COVER AND FRONTISPIECE

(1) Cover—probably the most familiar scene on the campus during the three-day Bicentennial alumni reunion was the circulating of friends and classmates around the tented registration headquarters, erected in front of Doremus Gymnasium as a clearing house for just simply “getting together,” which is what everyone seemed to want to do.

(2) Frontispiece—The reception given by President and Mrs. Francis P. Gaines at their campus home provided a splendid medium for everyone to see everyone else. Originally planned as a garden party, the affair was moved indoors when heavy rains, which prevailed through most of the three-day Bicentennial celebration, turned the grounds into a quagmire. If anyone's spirits were dampened by the weather, it was never apparent. Some said they hadn't noticed it was raining.

Bicentennial Reminiscences

(THE PRESIDENT'S PAGE)

Recalling the program of the Bicentennial Year, I find my heart moved with deep gratitude to the alumni who helped to make that year good, who came to the various occasions and who wrote letters of encouragement. The graciousness of response is the true reward for everything we tried to do.

* * * * *

In this somewhat public but entirely informal way, I ask to be allowed to express my thanks also to hundreds of alumni who were unable to come to any of the functions but sent assurances of interest.

* * * * *

I don't give away any secret, I am sure, when I admit that there was really a tremendous amount of work done by way of preparation. We older officials, of course, had the matter almost constantly in our thoughts. About eight major faculty committees supervised various phases—speakers, assemblies, degrees, local arrangements, and the like. The marshals, under the skillful leadership of Professor Light, took perfect care of every public occasion. The journalism laboratory gave service of the highest quality.

* * * * *

Knowing full well that it is dangerous and probably inaccurate for me to single out anybody at a time when everybody was doing all possible, I shall still venture to give this kind of citation to the group of young administrative assistants—Booth, Buchanan, Brady, Carmichael, the Ravenhorsts (the Mr. and the Miss), Wilson, and others. They worked with such efficiency and with such unfailing cheerfulness and with such generosity of spirit that just the fellowship with them has been an inspiration to us of the older generation.

* * * * *

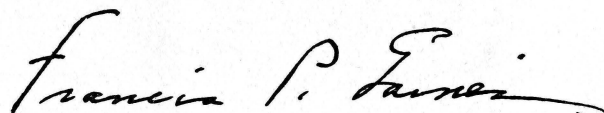

The kindness and the competence of the faculty ladies in their efforts to help is one of the abiding and radiant memories in my own mind. Think, if you will, of Mrs. Gaines trying to plan a lawn party for 3,000 and finding the day drenched with steaming rain. The resourcefulness of the ladies commanded that situation, I believe, about as well as could have been done.

* * * * *

Many alumni have written me and more, I take it, have written Mr. Young, suggesting that at least one feature should be permanent, a kind of five-year plan of reunion to be held always after the University has closed, so that the returning alumni will have all the University facilities and will be, as if to turn back the clock, the only "students" on the campus.

* * * * *

The Bicentennial Year, I am convinced, was worth all the effort. It did good for us in many ways, strengthening our central purpose, which is, of course, the training of these fine young men. An unprecedented number of distinguished speakers came, and numerous conferences were held. The zeal of our boys in their quest for truth was undoubtedly stimulated and given noble direction. The best consequences of all, I should think, is that our own alumni came into fuller understanding of our effort and have made us feel their sympathy and their support.

The Bicentennial Alumni Reunion and National Celebration

An estimated 1500 Washington and Lee alumni from all over the United States and a number of foreign countries attended the Bicentennial celebration, June 16-17-18. With them they brought members of their families and friends that swelled the crowd of visitors to about 2,000. All hotels in Lexington and at Natural Bridge were filled for the occasion and hundreds of the younger alumni were assigned to dormitories and fraternity houses. Rain that came at intervals during Thursday and Friday failed to upset the carrying out of the plans or to dampen the enthusiasm of the guests.

A large circus tent was erected on the lawn in front of Doremus Gymnasium to serve as headquarters and for registration. Here alumni received information as to assigned quarters, badges admitting them to all scheduled events, etc. Thursday evening an informal gathering and jamboree, with refreshments, was held in the tent where alumni and their wives met with classmates and friends of college days. Music for all the festivities was furnished by Darin O'Brien and his orchestra.

William M. McElwee of Lexington, class of 1879, was registered to attend the reunion but was prevented from participating by the death of his sister, Mrs. Henry Miller. The oldest class with a representative present was 1887 with Dr. Edward R. Leyburn, father of Dr. James G. Leyburn, Dean of the University, of Atlanta, registering. The class of 1888 had Capt. Greenlee D. Letcher, Dr. E. P. Tompkins, of Lexington, and Judge James E. Quarles, of Staunton, Virginia. Nearly every class since that date had members present, Charles Curl, '40, from Lima, Peru, and Herbert Dollahite, '32, of Honolulu, probably traveling the greatest distance to be on hand. The 1939 and 1941 classes had the largest groups, but 1924 also had a fine attendance observing its 25th anniversary.

On Friday morning a service of thanksgiving and prayer was held in Lee Chapel, conducted by Dr. John N. Thomas, D.D., class of 1924, of Richmond, member of the University Board of Trustees.

A highlight of the program was the alumni meeting in Doremus gymnasium at 11 o'clock. Alumni were seated by classes, indicated by large banners, and the floor of the gaily decorated room resembled a convention hall. The number of older alumni returning was surprising with classes about the turn of the century well represented.

The General Alumni Meeting was followed by a barbecue which was to have been held on the front campus to which alumni were to have marched by classes. Rain interrupted this procedure but the event was successfully held in the large registration tent.

At 2:30 a transcription of the highlights of the Bicentennial academic ceremonies on April 12th was played in Lee Chapel. These events were recorded by the Journalism Department on its electronic tape recorder.

From 5 to 6 p.m. all the visitors were entertained at a reception at the home of President and Mrs. Gaines. In the evening the alumni dance was led by Alumni Secretary H. K. Young with Miss Mary Monroe Penick of Lexington and by incoming Alumni president, Warren E. Tilson and Mrs. Tilson.

Celebration of the 200th birthday of the University was concluded on Saturday, June 18th when, before the largest assembly of alumni and friends in its history, it bestowed honorary degrees upon ten men distinguished in politics, education, medicine and the ministry. The principal speaker of the occasion was former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, who was given the degree of doctor of laws.

Doremus Gymnasium, decorated with the Washington and Lee colors and monogram shields, was filled beyond capacity, with many standing in the corridors and outside the entrance doors. The rain which had plagued the alumni the day before had ended and a bright summer sun shone on the visitors and on the colorful academic procession from Washington Hall to the gymnasium.

Byrnes, once one of the most powerful New Dealers, took the occasion to deliver a broadside at the present administration policies. He advocated expenditures for foreign aid, but criticized spending on all proposals pulling this country toward statism. He stated that a sound economy is our government's first line of defense.

He said "too many people are trying to transfer power to the government . . . We are not transferring too much power from the individuals to the government, but we are transferring too many powers of state governments to the federal government. We should not have the federal government regimenting our lives from the cradle to the grave," he stated.

"Where we will wind up, no one can tell," he said, "but if some of the new programs seriously proposed should be adopted there is danger that the individual, whether farmer, worker, manufacturer, lawyer, or doctor, soon will be an economic slave pulling an oar in the galley of the state."

Byrnes devoted most of his address to foreign affairs, praising the firm stand taken toward Russia by the American representatives at the Big Four conference in Paris.

He warned the Soviets that their present tactics might lead to a rebirth of German militarism and that a revived Germany might turn on Russia.

Other recipients of the Bicentennial honors were:

Doctor of Arts: Marion Montague Junkin, class of 1927, Korean-born Southern artist, who has just resigned as head of the department of fine arts at Vanderbilt University to accept a similar post at Washington and Lee in September.

Doctor of Letters: Thomas Joseph Sugrue, '29, literary critic and author of "Such Is the Kingdom," "There Is a River," "Starling of the White House," and "Stranger in the Earth."

Doctor of Science: Abner McGhee Harvey, '30, physician-in-chief of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, and professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins University.

Doctor of Divinity: William Taliaferro Thompson, of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond.

Doctors of Laws: Colgate Whitehead Darden, Jr., president of the University of Virginia; Arthur Williamson McCain, '14, former president, now vice-chairman of the board,

As Byrnes was receiving the academic hood significant of the LL.D. degree, his lifelong friend and fellow South Carolinian, W. and L. President Francis P. Gaines, read an accompanying citation:

“Of the multitude and magnificence of your contributions to American life and the hope of the world, there is almost no end; through manifold doors you entered the domain of public life, alike for the moment of ultimate turbulence and for the hours of deep reflection, ever faithful, ever clear of mind, ever clean of heart, lifted by your nobility of purpose high above flattery, protected by your innate sweetness of soul from all bitterness; the history of your country will bear you enduring tribute.”

In the presentations of the candidates for degrees, Dean James G. Leyburn departed occasionally from the usual solemnity and his touches of humor brought delighted applause from the audience.

In humorous recognition of the present gubernatorial campaign in Virginia, the gathering laughed heartily as Dean Leyburn ended his brief review of Governor William M. Tuck's accomplishments with these words: “he has soared with the ‘birds’ in his career as public servant of the state.”

Three of the recipients of the honorary degrees are claimed by Lexington, Senator A. Willis Robertson, General Richard Jacquelin Marshall, and Marion Montague Junkin.

Dr. Gaines' citation as Senator Robertson received his hood was as follows: “Vested by your people's confidence with great authority, you have interpreted every triumph in political contest as a mandate for hard study, for honest analysis of effort in behalf of the highest cause; large privi-

Introduced by Dean Leyburn as "a warm friend and generous neighbor of the University," General Marshall was cited by Dr. Gaines as follows: "To desperate councils of war you gave wisdom and sweet gentleness of persuasion that became a significant part of the chronicles of American destiny; now to the engaging task of developing young minds and the devotions of patriotic conviction you bring the same deep understanding, the same winsomeness of guidance, with utter fidelity alike to the luminous ideal and to the commonplace routine; and to your sister school you offer a friendliness that increases the value of our work and the happiness of our days."

Of Marion Montague Junkin, Dr. Leyburn's introduction said: "son of Washington and Lee, scion of families more than two-score of whose members have studied here and served this community," Dr. Gaines said: "master of pictorial

The invocation was given by the Rev. William Taliaferro Thompson of the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, who was a recipient of the degree of doctor of divinity.

The Bicentennial commissioners and sponsors were introduced by Charles P. Light, Jr., marshal of the University as follows: Hon. Harry F. Byrd, Hon. W. Chapman Revercomb, Hon. A. Minutes of General Alumni Meeting

June 17, 1949, 11 a.m., Doremus Gymnasium

I. The meeting was called to order by Amos A. Bolen, '34, president of the Alumni Association. This Bicentennial Year for the University also marked the 109th birthday of the Alumni Association. The gymnasium was attractively decorated for the occasion and the alumni were seated by classes. Ladies were invited to attend the meeting and they watched the proceedings from the balcony.

II. Dr. Gaines greeted the alumni. An impressive ceremony followed as he awarded to four retired professors citations and "affectionate greetings from their former students in recognition of their collective service of 172 years of teaching young men. The honorees were James Lewis Howe, professor emeritus of chemistry; Robert Henry Tucker, retired dean of the University and former professor of economics; Livingston Waddell Smith, professor emeritus of mathematics; and Glover Dunn Hancock, whose retirement as dean of the School of Commerce was announced last week.

III. Mr. Bolen introduced Christopher T. Chenery, '09, of New York, executive chairman of the national Bicentennial organization, who presented to Dr. Gaines a scroll listing names of donors to the Bicentennial fund campaign. Entitled "Builders of a Third Century," the scroll contains the names of 3424 alumni and 787 other friends of the University who have made gifts to the 200th anniversary fund (which now totals $1,680,000.). Dr. Gaines in accepting the scroll gave his thanks to all who made contributions.

IV. Highlighting the meeting was an address by President Gaines to the Washington and Lee men who came from around the globe to celebrate their alma mater's 200th birthday. The audience cheered when Dr. Gaines registered opposition to federal aid to education in any form. He deplored an attitude of "letting the federal government pay the bills and letting the federal government have the control," and warned that "the most dangerous of all is the concept of education as a function of the federal government." President Gaines cited the House un-American Activities Committee's current inquiry into the selection of college textbooks as "an example of what federal control can mean to education." He said he did not lack respect for Congress and that he commended them for their efforts in handling political matters. "But can you imagine, for example," he asked, "a group of erudite congressmen telling us what books our professors may use in the teaching of our courses in comparative literature and social anthropology?" In his closing remarks, Dr. Gaines spoke of the devotion of George Washington to American ideals and of the character of Robert E. Lee, loving justice and appearing humbly before his God. He said that Washington and Lee acknowledges its heritage, even while it dreams of its future.

V. Mr. Bolen said he spoke for all the alumni when he acknowledged appreciation for the leadership and effort given by Milton B. Rogers, '17, and L. J. Desha, '06, in directing the Bicentennial campaign. These men were introduced to the assembled group and spoke briefly.

VI. Mr. Bolen introduced the new football coach, George Barclay, who also spoke briefly to the alumni group.

VII. Marshal for the planned alumni parade by classes, William M. Hinton, '30, announced that the parade had to be cancelled because of the weather. However, the barbecue would follow the close of the meeting at 1 o'clock under the tent in front of the gymnasium.

VIII. H. K. Young, Alumni Secretary, made the following announcements:

1. Group pictures would be made after the meeting.
2. The new Boat House at Balcony Falls would be open for inspection between 3:30 and 5:30 p.m. this afternoon.
3. There would be a meeting of all members of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity at the chapter house at 3:00 p.m.
4. Alumni from "far away places" were requested to gather for a group picture after the meeting.

The Bicentennial Finals

The Bicentennial Finals was inaugurated with the Baccalaureate sermon to graduates in Lee Chapel on Sunday, June 5, with the sermon by The Reverend John H. Buchanan, Pastor, Southside Baptist Church, Birmingham, Alabama.

The interfraternity dance on Wednesday night, June 8, was led by Paul J. B. Murphy, Jr., president of the Interfraternity Council, with Miss Donna Davis, and the final ball, on the night of June 9, by Finals President, Dale Johnson, with Miss Evelyn Woods of Charlotte, North Carolina.

Preceding the Final ball, President and Mrs. Gaines were hosts at a formal reception at their home, honoring the graduates and their out-of-town guests.

One of Washington and Lee's oldest and most colorful Finals Week traditions was renewed on Thursday afternoon when the rival Harry Lee and Albert Sidney Boat Clubs hauled out their eight-oared shells for a match race on the James River at Balcony Falls, the Albert Sidneys winning the race by a narrow margin.

The two W. and L. boating organizations, which included members of the varsity and freshman crews, have been competing against each other annually since 1874 for possession of a handsome old silver loving cup.

Two hundred and seventeen students received diplomas Friday morning, June 10, at Washington and Lee's Bicentennial commencement at the hands of President Francis P. Gaines. With the 55 who graduated during the year in the accelerated program which is now at an end, the class of 1949 numbered 272, the largest ever to be turned out by the University.

Following the tradition of recent years by choice of the students, Dr. Gaines himself made the address to graduates. He told them that Americans were the healthiest, the richest and the longest lived people in the world, but not the happiest. Commingling as his rare gift permits him to do, the light with the serious, Dr. Gaines pointed out that the only true road to happiness was in self forgetfulness. That he said, could be considered General Lee's last message to his students.

There are three principles to which all religions, he said, could subscribe: first, that there is a God who is the supreme creator; second, that God judges motives rather than actions; and third, that a man must do for others rather than himself.

"Wise men pondered the detailed program of your development," he said, "and learned personalities, energized by devotion to truth and to you, have poured through many channels the accumulated riches of the human experience.

"Validation of that faith is certain if the test be your attainment in the power and the wealth, if the fruitage of that investment is to be measured in terms of material comfort, superficial complacency.

"But the whole project is a grotesque failure, if we have not led you to understand that your real importance is that you are a child of God, made in his image, responsible to Him; that the privileges which make possible your triumphing career are, as proclaimed by our Declaration of Independence, not inherent rights selfishly to be claimed and enjoyed but endowments of the Creator, bits of trusteeship for the infinite; that the final responsibility and the final deserving of opportunity are fulfilled in cleanness of motive and in concern for the less fortunate.

"In such an education alone is your chance for final happiness, and in such education is the world's only hope."

Heading the Congressional delegation at the convocation were Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, who are shown here being introduced to Washington and Lee men from all over the world.

Robert E. Lee, IV, becomes a "49'er," a member of the Bicentennial graduating class as he receives his Bachelor of Science degree from President Gaines.

Class valedictorian was Matthew W. Paxton, Jr., of Lexington. He spoke of the Bicentennial era which had set his class apart, and of the past war era now coming to a close. Whereas over 1000 of the 1300 students in 1946-47 were veterans, only 365 out of 1200 next year will have seen service in the war, and only 165 of these will be undergraduates.

He spoke also of a new academic era which this class has seen inaugurated under the guidance of Dean James G. Leyburn, with a broadening of the study of the humanities and the institution of a new department of fine arts and more elective courses. The Washington and Lee graduate, he said, would not consider himself as finished with education, but would go on after graduation to pursue the keen pleasure of acquiring and using knowledge.

Among the graduates was Robert E. Lee, IV, great grandson of General Robert E. Lee and son of Mrs. George Bolling Lee and the late Dr. Lee of New York. As a combat infantryman in World War II he was decorated for service in the European theatre.

The exercises were held on the campus in front of Lee Chapel where a natural amphitheatre is provided, shaded by the overhanging trees. Here President Gaines announced the honors and handed out the diplomas. The ceremony was opened with the invocation by Dr. W. W. Morton and closed with the singing of "College Friendships."

DR. J. G. LEYBURN IS DECORATED BY HAITIAN REPUBLIC

The rank of Officer of the National Order of Honor and Merit has been bestowed on James G. Leyburn, dean of Washington and Lee University, by the President of Haiti in recognition of notable contributions to the Haitian Republic.

A citation and medal which accompany the award have been received by Dr. Leyburn from the Haitian Ambassador to the United States, Joseph D. Charles. The order represents one of the highest honors that can be conferred upon a foreigner by the government of Haiti.

Dr. Leyburn's association with Haiti has been largely in the field of social studies. His book, "The Haitian People," published in 1941, won the John Anisfield Memorial Prize for the year's best work in racial relations. He has served the government and people of Haiti in varied capacities and is currently on a committee of sponsors chosen by the Republic of Haiti for a prize essay contest on "The Contributions of Haiti to the Independence of American Republics, 1776-1826."

IRWIN SANDERS, '29, AUTHOR OF BOOK

Irwin T. Sanders, B.A., '29, Phi Beta Kappa, is the author of "Balkan Village," published by the University of Kentucky Press, Lexington, Kentucky, 1949. Dragalevtsy, the Balkan Village described by Mr. Sanders, brings into focus the struggle now in that country where an irresistible force is meeting an immovable impact. The bulk of the book details the ways of life of a tranquil rural folk clinging to a Bulgarian mountainside, in the shadow of a twelfth century monastery—their history, economic system, courtship and marriage customs, patriarchal family life, and reluctant yielding to the ways of the western world. Then came the war, the Nazi "New Order," and defeat. On the morning of September 6, 1944, Dragalevtsy awoke to find posters in the streets proclaiming "Welcome to the Heroic Red Army" and "Long Live Stalin."

Mr. Sanders, now Professor of Sociology at the University of Kentucky, writes with the authority of scholarship and intimacy. From 1929 to 1932 and again in 1934 to 1937 he taught in the American College of Sofia and made almost daily trips to the nearby village. In 1945-1946 he was again in the area as an Agricultural Attache representing the State Department.

Mr. Sanders has sent a copy of "Balkan Village" to the Washington and Lee McCormick Library.

ALUMNI AT UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

There are now five Washington and Lee Alumni teaching at the University of Florida, Gainesville, Florida: Dr. Harry M. Philpott, '38, Professor of Religion; Dr. Freeman H. Hart, '12, in the Humanities; Dr. Edward Lyons, '12, Chemistry; C. Arnold Matthews, '37, Money and Banking; Philip K. Yonge, III, '39, Law. Robert E. Lee, '41, after teaching mathematics for two years, is now taking work toward his Ph.D. in the College of Education.

A service of Thanksgiving in Lee Chapel formally opened the three-day program of Bicentennial celebration.

Alumni Returning to THE BICENTENNIAL REUNION

Following is the list of Alumni who made reservations previous to the Reunion on June 16-18. Many others were added on the local registration dates, and in a few cases alumni who had made reservations found they could not be present.

associate of Wall Street broker Earle T. Holsopple. He returned to Washington and Lee in 1940 to teach economics.

During World War II, Dr. Adams served as a lieutenant-commander in the Navy. His wartime activities included duty as administrative officer of the Naval Training Schools, Harvard University, and later as executive officer of the Navy College Training Program in the office of the Chief of Naval Personnel, Washington, D. C.

Dean L. W. Adams

L. W. Adams Becomes Dean of School of Commerce and Administration

Lewis Whitaker Adams, professor of economics, has been elevated to the post of dean of the Washington and Lee School of Commerce and Administration, effective at the beginning of the University's 201st term in September. He succeeds Dr. Glover Dunn Hancock, who has served without interruption since 1919.

Dr. Adams is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, class of 1925, and received his Ph.D. degree from Cornell University, where he also spent two years on the faculty. He had been a member of the Washington and Lee staff as an instructor in economics from 1926 until 1929, when he entered the investment securities business in New York as an Declining a government proposal that he continue as civilian director of the Navy's postwar NROTC program, he returned to Lexington to resume his work on the Washington and Lee commerce school staff.

In his announcement that the vacated post had been filled, President Gaines said, "My advisers join me in feeling that to this important task Dr. Adams brings adequate experience, scholarship, administrative ability and character. The university is particularly fortunate that, in spite of his business success and subsequent proposals that he remain in the naval service as its chief educational administrator after the war, he preferred to return to active teaching."

Born in Andrews, North Carolina, in 1904, Dr. Adams is married to the former May Davidson, of Lexington, and they have two children. He is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary leadership fraternity, Phi Kappa Sigma, social fraternity, and Alpha Kappa Psi, honorary commerce fraternity.
