WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY

FOUNDED, 1749, AS AUGUSTA ACADEMY, NEAR GREENVILLE; REESTABLISHED AT TIMBER RIDGE, MAY, 1776, AS LIBERTY HALL ACADEMY; MOVED TO LEXINGTON AND CHARTERED AS A COLLEGE, 1782; ENDOWED BY GEORGE WASHINGTON, 1796, AND NAMED FOR HIM. UNDER PRESIDENCY, 1865-1870, OF ROBERT E. LEE (BURIED IN THE UNIVERSITY CHAPEL), WHOSE NAME AFTER DEATH WAS INCORPORATED IN THE OFFICIAL TITLE.
Historic Shirt-Tearing

“I am tearing my shirt,” wrote Major Henry Lee Higginson to his friend, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, in 1901, “to get a few remaining dollars—for Washington and Lee University.”

* * * * *

Now Major Higginson was indeed a proper Bostonian, scion of a great abolitionist line, founder of the Boston Symphony, treasurer of the Harvard Corporation.

His shirt-tearing was as effectual as it was fervent. He raised more than a few dollars. The group that responded to his appeal was remarkable, including Grover Cleveland, Harvard University (well, the Major gave some of his money in the name of his Alma Mater), George Washington Carver ($5—but no small gift at that from the Tuskegee scientist), and many other men of nation-wide prominence.

* * * * *

The episode of the dear Major’s shirt-tearing brings to mind—if that were the point of these scattered items—this fact: Washington and Lee men have cause to be grateful to many individuals who were non-alumni, who owed no actual obligation to this institution, yet elected it as the agency of their dedicated generosity, of their hope to influence helpfully all the future.

* * * * *

Washington was of this fellowship as was John Robinson and as were the officers of the Society of the Cincinnati in Virginia; in the same category were those immortals who came to the aid of Robert E. Lee—McCormick and Corcoran, Peabody and Newcomb, Scott, and all the others of that dramatic chapter; and still the honor roll grows with the years—Doremus and Payne and Mrs. Menkemeller, and all their fellows. The largest donor among living friends is a non-alumnus. It is all part of the inspiring story that makes the chronicle of Washington and Lee.

* * * * *

Back to my theme: In the present effort to raise funds, the supreme single effort of the University’s history, we acknowledge with happy and humble gratitude the beneficence of many who are not on the alumni rolls, and we confess with deep appreciation the heartening testimony of our own alumni who have given money and thought and time and the compulsions of their sweet influence, all for their own Alma Mater. To them go our thanks, warm, sincere, eternal.

* * * * *

Immediately this is the thought; are there not some alumni yet willing to tear their shirts to get “a few remaining dollars?”

* * * * *

Beyond this campaign there are immense opportunities. Here’s an example. We received on October 15 a bequest that has in it elements of the unique. It sprang originally from the estate of Colonel A. K. McClure of Philadelphia. His interest was enlisted in a meeting of friends and alumni in his home town in 1876. He died in 1916, aged 88; his wife died much later at the age of 101; the money then passed through a sister’s hands, if we have the facts right—and came to us three score and ten years after the original purpose was made.

* * * * *

Receiving that bequest with thankful hearts, we know that we reaped where some alumnus or friend had sowed in the almost immemorial past.

* * * * *

Among alumni and friends we must have many who will yet tear a good shirt for Alma Mater—or plant seeds that will bear a blessed harvest in some yet undetermined year.

* * * * *

And this point with no reference to our petition: Please bear in mind the great national celebration and alumni reunion, June 16-18, 1949. We shall be happy and encouraged by your coming, and we shall have a story to tell of your generosity; but principally we shall re-consecrate the University of your heart to the ideals which have sustained it in the past, which justify it for the future.

President

Chief Justice Opens Bicentennial Year

The Honorable Fred M. Vinson, Chief Justice of the United States, opened the Bicentennial Year at a convocation September 17 in Doremus Gymnasium. More than 100 Bicentennial officials and alumni leaders and their wives were present.

Represented among the guests who came to attend the opening exercises and plan for the events of the year were some 50 regional Bicentennial chairmen representing 14 states, members of the national Bicentennial committee, the committee of non-alumni sponsors, trustees of the University, and members of the board of the Alumni, Inc.

Washington and Lee law graduates from Virginia and neighboring states attended the convocation and a luncheon which followed. H. Graham Morison, '32, assistant attorney general of the United States, addressed the luncheon group.

The Chairmen's Day program opened with a coffee hour, when Dr. and Mrs. Gaines were hosts to the group at an informal gathering at their home preceding the convocation.

At noon the academic procession entered Doremus Gymnasium, where the Chief Justice made a scholarly address which traced the connection between Washington and Lee, as representative of the colonial institutions of learning, and the doctrines which are the basis of American constitutional government.
The Alumni Magazine, Washington and Lee University

While the men gathered at the Robert E. Lee hotel to hear Mr. Morison, the ladies were guests at a luncheon at the Dutch Inn.

During the afternoon, alumni officials, trustees and chairmen met in the Browsing Room of McCormick Library to plan the concluding months of the Bicentennial Fund Campaign. Christopher T. Chenery, '09, executive chairman, presided.

Mr. Chenery, Col. Milton B. Rogers, '17, and John W. Drye, '20, members of the national committee, were hosts to the group at a sunset party at the Natural Bridge Hotel, which was followed by a smorgasbord supper. Homer A. Holt, '25, presided, and President Gaines spoke.

From the Opening Address
By Chief Justice Vinson

"The Bicentennial Year we here today celebrate is a national, as well as a local, event. ... This institution was here to serve the nation before there was a nation to be served. Its span of life begins earlier than, and runs along with, the span of national life.

"Already two centuries ago the people of the Virginia valleys had shown an alertness to what lay ahead. ... The English had brought with them an urge to get about in the world; the Scots, equally good at a horse-trade, had brought from the homeland a belief in the sheer magic of learning. Then, as now, they formed an industrious, conservative and disturbing element in the community. Their sons became parsons, school-teachers and editors—the Scots, especially the so-called Scotch-Irish, would always rather talk than write; and they went in for such things as church-discipline, printing presses, a lot of dissent, and academies. And so, as soon as—or even before—the vicinage needed it, Augusta Academy opened its doors, and offered as good an education as any to be had along the frontier. The event is the more significant because, in that then western land, among the forward looking folk, a number of others of like kind were arising.

"It was after—and I am disposed to say because of—the establishment of this academy and the environment which produced it, that society was shaken to its foundations. It all came about through an awakening of the common people and a liberation of the minds of men, of which the early colonial venture was a part. The spirit of the colonies was fused with—and gave dominance to—European streams of thought; and out of the fusion was born a new world.

"The signers of the Declaration of Independence became citizens of their several sovereign states and almost American citizens. I say "almost" advisedly, for their first allegiance was to their several states; it could not be a country, which under the Continental Congress, was not yet quite a nation. Such a loyalty had to await a more perfect union; and that in turn depended upon a newer and more fundamental instrument. An academy was not enough for the new republic; it had to change and grow in the country it served. My mind easily associates the transformation of Augusta Academy, first into Washington Academy, and later into Washington and Lee University, with the formation of our Constitution.

For the person who first gave his name to this college presided over the Convention which framed the Constitution. His greatest gift was his executive ability. He insisted upon having about him a group of strong men who differed widely among themselves. It was his superb ability to secure from them a result which no one of them could have effected, yet all were willing to accept.

"The Constitution organizes a government, serves the necessities of a national community, guards the liberties of the people. It evolved out of the thought and experience of the past; it makes provision for the future; it is adapted to the society it is called upon to serve. If it was “struck off” in a single summer, its content had been long in the making. Though it takes the form of a document, many quills were dipped into many ink-horns before its words were fixed.... The content makes it the most remarkable of documents, but the ideas were forged in the crucible of time and hammered into shape by a process of deliberation amongst very able, intelligent and patriotic men.

“As the operations of government were guarded against special interests, so were they secured against passing currents of opinion. In much the same way, pains were taken—I use the word literally—to banish from all departments the arbitrary, and to insure by every department the responsible use of its power. It has become the fashion of late to shrug shoulders at the doctrine of ‘separation of powers;’ and Mr. Justice Holmes is quite right in insisting that ‘the great ordinances of the Constitution do not create fields of black and white.’ And it must be admitted that, in days like ours, with a necessary use of many administrative agencies, the severity of old must be relaxed. None the less, the separation of government into the executive, the legislative and the judiciary—an independent judiciary—is to be numbered among the greatest of political inventions. It marks almost a revolutionary step forward in the realization of a government which is truly responsible.

“Our Constitution... was given to a new republic, yet it is today the oldest Constitution in the world. It could no more have been produced by the stroke of a pen than could the common law, or the Magna Carta. Had it been the mere product of an occasion, it would long since have passed into the discard. Here I have spoken of the wisdom, intelligence, precedent of the small group who framed the instrument. But I insist that they shaped the future from the enduring experiences and history of the ages.

“If we could understand all the impacts which have transformed an Augusta Academy into the Washington and Lee of today, we would understand everything, or at least all that our finite minds can embrace. For the purpose of the Constitution, and of institutions such as this, without whose support it could never be a living thing, has been, is, and ever will be ‘to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure Domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.’”

FROM THE ADDRESS BY GRAHAM MORISON:

“Each alumnus of Washington and Lee can say to himself: ‘I have rubbed elbows with a great tradition; perhaps a little of it has rubbed off on me.’ This tradition is not a dying one. In fact, the only hope for this world today is in men of influence who are rooted in just such a tradition.

“It has been said that the things of the spirit are the only eternal verities. The Washington and Lee tradition is that sort of a spiritual value. There is nothing greater to which we can dedicate ourselves than to the perpetuation of this tradition.”

 contends to the Bicentennial Fund exceeded $1,200,000 in late November, and the campaign will reach a climax during December, Dr. J. L. Desha, ’06, executive director of the Bicentennial, announced this week.

“Our chairmen and committee workers are making an all-out effort during the first two weeks of this month,” he said.

We are still more than $200,000 short of the amount necessary to claim the final $100,000 offered by the General Education Board. We cannot afford to let Washington and Lee lose a dollar of this Rockefeller money through failure to capitalize on this offer before the end of the year.”

Dr. Desha emphasized that only cash received by the University, prior to December 31st and earmarked for endowment or scholarships, is eligible for the additional 25 percent added by the General Education Board.

Luce, Freeman and Dodds Are Assembly Speakers

Henry R. Luce, publisher of Time, Life and Fortune magazines, and Douglas S. Freeman, biographer of Lee and of Washington, are the latest additions to the list of nationally famous personages who will appear on the campus during the year-long series of Bicentennial events.

Mr. Luce, a Yale graduate, will address the annual Omicron Delta Kappa assembly December 10. Students active in extra-curricular affairs and a group of alumni and non-alumni prominent in the business, professional and civic life of their states will be initiated into the Alpha chapter of the national leadership fraternity.

Dr. Freeman, Richmond editor and honorary Washington and Lee alumnus, who this fall published the first two volumes of his life of George Washington, will speak at the Washington’s Birthday convocation February 22.

Dean D. Elton Trueblood of Earlham College will be the keynote speaker at the University Religious Conference, November 30, which this year is being developed as one of the Bicentennial features.
The Washington-Cincinnati Convocation April 12, will be the occasion of the principal Bicentennial academic exercises. President Harold W. Dodds of Princeton University will be the speaker. Delegates from other universities and colleges will participate, and honorary degrees will be awarded to some eminent scholars. These exercises will coordinate with the opening of the annual Southern University Conference, which meets with Washington and Lee as host, on April 13 and 14.

Dr. Dodds has been invited to speak not only because of his personal distinction, but because of his position as the head of the institution from which Washington and Lee received much of its heritage through the teachers of Augusta and Liberty Hall academies.

John W. Davis, '92, New York attorney, former ambassador of Great Britain, and national Bicentennial chairman, will inaugurate the John Randolph Tucker lectures before the School of Law in early May. This event will coincide with the Centennial observation of the Law School, and alumni who are attorneys will be invited to attend the lectures.

The School of Commerce will sponsor a conference of alumni in connection with the meeting of the Southern Association of Science and Industry here May 1, 2 and 3.

The climax of the Bicentennial Year will come June 16-18, the dates of the National Celebration and Alumni Reunion. Plans and speakers for this occasion and a tentative schedule of events will be announced early in 1949. A committee of alumni representing all sections of the United States and the entire span of classes from 1879 to date has been appointed by Amos Bolen, '34, president of Alumni Incorporated. This committee will consider program suggestions and approve those which will appeal to most returning alumni. A local arrangements committee is already preparing for the record turn-out of alumni expected for the Reunion.

Cy Young, alumni secretary, stressed the fact that accommodations will be available for every alumnus who wishes to return. However, reservations will not be made until a current survey of rooming and eating facilities is complete. This National Celebration is being held after W. and L. students and VMI cadets have left Lexington so that maximum accommodations will be available.

Reservation cards will be mailed to every alumnus on the same date, he said, and booking of rooms will begin immediately afterward. No room reservations will be made prior to that time.

HARRISON KINNEY, B.A., '47
MAKES THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

"The Lonesome Bear," Saturday Evening Post, October 23, 1948, by Harrison Kinney, B.A., '47, Phi Beta Kappa, is a delightfully improbable tale of a seven-year old boy in a little town called Fairfield, Maine, who followed literally his father's oft repeated precept; "We must always be kind to animals, son." The bear made his first appearance at the candy counter set up on two boxes and a board by the small boy and his older brother who furnished "the stuff," presumably pilfered from "Old Man Osgood's" store. Inordinately fond of marshmallows, the bear ensconced himself firmly in the affections of the family, except for the mother and the hired maid who did not like the close association. In addition to his predilection for marshmallows, the bear greatly appreciated the father's talent for singing to the accompaniment of the ukulele, and also liked riding in the back seat of automobiles. The town authorities balked at granting a license for the bear as a family pet, although the father protested that if Teddy Roosevelt were president the matter could be made a national issue. The Sheriff had troubles of his own as bank robberies had occurred in the vicinity and he was expecting them to show up at the Farmers' Trust in Fairfield any night. It is rather a long story, but to shorten it at the expense of leaving out many interesting sidelights, the bear ensconced himself in the back seat of the robbers' car just as they were making their get-away, and spotting the bear in the rearview mirror, they wrecked the car and were captured by the Sheriff. The bear received his share of the bounty for capturing the robbers and a special license as a family pet, enabling him to have an unlimited supply of marshmallows, as well as the respectful toleration of the mother and the maid. Bruin had escaped from a passing circus and his owners were glad to be rid of him as his only show value consisted in riding on the back seat of a car with two clowns in the street parade.

(Harrison Kinney is now doing graduate work in journalism at Columbia University.)

RETIRING JUDGE DALLAS FLANNAGAN HONORED

Judge Dallas Flannagan, '88, of 102 Upper Mountain Avenue, Montclair, New Jersey, was honored by colleagues and friends in ceremonies at the conclusion of twenty-seven years' service to his country and state, on the Common Pleas bench. At the reception were Judges from all branches of New Jersey's then three-day old new legal system. Reminding his former colleagues on the bench that he had become "a mere lawyer" again, Judge Flannagan warned them that they faced long hours of deliberation on interpretation of the new rules and regulations of the new court system.

"Who is going to work on these writings without extra pay?" he asked. "The judges are. The joke is on the judges."

Representing students and alumni of the Law School, Reginald H. Pettus presented to the School on September 2, 1948, a portrait of the late Raymon T. Johnson, member of the law faculty since 1925 until his death on March 25, 1948. Dr. Gaines accepted the portrait on behalf of the University, and Charles Johnson, Sheriff, son of Professor Johnson, was present at the ceremonies. The artist, Miss Burdette, of Washington, D. C., has done many copies and portraits from life now hanging at the University.
Opening of the 200th Session

As Washington and Lee University opened its bicentenary session this fall it was clearly evident that the trend is toward normal conditions in most phases of college activity.

Breakdowns of enrollment figures released by Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam show a sharp drop in attendance of veteran students in academic classes, and particularly among the freshman group.

While in 1947 there were 654 W. and L. academic students with wartime military service, today the figure stands at 397. In the entering class, only 35 of 308 freshmen are veterans.

However, in the School of Law, final registration figures indicate that 208 of 233 students are veterans.

Excepting the change in percentage of veterans attending academic classes, Washington and Lee's student body composition shows surprisingly little change from 1947-48. There are 1069 academic students registered in all sections of the University, only slightly off the 1947 enrollment of 1281.

Thus Washington and Lee's enrollment remains swollen, although every effort is planned to reduce the student population to something like the prewar average of 935. However, while the school remains something more than ideally large, recent additions to the faculty have served to practically eliminate a corresponding enlargement of class size.

New appointments effective at the opening of the 1948-49 year have raised the number of faculty and staff members of the university to 85, and include:

Dr. Linton Lomas Barrett, professor of Spanish; Charles W. Williams, assistant professor of mathematics; William J. Cooley, Jr., instructor in German; David Gerard, instructor in English; J. Neville McArthur, instructor in Spanish; Miss Wanda Lee Spears, librarian in the School of Law; Edward P. Whaley, instructor in chemistry; Lieutenant Kenneth C. Runquist, instructor in physical education; Charles O. Voigt, assistant professor of journalism; Dr. Robert C. Krug, assistant professor of chemistry; Edward S. Graves, lecturer in law; and Lloyd J. Lanich, instructor in political science and history.

Dr. Robert K. Krug, assistant professor of chemistry.

In regard to the decrease in veteran enrollment, the University emphatically states that it represents no discrimination against men with military service, but simply means that the majority of veterans who are prepared for college and who might be normal applicants for admission to Washington and Lee's undergraduate school are already in college. The great demand for places in the nation's colleges that still exists, however, has probably resulted in selection of possibly the best prepared group of men from preparatory and high schools that has ever entered W. and L.

This year, the post-war problem of social fraternity membership is also rapidly approaching solution. In 1947 many students who would have joined fraternities in normal times were unable to do so; most of the 17 operating houses on the W. and L. campus were crammed with upper-class members and could not accept large pledge classes.

Proof of the improving situation lies in the fact that only one of every six or eight men who expressed an interest in fraternities this fall were not pledged during the initial "rushing" period in September.

With a 1948 group of freshmen who are younger than any since the war—most of them are directly out of secondary schools—there is a vigor in extra-curricular and academic phases of Washington and Lee life which prophesies an early return to the University's prewar pattern.

With applications for admission to Washington and Lee expected to continue at the present high rate, the situation in September, 1949, will remain critical. Therefore, Alumni should read with special care the following statement concerning the University's admission policy for the 1949-50 session:

"In accord with the general policy of the Board of Trustees, Washington and Lee will move back toward a normal prewar enrollment. This goal will again result in a freshman class of approximately 300. With every mail filled with requests concerning admission, the following procedure has been worked out. Interested applicants are urged to submit their formal application blanks this fall, to permit ample time for the full investigation of all records and references. Supplementary records of grades made during the first semester of the current session will be submitted after 1 February. Around the end of April a tentative selection of the class will be made, with a waiting list established, from which any vacancies through cancellations will be filled. Applicants whose papers are approved in April, pending, of course, the satisfactory completion of the current session's work, will be asked to pay in advance a reasonable proportion of the first semester's tuition, in order to hold a place on the class roll."

Alumni can render a great service to Washington and Lee in seeing that any boys who they feel would make desirable students here are informed as to the current situation. The fullest consideration will be given to the application of any son, relative, or friend of an alumnus, but the final selection must, of course, be on the relative merits of all phases of the applicant's credentials; and all applications must be completed in time to be given consideration in April when the class will be selected.
Student Sons of Alumni

From records available in the Alumni Office, there are 148 sons of alumni; two less than the all-time record of 150 during the 1947-48 session. In listing sons of alumni in the past there has always been at least one, and several times more, whose names were omitted. We hope that no omission has occurred in the following list, if so, we are sorry and hope you will let us have the information. The classes represented by alumni fathers cover a long period, beginning with 1893 and ending with 1931.

Miller for Governor

Francis Pickens Miller, A.B., '14, Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Gamma Delta, announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Virginia subject to the Democratic primary in August, 1949, on July 27, 1948. After graduation here he received the B.A. degree in 1921 and M.A. in 1923 from Oxford University, England, which he attended as a Rhodes Scholar. In World War I he enlisted in the 5th Field Artillery of the First Division, AEF and was at the front in France in November, 1917, with the first American troops, finishing that service as a first lieutenant. In World War II he was overseas in the army for nearly three years, being promoted to full colonel by General Eisenhower while serving on the latter's staff at G-2, SHEAR. After VE Day he was on duty for nearly a year as an intelligence officer at Military Government Headquarters (Berlin).

Prior to World War II Miller was Organization Director of the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City, being responsible for its activities across the country. This Council was organized by Col. House and Gen. Tasker Bliss after there is no loss of "dignity" in this "comic book," which is typical military government in the House of Delegates and was also a member of the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council.

For most of his life Miller has been an executive. As a soldier, an administrator and a state legislator he combines an exceptional experience in public affairs with wide knowledge of the problems of our time.

Having been commanding officer of the 23rd Composite Group, Organized Reserve, he is vice-president of the Reserve Officers' Association, Department of Virginia; a member of the American Legion and of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. His military awards include: Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Order of the British Empire, Legion of Honor (France)—degree of Chevalier, Order of Leopold I with Palm (Belgium)—degree of Officer, Croix de Guerre with two Palms (France) and Croix de Guerre with Palm (Belgium).

His home is in Charlottesville, Virginia.

Young, John Henry, III .................. John H. Young, '19

Deceased
Those newcomers still look good. And the holdovers look good. It's a smart team, a well-coached team. They just didn't get off to a good start.

Game by game here is how the season has gone so far:

Furman: The "Hurricane" boys from Greenville, South Carolina, perennially tough openers, came from behind in the waning minutes of the last quarter to dump the Generals in their home-game debut 10-7.

After Charlie Harrington had bounded over the line for a W. and L. touchdown in the second period, and Walt Michaels added an extra-point kick, easy money gambled on the Generals to coast to victory over Furman, which had only been able to garner a three-point field goal. But a W. and L. fumble near the Generals' goal line donated a scoring cinch to Furman's eleven, which went across to tally and win the battle by the field-goal margin.

Ohio University: Playing for the first time under lights, Washington and Lee controlled the outcome of their second game from the start. The Generals marched up and down the field all evening, though they only scored twice. Harrington again sparked the W. and L. squad, with a brilliant cross-field jaunt to the Ohio 3-yard line in the third period which set up Ray Leister's right-end run for the score. Again in the final quarter Harrington scored, sweeping Ohio's left end from the seven yard line.

Georgia Tech: Nobody really expected Washington and Lee to knock off Georgia Tech, class of the Southeastern Conference, when the Generals traveled to Atlanta October 5. But people were amazed to see the scalpel W. and L. made of the affair. Atlanta's newspaper and radio men were agog at the Generals' unexpected offensive power, even though they dropped the game 27-0.

Virginia: Athletic Director R. A. (Cap'n Dick) Smith, who has watched many football teams in action at Washington and Lee during the past three decades, lays blame for the Generals' ignominious Homecoming Day defeat on pre-game tension. Tension built-up weeks in advance of the scrap. The Generals, many of whom reported they'd had no sleep the night before, worrying about the game they wanted to win so much, couldn't shake themselves into alertness Saturday afternoon, October 16. Ten thousand fans watched University of Virginia's potent Cavaliers march around them, over them, and through them to a smashing 41-6 victory. Only in the last quarter did Washington and Lee display any offensive power, when Harrington bucked across from Virginia's 1-yard stripe, after quarterbacks Mike Boyd a and Ray Leister fired a series of passes to put W. and L. in scoring position.

West Virginia: With the sluggishness out of their collective systems, W. and L.'s gridmen made their annual trek to Charleston October 23 and gave West Virginia's classy eleven a mighty scare before succumbing 14-7.

WVU let at halftime 14-7 and were unable to tally again after intermission, while Washington and Lee came within a hair's breadth of knotting the score. Mike Boyd a's pass to Vic Marler racing downfield within easy reach of the end zone sailed slightly high of its target.

Pennsylvania: The Quakers from University of Pennsylvania were out to prove their rating as the class of the nation when Washington and Lee met them in Philadelphia October 30. They proved their point all right, dropping the Generals 40-7.

Fullback Walt Michaels saved W. and L. from a white-washing in the fourth quarter as he traveled ten yards for a touchdown and then added the extra point.

V.P.I.: Back in their own class, Washington and Lee's Gridmen showed plenty of form in snacking Virginia Tech with a 14-7 defeat at Lynchburg November 6. After the Gobblers had jumped ahead early in the fray, W. and L.'s passing duet—Mike Boyd a and Ray Leister—opened the throttle and put the Generals in scoring territory just before the first-half ended. Leister rounded his right end for the touchdown and Walt Michaels added the point. Washington and Lee broke the 7-7 deadlock just one play before the final whistle, as Brian Bell plunged across for a touchdown capping a 50-yard drive. Michael's extra-point boot was good again to give W. and L. the 14-7 decision.

Against Davidson College November 13, Washington and Lee notched another victory by the margin of one blocked extra-point attempt.

The Generals won 21-20, thanks to tackle Harry Gowens, who stormed the Davidson line to spoil a point-after-touchdown boot after the Wildcats had scored late in the second period.

All of Washington and Lee's extra-point attempts were good, following touchdowns by Harrington (on a pass from Mike Boyd a), Lukens (pass from Boyd a), and Bell.
