up seven victories and seven defeats in gaining eighth place in the conference.

Chances for next year's team appear considerably brighter with eight men slated to return, only Cuttino being lost. In addition, several members of this year's frosh squad will be on hand to bolster the team.

The freshmen scored six wins against five losses in competition this winter, but produced several players who will be key men in next year's plans.

Harry Harner, Sam DiBlasi, Pinky Norman and Dick Working particularly are being counted on next season. Others who may develop include Jack Sater, Bob English, Dave Clark, John Casey, Jack Kibler, Harry Brown and Ben Kaplan.

Swimming

Cy Twombly's swimmers, woefully shy of material, wound up their season with only one win compared to four losses. The lone win was over William and Mary, while losses were suffered to North Carolina State, Virginia Tech, Duke and North Carolina.

Bill Webster, captain-elect for 1943, was the outstanding individual performer, turning in four wins in five starts in the backstroke and coming within two-tenths of a second of the W&L pool record for the event.

Webster's 24 points tied for high-scoring honors with Jim Priest, long-distance free style star, who chalked up three first places. Not far behind with 22 points was Bill Babcock, sophomore sprint star.

As with the cagers, the mermen will lose only one man, Captain Evans Jasper, and should have a more successful season next year, although this year's freshman swimmers showed little promise.

Fencing

On a rather short schedule the fencing team has met some excellent competition and has been undefeated up to this time. With wins over North Carolina, 9-8, and V. P. L., 12-5, the team is looking forward to meeting the University of Virginia on March 7. There is a possibility that William and Mary will be added to the schedule, but no definite plans have been made.

Although as yet unrecognized, the fencing team hopes to gain recognition as a minor monogram sport. Ten southern and southeastern teams will compete in a tournament at the University of North Carolina on April 3rd and 4th, and the Generals will be there.

Ted Humphreys, who has been responsible for the introduction of this sport to Washington and Lee, performs the role of coach and captain. He has won 11 out of 13 individual encounters, taking part in all of the three weapon divisions of foils, sabre, and epee. John Wehneke, foils and epee, has five wins out of ten. Bob Jaster, foils, has four wins out of six. Haller Jackson, epee and sabre, won one and lost one. Jack Ware, sabre, has taken three defeats, and Niles Grosvenor, sabre has not entered competition. Coleman Sholl has been acting as manager, although there is no monogram award for this position in an unrecognized sport.

If you have missed the usual article in this issue on the Fancy Dress Ball, it might as well be noted that a lot of things were missing about Fancy Dress this year. Too much war. The theme was "A Night at Monte Carlo;" the radio broadcast was cancelled; the expenses were cut down as much as possible. In spite of all this, it was a good dance.

Richard P. Carter, 1929, for five years a member of the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation and director of the news bureau at Washington and Lee, is now associate editor of the Roanoke Times and World News, Roanoke, Virginia.

Cyrus W. Hall, '23, has gone into partnership with Jackson D. Altizer and organized the firm of Hall and Altizer with offices in the Charleston National Bank Building, Charleston, West Virginia.

The editors express appreciation for help in the preparation of this issue by the following members of Professor Hodges' class in Advanced Reporting: Ned Burks, Dick Houska, Ed McCarty, and Marshall Johnson.
Local Alumni Association Notes

Louisville Fielden Woodward, '37, was elected president of the Louisville chapter for the coming year at the association’s annual meeting held January '19. Murrel Kline, '25, was named secretary.

Coach Riley Smith represented the University at the meeting.

Ernest B. Walker, Jr., reports the chapter had a fine rally luncheon December 30, before the Washington and Lee-St. Xavier basketball game played that night in Louisville.

Coach Harold “Cookie” Cunningham and Howard Dobbins of Washington and Lee made brief talks.

Among those who attended the luncheon were:

St. Louis The annual Christmas luncheon meeting of the Washington and Lee alumni and students from St. Louis and vicinity, held at the Kings-Way Hotel December 27, featured a talk by Jack Barrie, '42, on current activities at school, and the droll recollections of William M. Martin, '95, of his days as a student. The twenty attending showed a keen interest in the regular business and in the war’s influence on the University’s welfare.

Hartford The Hartford alumni group held a luncheon at the University Club on December 5. Suggestions were made to draw alumni from New Britain, New Haven and Bridgeport, as well as Hartford, by having dinner meetings rather than luncheons. No business was undertaken at the meeting.

Piedmont The Piedmont Alumni Chapter met on January 19th at the O’Henry Hotel in Greensboro, North Carolina, elected A. Stacy Gifford, '24, to the presidency, and named Frank O. Steele, '16, as secretary-treasurer for the current year.

Speeches were delivered by Dr. Henry Louis Smith, Mr. Gifford and Emerson T. Sanders, '27.

Baltimore The Baltimore Alumni Association held its annual dinner November 19 before the Washington and Lee-Maryland football game. Students and their fathers from Baltimore also were invited to the dinner for the first time.

After-dinner talks on the various aspects of football and other activities at Washington and Lee were given by “Cap’n Dick” Smith and “Tex” Tilson.

Officers for the coming year elected were John C. Hoover, '22, who succeeds J. Carl Fisher, '15, as president, and Latimer G. Young, '40, who was reelected secretary-treasurer.

Guests present at the dinner were Mr. Harry Baughner, Mr. Briscoe, Captain Brown, Mr. Raymond T. Long, Mr. Paul J. B. Murphy, Jr., Dr. Henry L. Sinskey and his son, Robert Sinskey, and Ken Van de Water, then of the Washington and Lee News Bureau.

New York Speaking on “The American Idea,” Dr. William T. Hausche brought home Washington and Lee’s place in perpetuating those things that have made America great, to the 85 alumni attending the annual banquet held in the Princeton Club in New York, December 12th.

Introduced by Toastmaster John Davis as the “mainstay of the faculty,” Clayton E. Williams, twirling his glasses characteristically, praised Riley Smith, newly appointed football coach.

Roy T. Grimley, recently-elected president of the association, was in charge of the dinner. Noting that attendance this year was twice last year’s, Mr. Grimley said he believed that “the New York alumni are stronger than ever before.”

Mr. Grimley was elected to fill the vacancy created when President Nelson Burris resigned to move to Johnson City, Tennessee, at the alumni business meeting on January 12. At the same time, Gilbert Gardiner was elected to the council to replace Bill Owen, who was made vice-president.

The following were elected vice-presidents: for New York City, Daniel Blain; for New Jersey, Jim Castner; for Long Island, Bill Owen; for Connecticut, Allan McDowell; for Upstate New York, Carl Foss. Emmett W. Poindexter was made secretary-and-treasurer.

Members of the council for the term '41-'44 are William M. Brown, Thornton W. Allen, and Junitas L. Powell.

Philadelphia The annual dinner of the Philadelphia alumni association was cancelled by the chapter at a luncheon meeting held on January 17, because of the national emergency, and more emphasis will be laid on monthly luncheon meetings in the future.

Officers for the coming year will be elected, following the report of the nominating committee, at the February luncheon, to be held on the 21st.

John Mark Glenn, class of 1879, and active leader in social work for forty-five years, has been elected a trustee of the Community Service Society of New York City.

Mr. Glenn is also a trustee of the Regional Plan Association and Johns-Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore; secretary of the Russell Sage Foundation; and a member of the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

In Memoriam

Matthew S. Bradley died at his home in Georgetown, Kentucky, December 13. He was 89.

Mr. Bradley had practiced law in Georgetown since 1923 and was a former city attorney. He received his law degree at Washington and Lee in 1876.

He is survived by his sister, and a daughter and son.

James William Kern, died on December 6, at a local hospital in Paducah, Kentucky, after a year's illness. He was 54.

He was a son of the late Dr. James W. Kern, formerly a member of the Washington and Lee faculty in the Latin department.

Mr. Kern was an officer for 37 years with the Illinois Central Railway system and superintendent of the Kentucky division at the time of his retirement last year. During World War No. I, he was a captain with the 13th Engineers in France.

Among those surviving is a son, Dabney Kern, who attended Washington and Lee from 1939 to 1941. Other survivors are his wife, Mrs. Nancy B. Kern; a daughter, Miss Nancy Benson Kern; and two other sons, John S. and James W. Kern.

Mr. Kern was buried at Paducah on December 8.

J. W. Kirkpatrick, pioneer El Paso business man, died at the Southwestern General Hospital in El Paso, Texas, on December 6th after an illness of about ten days. He was 57 years old.

He was prominent in El Paso business and political circles for a quarter of a century after moving there from his native state, Tennessee, in November, 1911, when he founded the Tri-State Motor Company.

At one time he was owner of the Universal Car Company, president of the City Service Company, director of the Security Bank and Trust Company, president of the Victory Piston Ring Company and secretary of the Henning-American Lumber Company in El Paso.

He was appointed a county commissioner of Precinct No. 1 in March, 1925, and a year later campaigned for the office of mayor. He retired from politics in May, 1926.

Later he became president of the Security Fireproof Storage Company in El Paso and more recently was publisher of a monthly magazine, Around Here.

He is survived by his widow and several children.
Class Notes

1892

Rees Turpin is a member of the law firm of Behrendt and Searing, New York Life Building, Kansas City Missouri. He says he is applying the expression, "receding youth" (in the class letter) to himself personally, as it sounds much better than approaching age. He says he is retaining as much of his youth as can be expected, and it seems to him, a great deal more than many around him are able to retain.

1893

R. W. Jopling is the retired pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Lancaster, South Carolina. He says, "I believe I love Washington and Lee as truly and as warmly as any man who was graduated there."

1894

J. Preston Beale was a visitor to the campus last Finals. He has recently retired after forty-six years with the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. He expects to spend most of his time in Florida, Virginia, and Connecticut.

James N. Veech, of Louisville, Kentucky, is now making his home with his son, Alexander Veech, Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings, Washington and Lee, Lexington, Virginia. His wife, who was Miss Agnes Ross of Lexington, died during the winter.

W. H. Keister, superintendent of the Harrisonburg public schools, writes of his appreciation of the testimonial dinner given at the Mayflower Hotel in Lexington last May for Mr. Harrington Waddell, Superintendent of the Lexington Public Schools, and himself.

J. W. Lattomus, Class Agent for 1896, is practicing law in the Citizens Bank Building, Wilmington, Delaware.

William Dickinson Adams is in good health and enjoys his association with other good Texas alumni. His address is 1810 S. Marsalis, Dallas Texas.

1897

Dr. Leroy Barret is professor of Ancient Languages at Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut. He and Mrs. Barret are frequent visitors to Washington and Lee’s campus.

1898

Henry W. Anderson is still a member of the firm of Hunton, Williams, Anderson, Gay and Moore, Electric Building, Richmond, Virginia.

W. Ross McCain is president of the Aetna Insurance Company, Hartford, Connecticut.

Braden Vandeventer is a member of the law firm of Vandeventer and Black, Citizens Bank Building, Norfolk, Virginia. He reports a great stress in business in Norfolk, due to war activities.

James Mullen is a member of the law firm of Williams, Mullen and Hazelgrove, 1001 East Main Street, Richmond, Virginia.

William P. Ott is head of the department of mathematics, University of Alabama, University, Alabama.

Robert A. Watson is a lawyer and banker in Charlottesville, Virginia.

John M. Corbett resides in Bay City, Texas, where he has practiced law for nearly forty years.

He is married to Nancy Duncan Corbett, and they have three children: Duncan, who studied geology and practiced athletics at Washington and Lee for two years, and subsequently graduated in geology at the University of Texas. Later Duncan studied law and is now employed by Humble Oil & Refining Company; Kitty King, who married Ben Powell, Jr., a VMI boy who is now located at Washington as First Lieutenant in the army; and Gibbons, who recently graduated at Princeton in Geological Engineering, and is now doing post graduate work at Leland Stanford University.

Volney M. Brown notes that this fall will make forty-three years since he first set foot on the Washington and Lee campus. He took his law course at the Uni­ ersity of Texas graduating in June, 1902, and has been actively engaged in the practice of law in El Paso, Texas, since that time. He has not been back to Lexington since 1913, but occasionally he meets some of the old boys—recently, Major John McClure, who is teaching in the New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell, New Mexico.

J. Wood Glass, who is practicing law in Nowata, Oklahoma, says that on a recent trip he stopped in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and was pleased to meet his classmate, M. A. Breckenridge. He says: "During my recent absence, the office force has been 'cleaning house,' and my stenographer has just brought me a basket filled with old note books containing my notes on lectures during the 1900-1902 campaign at Washington and Lee. Among these books I have found the program for Finals Washington and Lee University—Non In Cautus Futuri—June 14 to 18th, 1902. On a faded page devoted to the roster of the Academic Class, I find in old English the name of 'Elbert W. G. Boogher, Secretary.' The perfect condition of the full leather binding attests its genuineness, and the parchment pages are in perfect condition." (Elbert W. G. Boogher is Class Agent for 1902).

Judge Scott M. Loftin is a member of the law firm of Loftin, Calkins and Anderson, Graham Building, Jacksonville, Florida.

Alexander D. Hamilton is a lawyer in Peters­ bury, Virginia. He has been practicing law in Petersburg for forty years, and his son has been practicing law there for eleven years. Mr. Hamilton has three daughters and two sons, seven grandsons and two granddaughters.

1903

R. T. Flanary is president of the Norton Hardware Company, Norton, Virginia. On the side, he is a cattle farmer and banker.

Samuel McP. Glasgow has been pastor of the old Independent Presbyterian Church in Savannah, Georgia for the past ten years.

B. F. Combs is continuing the practice of law in Pres­ tonsburg, Kentucky.

George E. ("Gee") Haw has, since leaving Washington and Lee, practiced law in Richmond, Virginia, first as a partner of his father, George P. Haw, law '67, and since his death, by himself with a couple of associates.
He has always been intensely interested in and helpful in University affairs. His son, George E., Jr., is in his second year at Washington and Lee.

E. W. Poindexter is a member of the law firm of Poindexter and Poindexter, Shenandoah Life Building, Roanoke, Virginia. He served for two terms as class agent for '04 and appreciates the difficulties under which his agent is laboring.

William O. Wilson is president of The Davenport
Insurance Corporation, Managers and Brokers, 113-15
East Main Street, Richmond, Virginia.

Leroy Thompson, D.D., Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Roswell, New Mexico, is an A. B. of '04 and received his honorary degree from the University in 1936. He has been in Roswell for fourteen years, and chaplain in the reserve corps of the United States Army since 1925. For the past eight years, as a kind of hobby, he has been probation officer of the Roswell juvenile court.

1906

Sam L. Peery's work as a civil engineer carried him to the Pacific Coast after he left Washington and Lee.
He spent the greater part of the intervening time in Illinois. Since 1933 he has been connected with the National Park Service in the capacity of Park Engineer. His address is P. O. Box 605, Marion, Virginia.

Henry C. Tellman is practicing law in Tampa, Florida, with offices in the First National Bank.

Albert ("Kid") Steves, Jr., is still carrying on as president of the Steves Sash and Door Company, San Antonio, Texas. His youngest son, Marshall, is a sophomore at Washington and Lee.

By Donald W. McCluer, Class Agent

Colonel H. W. Miller, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan, "I served at the University of Illinois from 1909-1917, first as head of the Department of General Engineering Drawing, and then as both the head of that department and as assistant dean of the college of Engineering. As a Lieutenant in the National Guard I was engaged in the fiasco, or perhaps mobilization of the Army in Texas in 1916, and then in 1917 became an officer in Ordnance. I served two years overseas, finally becoming the Chief of Engineers for the heavy artillery of the Expeditionary Forces. And I served a year on my return as Assistant to the Chief of the Artillery Division of the Ordnance Department. At that time I began writing a series of six books that I have prepared on artillery for the Army Schools of the United States. I am still writing them. In 1920 and 21, I served as Engineer for the Baltimore Smelting and Rolling Company, and then came to the University of Michigan where I have been now for nineteen years. During all this time I have continued my association with the Army as a Consulting Engineer on the designing of artillery and my Army status now is Colonel of Ordnance and Chief of the Heavy Artillery Section of the Technical Staff into which position I may find myself called on an active status without any notice. It is more than pleasant living in Ann Arbor, because it is one of the most delightful cities that I have ever encountered... I still do not know where W. E. Jones and Griffith are, and I wish somebody would write and tell me.”

John S. Moore, U. S. Department of the Interior Bureau of Reclamation, 450 Holly Street, Denver, Colorado. “Your previous communication got lost in the shuffle incidental to my transfer to Denver shortly before the first of the year after a period of over 32 years on the project, the last ten years being in the capacity as superintendent. The position here covers a broader field, although still connected with the Bureau of Irrigation. I am leaving tomorrow for Washington, D. C., to go through the formalities of assuming new and added duties and responsibilities connected with the operation and administration of all completed projects under the jurisdiction of the Bureau in the seventeen Western States. My headquarters, however, will continue to be in Denver.”

Thomas F. Opie: “For the past ten years I have been laboring in the diocese of Washington and my address is 2401 Calvert St., N.W., that city. Having had three small (Episcopal) churches in the rural section of Maryland, I have called myself literally a “Trinitarian.” For over twenty-five years I have been in the ministry, having given up a city editor’s desk for the cloth. My ministry has been chock full of interest, and my motto has been, “For God and Humanity.” If any member of the class of ’07 (or any one else whose eyes may scan these lines) can frame a more useful or more comprehensive motto in so few words I would like to hear from him. During the ministry, I have not entirely surrendered the pen, as I have been Washington correspondent for four church papers and have kept up my writing, on all sorts of subjects, serious and humorous. A Canadian, seeing an article of mine on Suicides wrote me that he judged I was an Undertaker. Well, I am just that!—a fellow who will tackle or ‘undertake’ anything that falls in the catagory: For God and Humanity.”

Julian S. Gravely has resigned his position as Manufacturing Manager of the Crown Cap Division of Continental Can Company and is now working for the Western Cartridge Company, the same line of work in which he started twenty-four years ago. His address is now 607 Summit Street, Alton, Illinois.

John M. Bierer lives at 98 Collins Road, Waban, Massachusetts. Jack, his oldest son, who graduated from Washington and Lee in 1937, is now in the army in Arkansas. His youngest son, James, who graduated from Washington and Lee in 1940, was at the Harvard Business School last April and expected to be in the army in July.

Wm. F. Riser lives in Agujita Coah, Mexico. He suggests that each class start an old age benefit fund for its members, the last surviving to take all, provided Hitler doesn’t beat him to it.

Don Boyer is teaching school in Richmond, Virginia. His only child, Donald, Jr., is now on the faculty of the infantry school, Fort Benning, Georgia.

Robert S. Keebler is still with S. E. C. as attorney in the Public Utilities Division. He lives at 212 Raymond Street, Chevy Chase, Maryland. His family consists of four children. His oldest, Anne, graduated from Randolph-Macon Womans College, Lynchburg, last June, and his son will enter college this fall, probably The University of Maryland.

G. C. Gabriel is Minister of the Evangelical Church, 109 South Sixth Street, Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.

Grover A. Batten was still practicing medicine in Honolulu, Hawaii, at 735 Bishop Street, when his class letter was written last spring.

Bob Arnold is Judge of the Third Judicial Circuit of Virginia, and lives at Waverly, Virginia. He has a busy circuit—four counties and the City of Hopewell.

W. G. Long and W. G. Long, Jr., are practicing law at Paul’s Valley, Oklahoma. W. G. Long, Sr., enjoys being back in practice after sixteen years on the bench as trial judge. W. G., Long, Jr., is married and has two fine boys, one six years old and the other three.

Ernest L. Beale is practicing law in Franklin, Virginia. He has three sons, one of whom received his A.B. and LL.B. at Washington and Lee, and is now with the F. B. I., located in New York State. He has a daughter who has graduated from the Florida State College for Women at Tallahassee and a son who is now a freshman at the Law School of the University of Florida at Gainesville.

Philip Williams is practicing law in Woodstock, Virginia. His son, Philip, Jr., took his M.A. at Washington and Lee at Finals, 1941. Mr. Williams also has a son who was in the fourth class at VMI this year and will go on to Annapolis, where he has an appointment; and two daughters, Margaret and Sarah Bird, who will be in college next year.

Omer T. Taylor is practicing law in Hagerstown, Maryland. His son, Omer T., Jr., is a freshman this year at Washington and Lee.

James Brian Bell, is Chief of Bureau, the Associated Press, Washington, D. C. His son, Brian, Jr., hopes to be a member of the Class of 1948.

L. L. Humphreys is president of the Security National Bank, Duncan, Oklahoma. He reports that things are looking better in "the short grass country."

John G. Herndon is a professor at Haverford College, Haverford, Pennsylvania. His son, Richard, graduated from Washington and Lee in June, Phi Beta Kappa, magna cum laude.

Fred P. Guthrie is district communications manager, R. C. A. Communications, Inc., 112 Connecticut Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C. His oldest son graduated from Washington and Lee with the Class of 1940 and is now at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, where he won a scholarship.

Robert A. Russell is practicing law in Rustburg, Virginia.

James O. Day is Assistant United States Attorney for the northern district of Mississippi. He also has farming interests.

Byron L. Ballard, since the first of January, 1941, has been acting as Legal Adviser to Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner of Michigan. He was largely instrumental in the peace formula which provided the basis for the final settlement of the Ford Strike. His son entered the freshman class at Washington and Lee in September. Mr. Ballard is one of the directors of the Michigan National Bank.

James C. Pickens is still with the Southern Railway Company, 15th and K Streets, Washington, D. C. He says he is now an "operating man."

Dr. W. N. Hodgkin of Warrenton, Virginia, was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Science by the Medical College of Virginia at their commencement exercises in June.
