Annual Meeting
To Be June 1
These interesting scenes from campus activities of 1907 were sent by Wesley P. Jackson, '11, of Tampa, Florida. The top picture was of a long-forgotten initiation. The lower photo is of a pushball fight between freshmen and sophomores. Mr. Jackson was unable to attend the fiftieth reunion of his class, but members who were in Lexington for the event enjoyed looking at the old pictures he sent.
THE COVER: Spring sports offer a good outlet when collegiate sap begins to rise. This is a rough moment in the popular sport of lacrosse, a game with Loyola University.

SPRING 1961
Three generous benefactors have given Washington and Lee $125,000 this spring to foster the University scholarship and faculty aid programs.

James H. Clark, '31, a Dallas businessman, made an initial gift of $25,000 to be used to stimulate excellence in teaching among faculty members. The gift is the first of four which he will make over a four-year period.

In accordance with Mr. Clark's wishes, the University will use the funds to increase salaries of "those faculty members who possess distinguished records of teaching service in Washington and Lee's classrooms and laboratories." The first awards will be made for the 1961-62 school year.

Mr. Clark attended Washington and Lee from 1927 to 1929. He is chairman of the board of the Philadelphia Suburban Water Company and serves as an officer, director or on the executive committees of many national corporations, including Diebold Incorporated, Mississippi Valley Barge Lines, and Investors Diversified Services.

President Fred C. Cole declared, "It is especially significant that Mr. Clark recognized the vital need for Washington and Lee and higher education in general to provide proper compensation for its teachers. His generous support enables Washington and Lee to make further progress in its continuing program for improving faculty salaries. We are deeply indebted to Mr. Clark, not only for the monetary value of his gift, but for the encouragement and incentive it brings to our faculty.

"It is Mr. Clark's wish that his gift not only serve as a measure of recognition for past service, but that it help create added incentive for Washington and Lee professors to develop still further their talents and abilities as teachers of undergraduates."

A fund of $50,000, provided by an anonymous donor, has been established at Washington and Lee to give scholarship assistance to students preparing for medical careers.

Proceeds from the gift will support a scholarship fund, to be known as the "J. W. Warner, M.D., Scholarship Fund," honoring the late Dr. John W. Warner, '03.

The awards will be given to upperclassmen majoring in pre-medical studies who possess "those exceptional qualifications, academic and otherwise, needed to accept the immense responsibility and challenge of serving mankind through medicine." The amount of financial assistance will be in accord with an individual student's need.

The University expects to award the first Warner scholarships at the close of this semester.

"The importance of encouraging promising young men to pursue careers in medicine cannot be overemphasized," President Cole said.

"Recently, there has been a decline in the number and quality of applications for admission to medical careers. This is due, in part, to the extraordinary economic sacrifice required of men pursuing medical careers. Many of our best students and potentially our best doctors are, for reasons beyond their control, deterred by this prospect and turn to other fields. Material encouragement should be given to those young men who elect to pursue this difficult road of life."

Dr. Warner was a gynecologist, and headed the obstetrical division of Doctors' Hospital in Washington at the time of his death in 1946. He attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, and was assistant gynecologist at Roosevelt Hospital in New York City, before going to Washington in 1920. He served in the Army Medical Corps in France during World War I, and received the Verdun Medal. He was a member of the American College of Surgeons and was a Fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine.

A bequest of $50,000 has been received from the estate of the late Mrs. Samuel Jordan Graham of Washington, D.C., for scholarships.

Income from the bequest will establish the Judge and Mrs. Samuel Jordan Graham Scholarships at Washington and Lee for upperclassmen with outstanding records in political science, pre-medicine, and law.

An additional sum of $3,500 was bequested to the University by Mrs. Graham to provide perpetual maintenance of the grave of William Graham on the campus near Lee chapel. William Graham, first man to hold the title of president of the institution, was an ancestor of the late Judge Graham.

Mrs. Graham died December 5, 1959, and is buried in Lexington at the Graham family plot. Judge Graham was a member of the class of 1876 at Washington and Lee.

Development Campaign Dollars Are Turning Into Bricks, Steel

The sounds of bulldozers, hammers and saws are ringing out once more at Washington and Lee, as construction men begin work on three separate projects on campus.

The largest of the three, a four-story building for the department of physics and biology, and modifications to Howe Hall, will cost $1,359,836. A four-story dormitory to house ninety-one students, most of them freshmen, will cost $326,545. A new steam boiler, and improvements to the existing heating plant to take care of additional buildings, will involve an expenditure of $49,949.72.

Target date for completion of all construction is August 1, 1962.

Including equipment, furnishings, and fees, the three projects will cost the University nearly $2,000,000.

The science facilities are a direct result of the two-year campaign which sought funds from among Washington and Lee’s alumni, parents, and friends. Turning their dollars into imposing brick structures for generations of scholars is a feat in which all who donated can take pride.

The new science building will relieve generally crowded conditions in Howe Hall, which now houses chemistry, geology, and biology. It will provide a new location for the department of physics, now situated in Reid Hall, which is scheduled for renovation in the future to accommodate the department of journalism and communications.

The new dormitory will be a self-liquidating investment, and will serve the primary purpose of eliminating the use of several small auxiliary dormitories for freshmen. The building will complete a three-unit housing center. Two other facilities, Newton D. Baker dormitory for upperclassmen, and John W. Davis dormitory for law students, were completed in 1959, along with Evans Dining Hall. The new dormitory will connect with Davis Hall, forming a U-shaped arrangement with the other units. The old Preston house, once the location of the University medical office and lately a freshman dormitory, is being razed to make room for the modern building.

Of the University’s normal class of 320 freshmen, only 277 can be accommodated in the regular freshman dormitory. The new building, to be directly across Washington street from the freshman dorm, will rectify this condition.

Additions to the heating plant will take care of the new science building, and also will provide adequate reserve capacity for improvement of the existing general heating system.

Architect for all projects is the Lynchburg firm of Clark, Nexsen, and Owen. Contractors for the work are: for the science building, John P. Pettyjohn and Company of Lynchburg; for the dormitory, W. W. Coffey and Son of Lexington; and for the heating plant, the Boiler and Brick Refractory Company of Richmond.
Universities and Athletics: An Address

ACADEMIC STANDARDS AND INTEGRITY
MUST BE MAINTAINED IN REGARD TO SPORTS

By FRED C. COLE
President of Washington and Lee

Dr. Cole recently participated in a special panel of the Sixteenth Annual National Conference on Higher Education in Chicago. Discussions included the relationship of athletics to college standards. A summation of Dr. Cole's remarks is presented here.

FORMAL AND ORGANIZED athletic competition is an established and venerable institution of western civilization. The association of athletics with educational institutions is old and is characteristic of British-American culture. Athletics therefore have a legitimate place in American colleges and universities; interest and participation in sports by students is both normal and desirable.

An extracurricular athletic program is however an adjunct, and not a primary essential, of an educational institution. Colleges, technological institutes, and universities are the only agencies in our society which can provide the higher academic and professional instruction which the society requires. They have been established for this specific purpose. Successful athletic programs are conducted by many kinds of non-educational agencies. In other words, education and schools must exist together; athletics and schools can and often do exist separately. The objectives and standards of a university should therefore be determined by its educational mission; extracurricular interests should be governed in conformance with these objectives and standards.

Furthermore, it should be obvious that the future of the world depends upon the effectiveness with which trained intelligence can be brought to bear upon the major problems of man and his universe. The adequacy of our education will be the deciding factor. The results of games will signify nothing.

An intercollegiate athletic program should benefit both the participants and the institutions which they represent.

For individuals, the advantages and satisfactions of athletic competition might include the development of physique, character, and personality, and emotional catharsis. The experience is represented as instilling self-reliance, as fostering simultaneously the desire to excel and the spirit of fair play, and as inculcating the ability to cooperate for mutual ends, even at the sacrifice of immediate self-aggrandizement.

ATHLETICS ARE VALUABLE

If any of these claims are valid—and at least some of them are in most cases—athletics make a valuable contribution to the educational process. It follows, then, that colleges and universities should provide opportunities for as many students as possible to take part in organized sports. The number of participants will vary, of course, from one school to another, as will the number of intercollegiate sports. There appears to be no necessary correlation between the breadth of the program and the popular identification of the school with emphasis on athletics, or with the strength or type of competition which is normally faced.

Expense of operation is obviously a major factor in the maintenance of a high-participation program. Normally, no more than two or three sports, and sometimes none besides football, pay their way through gate receipts. Some institutions depend upon profits from these sports to finance others to a great extent. Others consider athletic costs a legitimate general or educational expense. Under the circumstances, only those institutions with relatively great endowments or other sources of large general income can conduct broad programs of intercollegiate athletics.

Institutional benefits of intercollegiate athletics are usually conceived in vicarious or empathic terms. Students and alumni identify themselves with the team, exult in its success, despair in its defeat. Inter-interest in the team provides a unifying bond among students in different academic programs, and alumni in diverse occupations living in many places. It also serves as a continuing link between the alumni and their alma mater. This association is wholesome as long as it remains subordinate to and apart from educational considerations, which should always be the chief source of student and alumni pride and affection. There is no evident connection whatever between touchdowns or goals and the quality of teaching in academic classrooms.

SPECTATOR ACCOMMODATIONS

Many others besides students and alumni are interested in college sports, and a college or university should provide the spectator accommodations which it reasonably can for persons genuinely interested in its athletic teams and in those of its usual opponents. It is not obligated to conduct entertainment or spectacles with no educational value for the benefit of the general public.

As the objective in any competition is to win or excel, it is recognized that value must be placed upon victory. But if athletics are to continue as a wholesome influence, victory should never be the overriding consideration in college athletics. It is assumed that words so often used by coaches and others interested in sports (character-building, sportsmanship, team spirit, and others of similar import) represent true goals and not mere lip service. A winning athletic team may be a source of great satisfaction; but it is small compensation for loss of integrity by an individual or an institution.

Not more than half the teams which play on a given day can win. Where tie scores can occur, fewer than half will gain victory. If victory is the only gratification to be had, the total of disappointment will always be greater than the total of satisfaction. It would be foolish to support a system which is logically absurd and psychologically damaging. Sports should provide a healthy catharsis of emotions and not a pathological frustration.

Victory has, of course, an economic aspect. Winning teams ordinarily draw more spectators than the losing ones; and many institutions depend upon gate receipts for most of their athletic income. But it must be remembered that it serves no educational purpose to play winning contests in order to attract crowds large enough to finance winning contests. It is indeed a vicious cycle when this occurs.

TIGHTEN ADMISSIONS

No admission policy should be designed to facilitate the enrollment of persons who wish to attend an institution primarily for purposes other than educational. Admissions pressures will continue to increase. Our civilization cannot afford to deny a superior education to a superior person in order that a boy with little or no scholastic ability may be allowed to play games.

If the academic standards and integrity of an educational institution are to be maintained in regard to athletics, the athletic policies and practices of the institution must be subject to academic authority. The faculty should have full authority for prescribing all curricula, methods and criteria for instruction, and rules of eligibility for participation in athletics. The athletic director, or similar officer should be responsible to a principal administrative officer of the institution, on the same basis as any other subordinate administrative officer, and subject to the same policy regarding appointment and removal. The budget of the athletic department should be subject to the approval and audit of the chief fiscal officer of the institution. Any standing executive or advisory committee which functions in the field of athletics should be appointed in the same way and by the same authority as similar committees in other areas of administration, and its members should serve as individuals rather than as representatives of any groups or interests. No organization of students, alumni, or other persons, within or without the institution, should have any more to say about athletic policy and procedure than it has in regard to academic policies, excluding, of course, athletic conference organizations and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES

At this point in history, it is imperative that the most effective possible use be made of America's educational resources. Any serious hindrance to this purpose may be disastrous, and even minor obstacles are dangerous. The best instruction must be given to the best students. Universities and colleges of high standards should resist pressures upon themselves, and to help other institutions to do so. Those seeking athletic preeminence are often a small but highly vocal minority, while those who favor educational excellence are frequently a silent majority.

The proper relationship of intercollegiate sports to the general framework of higher education is a problem, varying in its scope and intensity from one institution to another. But it is not a problem without a solution or solutions. It is my hope that the principles and beliefs that I have expounded rather dogmatically here will prove helpful, if not in solving problems, at least in stimulating thinking in what I believe is the proper direction.

Many Washington and Lee Teachers Win Study Grants and Fellowships

AWARDS WILL ASSIST WITH WORK DURING SUMMER AND NEXT YEAR

Scholarship among Washington and Lee's faculty members is an accepted attribute.

But acknowledgement of that talent is receiving an even greater recognition this year. A large number of fellowships and study grants have been awarded to professors for advanced study or research projects which will further their classroom instruction. Many of these awards are to the University's junior faculty members, which is a healthy sign of progress.

These are some of the outstanding awards for this summer or next year:

Dr. Robert D. Whitaker, '54, assistant professor of chemistry, has received a $4,518 grant from the Research Corporation of New York for a summer research project.

He will continue a study of compounds between iodine-chlorides and amines begun last year under a Glenn grant. Assisting him will be a senior, John R. Ambrose of Roselle Park, New Jersey. About half the grant will be used to purchase equipment for the study, which will begin July 1.

Charles B. Brockmann, an instructor in Romance languages, is one of sixty-five college teachers in America to be awarded a Danforth Teacher Study Grant for next year. He will study two semesters and two summers at the University of California in Berkeley. His current field of research is the work of the late Albert Camus, a contemporary French writer.

Robert E. R. Huntley, '50, associate professor of law, was awarded a $6,750 Fellowship in Law Teaching by Harvard University, and will attend that college in 1961-62.

Dr. William A. Jenks, '39, professor of history, won a $6,000 grant from the Social Research Council for research in Austria next year.

Dr. Leonard E. Jarraud, assistant professor of psychology, was given a $2,900 research grant from the National Institute of Health to study the effects of irradiation on behavior.

Eleven other professors will share $4,419 in Glenn Grants from the University for research and study projects through 1961. They are:

Dr. Jay D. Cook, '43, associate professor of accounting, for research on national income accounting.

Dr. Sidney B. B. Coulling, '46, assistant professor of English, for research in the Huntington Library in Pasadena, California, on the influence of Jonathan Swift upon Thomas Carlyle.

Dr. Cecil D. Eby, Jr., assistant professor of English, for research on certain American authors in the Boston area in connection with an advanced American literature course which he will teach next year.

Dr. Fitzgerald Flournoy, Jr., assistant professor of accounting, for study at several large public accounting firms, including interviews and observations concerning new developments in public accounting.

Dr. Thomas P. Hughes, associate professor of history, for work in Cambridge, Massachusetts, on a project begun last year, “An International History of the Electrical Industry, 1870-1914.”

Dr. James G. Leyburn, professor of sociology, for study at the University of North Carolina and Duke University on recent developments in sociological theory and methods, and a study of the organization of the undergraduate major in sociology at these schools.

Dr. Stanley T. Lowry, assistant professor of economics, for a study of land use history and potential in the Rockbridge County area, including an analysis of marketing possibilities for timber and other resources.

Wilfred J. Ritz, '38, professor of law, for preparation of a final manuscript for a “Bibliography of Virginia Legal History Prior to 1800.”

Robert Stewart, associate professor of fine arts, to attend the
Dr. Charles V. Turner, professor of history, for research and study in Western American history at the University of California.

The Glenn Fund was established in 1953, through a $120,000 gift from the late philanthropist, John M. Glenn, '79, an official of the Russell Sage Foundation.

Four professors have been awarded grants for summer study by the Research Council of the University Center of Virginia, Incorporated.

Dr. Paul C. Hayner, associate professor of philosophy and religion, will continue research at the Harvard University libraries on a book he is preparing on the philosophy of religion.

Dr. Leon F. Sensabaugh, professor of history, will gather material on United States-Brazilian relations at the National Archives and the State Department in Washington.

Dr. James S. Patty, associate professor of Romance languages, will spend a month in France, to finish research on Hippolyte Babou, a contemporary of Baudelaire.

Dr. Edward D. Myers, head of the department of Philosophy, will resign from Washington and Lee this summer to become cultural attaché at the American Embassy in London, He has been a member of the faculty since 1949.

The new post will be the second such assignment he has held since 1958, when he was granted two years’ leave of absence to serve as cultural attaché at the American Embassy in Bonn, West Germany.

An energetic scholar, he is the author of “Education in the Perspective of History,” and collaborated with British historian Arnold J. Toynbee in a gazetteer volume for use with Toynbee’s “A Study of History.”

Dr. Edwin C. Griffith was appointed to the Lexington School Board in January, filling an unexpired term of two and one-half years. He is professor of economics, and serves also as president of Stonewall Jackson Hospital. He is a past president of the Community Chest and of the Lexington Lions club, and has been on the board of the Chamber of Commerce. He is a member of the town’s planning commission and was formerly its chairman.

University News

- President Fred C. Cole received an honorary degree of doctor of laws from Union College at a special Founder's Day convocation in Schenectady, New York, on February 24, 1961. He was also one of the two speakers for the occasion, which marked the 166th anniversary of the chartering of the college. The other speaker was Colgate W. Darden, former president of the University of Virginia, who discussed the future of the South.

Dr. Cole's subject was the career of Robert W. Toombs, first secretary of state of the Confederacy, and an 1828 graduate of Union College.

- Dr. Francis P. Gaines, chancellor of the University, was a speaker on February 5 at ceremonies in the Washington Cathedral, commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the Peace Convention, called by Virginia in a futile attempt to avoid the Civil War.

The Convention was held in the old Willard Hotel, February 4-27, 1861, with 121 delegates representing 21 of the 34 states.

Dr. Gaines said, in part, "The Peace Convention was right in its undertaking. I have never understood the scholars, perhaps carried away by their own rhetoric, who maintain that this war was needed to make us truly united. War, with its tidal waves of destruction and slaughter and grief, is the answer to no human problem, and it is an insult to the intelligence that God gave us that we cannot find other answers. Thus we dream of peace. The very postage symbol on our letters asks that we pray for peace. Possibly, and I speak reverently, we must do more than pray. Peace, it seems, it not to come while we are drifting and dreaming even in devotion. We must work for peace and in its behalf deny ourselves. We must seek to remove the causes of war."

- In an Honors Convocation address at Mary Baldwin College in February, Dean William W. Pusey, III, said the current craze for gadgets, electronic brains, computers, and teaching machines is a serious threat to one of education's most important by-products, individuality.

"I am not naive enough to deny the usefulness of machines," he declared. "However, their proliferation makes me uneasy."

In discussing by-products of a liberal education, Dean Pusey cited enjoyment of reading as a valuable habit to be carried from college to adult life.

Also among by-products he noted were independent judgment, a rational approach to problems, intellectual humility, a distrust of total answers, tolerance, optimism, humor and contemplativeness.

- Three faculty members in the department of chemistry will be promoted effective September 1.

Dr. John H. Wise will be upped from associate professor to professor. Dr. J. Keith Shillington and Dr. William J. Watt, both assistant professors, will become associate professors. Dr. Wise was a chemist for the Manhattan Project during World War II, and has been at Washington and Lee since 1953. Dr. Shillington is active in summer research work. Dr. Watt has taught for three summers at the institute for High School teachers sponsored by the National Science Foundation at Alabama College.

- Dr. Esmarch S. Gilreath, head of the chemistry department, will serve as a member of the faculty at a summer institute for college chemistry professors at Oregon State College, Corvallis, Oregon.

The institute is one of three sponsored by the National Science Foundation to increase college teaching effectiveness in chemistry, and runs from June 26 to August 5.
Dr. Gilreath will direct a course in “Recent Developments in Organic Chemistry.” His textbook on organic chemistry has been used for the course in previous summer institutes at Oregon State.

GEORGE J. IRWIN, ’20, associate professor of Romance languages, is the translator of an English language edition of the highly acclaimed, “Introduction to the Philosophy of History,” by French sociologist Raymond Aron.

The 349-page volume, published in April by Beacon Press, is the second work of Aron translated by Professor Irwin to be published this year. Last August, his rendition of “France: Steadfast and Changing” was published by the Harvard University Press.

Professor Irwin has been a member of the faculty since 1925.

DR. WILLIAM J. WATT, assistant professor of Chemistry, will be a member of the faculty of the summer National Science Foundation Institute for high school teachers at Alabama College, Montevallo, Alabama.

The ten-week program is aimed at improving the competence of science teachers in secondary schools. They will be able to qualify for master’s degrees in science teaching after three such summer sessions.

UNDERGRADUATES

WOODROW WILSON National Fellowships aimed at encouraging undergraduates to pursue careers in college teaching have been awarded to four University seniors.

Receiving the highly-competitive awards for 1961-62 were: Grayfred B. Gray and James L. Hughes, Richmond, Virginia; James A. Vann, III, Birmingham, Alabama; and Lynwood D. Zinn, Clarksburg, West Virginia. The Fellowships cover the cost of the first year in graduate school.

Gray will continue study in philosophy; Hughes in mathematics; Vann in history; and Zinn in anthropology.

A RICHMOND pre-medical student will deliver the valedictory address for the 1961 graduating class. He is Brian H. Vitsky, a senior from Richmond. He achieved a nearly perfect 2.92 average of a possible 3.0.

Son of a doctor, Brian expects to enter Johns Hopkins Medical school next year. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, having been selected during his junior year. He was awarded “outstanding sophomore” honor in 1959 by Phi Beta Kappa, on the basis of his academic achievement.

THE FIRST student one-man art show in the history of the University’s Department of Fine Arts was staged in March by Norbert W. Irvine. He is a senior who turned from studies in commerce and economics to work in the fine arts, and has taken every art course offered here.

For two years he has served as a departmental student assistant to Professor Marion Junkin, and also holds art classes for some Lexington school children three times a week.

In his exhibit were thirty paintings and pieces of sculpture, a number of which were sold to spectators. His sculpture mainly involved the use of scrap metal, welded together to form startling angular designs. His biggest project to date has been the creation of a bronze bowl through a “lost wax” process made popular during the Renaissance. He carved the bowl from pure wax, formed a mold of fine plaster about it, then fired it continuously for thirty-six hours to melt the wax from inside the mold. Then it was cast in bronze at a Waynesboro foundry.

From near Lexington, Norbert is married to the former Celia Commons of Burlington, North Carolina. He hopes for a career in teaching, after he attends graduate school next year.

ONE OF THE newer students at Washington and Lee is a Rockbridge county businessman, George A. Lear, a 1935 political science graduate of Brown University. He is enrolled as a special student in the School of Commerce and Administration, where he is learning why he became the successful businessman he did.

Mr. Lear took over his father’s lumber business in 1935 and ran it until World War II brought him duty as a combat officer in the Marine Corps. In 1946, he became president of Moor and White, one of the world’s largest manufacturers of pulp and paper mill machinery, and held this position ten years. He now has business interests in Philadelphia, and in Lexington, where he is back in the timber business again.

He hopes to enter the Law School here next September, fulfilling an ambition he held during his undergraduate days at Brown. His twenty-six year vacation from formal study hasn’t bothered him at all, and he says that studying isn’t half the drudgery that many younger students claim it is.

- A debate team composed solely of freshmen won three of twelve individual speaking awards given at the Mt. Mercy Varsity Invitational Debate Tournament in Pittsburghs this spring. Thirteen colleges took part, and only Duquesne University gained more individual honors than Washington and Lee.

The team was composed of William A. Noell, Jr., Bluefield, West Virginia; Alfred E. Eckes, Jr., Bradford, Pennsylvania; John W. Clark, Jr., Birmingham, Alabama; and John H. Kirkley, Atlanta, Georgia.

At the Miami University Invitational Cross-Examination Debate Tournament at Oxford, Ohio, two Washington and Lee debaters ranked high in honors. William Boardman of Columbus, Ohio, took second place among 64 debaters from leading colleges and universities. William Buice of Charlotte, North Carolina, placed seventh.

The debating team captured the Virginia state championship in the annual Tau Kappa Alpha tournament. William W. Chaffin, English instructor, is the coach.

- An unusual father-son honor took place in April, when Beta Gamma Sigma initiated Courtney R. Mauzy and Courtney R. Mauzy, Jr., into the Washington and Lee chapter.

Mr. Mauzy is vice-president and trust officer of the Charlotte, North Carolina, office of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Courtney, Jr., a Phi Beta Kappa and co-captain of the football team, and his father profess a friendly rivalry. The elder Mauzy graduated from the University of Virginia, while Junior chose Washington and Lee. After graduate school next year, Courtney, Jr., will join the North Carolina National Bank, a chief competitor of his father’s bank.

Others honored at the initiation by the national society for students of business administration were: Earl S. Mattingly, ’25, treasurer of Washington and Lee, and students Stephen H. Paley, Stephen W. Rutledge, and Harry S. Wilbourn.

- Outstanding academic work by an alumnus at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute has resulted in a gift of $1,000 to Washington and Lee from the International Nickel Company of New York.

Edward A. Corcoran, ’60, of South Richmond Hill, New York, was awarded the nickel company’s 3-2 Combined Study Program Scholarship at R.P.I. It is the custom of the company to award a companion grant of $1,000 to the liberal arts college from which the student in the program transferred.

Under the combined study program conducted by Washington and Lee and Rensselaer, a student normally attends the University for three years, then transfers to Rensselaer for two additional years, and receives a B.S. degree from Washington and Lee, and an engineering degree from Rensselaer upon graduation.

By carrying more than the normal academic load, Mr. Corcoran won his bachelor’s degree here in only three years, and expects to complete his work on a chemical engineering degree at Rensselaer in just one year.

- Two gifts have been made to the Director’s Fund of the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation. One was from John P. French, ’50, of Topeka, Kansas, president of Luce Press Clipping Service. The other was from the Clifton Forge Daily Review, Virginia’s smallest daily paper. Both have donated to the Fund in previous years.

- Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, leader of the Conservative Republicans, spoke before a capacity crowd of 1,300 at Doremus gymnasium on March 1. His address was sponsored by Pi Sigma Alpha, honorary political science fraternity.

With a topic of “Federal Aid to Education Is Unnecessary,” the senator declared states can finance their own public schools, if they will but make the effort. And local financing avoids the big carrying charge levied on the taxpayer by the federal government, he added.

While making it clear he is no segregationist, he said he thinks it would be a mistake for Congress to enact further civil rights legislation this year. "Let's leave this thing alone for awhile," he declared. He voiced the opinion that Richard Nixon might've won the presidential election by picking up more Southern states if he had not emphasized the Republican civil rights program.

- Dr. Germaine Bree, a member of the Institute for Research in the Humanities at the University of Wisconsin, discussed "The writer and Our Times: Malraux, Satre, Camus," on April 10.

Dr. Bree, a noted authority on French literature and the late French author Albert Camus, served with the French underground forces during World War II.

- The chairman of the University of Indiana geology department, Dr. John B. Patton, talked on "Geology and World Affairs" on April 6, here.

He met with University geology students April 5-7, under the auspices of the Visiting Geological Scientist Program of the American Geological Institute.

- The Department of religion joined with the Seminar in Literature series to present Dr. William R. Mueller in two addresses on April 4-5.

Dr. Mueller, chairman of the English department at Goucher, discussed "The Literature of Biblical Commitment" and "The Literature of Ultimate Concern." The event marked the first of a series of joint seminars the religion department hopes to sponsor with other departments and lecture programs at the University.

- A former Fulbright scholar spoke in duPont auditorium on March 8, on the subject, "The Obsolescence of Isolationism." The speaker was Dr. Walter W. Deshler, professor of geography at the University of Maryland. He has studied in British East Africa, and took part in an expedition to northern Kenya in 1951 with the Oxford University Expeditions Club.

- Dr. Nicholas Nyaradi, a former Hungarian Minister of Finance, spoke on "Shall We Survive?" on April 14. A naturalized American citizen, he is now the director of the School of International Studies at Bradley University.

During World War II, Dr. Nyaradi was active in the underground movement against the Nazis. After the war, he spent seven months in Moscow negotiating a Russian reparation claim against Hungary. From these conferences with Soviet leaders came his book, "My Ringside Seat in Moscow."

- A Washington and Lee alumnus has presented the school with an authentic 161-year-old antique grandfather’s clock valued at about $8,000.

The clock was given by Duncan G. Groner, ’35, of New York, and now stands in the reception room. of the Dean of Students' office. It was made by John W. Bailey, Jr., a Hanover, Massachusetts, clockmaker and inventor, who produced the elegant timepiece for Joseph G. Rea of Boston, about 1800. The clock is an eight-day, weight-driven instrument.

The cabinet styling is predominantly Sheraton, but it has carved twisted columns on the hood, and quarter columns between the chest indicator.

Mr. Groner received the clock from his grandfather, a descendent of the Rea family.

LAW SCHOOL

- FIVE WASHINGTON AND LEE law school graduates were among the 122 men who successfully passed the Virginia State Bar Examinations.

  They were George H. Fralin, Jr., Paul Bolt, John Garrett, Kenneth O. Huntingdon, Jr., and William E. McLaughlin.

- ABOUT SIXTY Law School alumni returned to campus on April 21-22 for the thirteenth annual Tucker Law Lectures, delivered by the Honorable E. Barrett Prettyman, circuit judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

  More than one hundred alumni, faculty, and wives attended the luncheon on April 22, immediately following the last lecture.

  The Law School Association met after the luncheon, and elected as its president for 1961-62, Judge Thornton G. Berry, Jr., '34, of the West Virginia State Supreme Court of Appeals, Charleston, West Virginia. He succeeds Edward S. Graves, '30, of Lynchburg.

  Judge Prettyman has held his present position since 1945, when he was nominated by President Truman. He was chairman of the President’s Conference on Administrative Procedure. His Dougherty lectures at the University of Virginia have been published in book form under the title, "Trial by Agency." For fifteen years, he lectured at Georgetown University on tax law. He is a former president of the District of Columbia Bar Association.

ATHLETICS

- FOR A TEAM that turned in only a 5-9 record for the season, the 1961-62 basketball Generals certainly endeared themselves to students and alumni. They hustled all year, making up for lack of height and experience, but the night they hustled the most was on February 13 when they pulled off a 78-68 upset victory over the University of Virginia.

  Of course, this was no great team of Cavaliers, but even so, Coach Billy McCann’s Atlantic Coast Conference team was supposed to have easy pickings against the outmanned Generals. But led by the fiery play-making of sophomore Brett Thackston, the game’s top scorer with 27 points, and by the tremendous rebounding and scoring of sophomore Rodger Fauber, the Generals grabbed the lead early and held it. Fauber, who wound up the season among the national leaders in rebounding, grabbed off 24 rebounds and added 26 points in the win over Virginia.

  The Generals also proved a spoiler for the Little Eight champs, Randolph-Macon, when the Jackets came to Doremus Gymnasium. Fauber with 23 and Thackston with 18 were the big guns in a 73-69 win.

  The team was handicapped in the late stages of the campaign by injuries which deprived it of the services of Ken Kowalski, still another sophomore, and by the loss of 6'-6" freshman John McDowell due to academic difficulties. But Coach Bob McHenry has the entire bunch back next year, plus some additional support from some freshmen surprises off a frosh team with a 11-4 season which included a string of eight straight wins at one point.

Fauber was named to the second team of the Associated Press All-Virginia small college team.

The Generals' swimmers, braving a beefed-up schedule but setting new pool records in the process, didn't repeat their unbeaten season of last year, but the 6-4 record they did compile brought no loss of prestige. Again led by Elliott Maynard, the brilliant breast stroke speedster, the swimmer added to a winter sports domination of the University of Virginia by besting the Cavalier mermen 59-33 early in the season.

Coach Norris Eastman, who assumed the coaching duties this year from long-time veteran E. P. "Cy" Twombly, entered Maynard in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships at Princeton, and the Portland, Me., junior placed second in the 100-yard breast stroke. At season's end, Maynard was ranked 12th among men in his event in the nation.

In wrestling, a sport slowly but surely climbing back into a position of preeminence at Washington and Lee, the General matmen enjoyed their best season in years with a 7-3 record. In the final match of the year, the wrestlers made it a clean sweep over Virginia with an unprecedented 28-0 victory for Coach Dick Miller.

Losses were to North Carolina, Franklin and Marshall, and West Virginia, while victories were recorded over New York University, Pfieffer, Gallaudet, Hampden-Sydney, Duke, N. C. State, and Virginia.

With the spring sports season half completed as of this writing, winning seasons are in prospect for every sport except lacrosse, where inexperience and injuries have hurt grievously.

After having suffered 1-15 and 3-17 seasons in two previous years, the baseball team—composed essentially of the same players—has risen up to assume a role of opportunists. Behind superb pitching by senior right hander Roy Carpenter—known last year as "Hard Luck" Carpenter—timely hitting and excellent base running, Coach Joe Lyle's team has moved to a 6-4 mark at mid-season.

Carpenter now has won four straight, as have the Generals, and chances are good that Washington and Lee may have its first winning baseball season since 1952 when the Generals carded a 10-7 record.

A relatively weak schedule is keeping the track team from displaying just how much depth and balance it does possess. Coach Norm Lord's thincals have now won 15 straight dual meets over a two-year span, just completing their second undefeated season in a row.

Jim Hickey, a junior from South Boston, has established new Washington and Lee records in the 100 and 220-yd. dashes. Against Lynchburg College, he ran the 100 in 9.75, shading the 9.8 mark that three other W&L runners, including Cy Young, had held since 1930 when W. S. Sandifer last ran a record-tying race. Earlier against Wake Forest, Hickey sped 220 yards on a straight track in 21.3, three-tenths of a second better than R. P. Grant's mark of 1931.

Coach Cy Twombly's golfers are 6-1 so far this season, with Jack Vardaman continuing to lead the linksmen in his junior year. Coach Bill Washburn's tennis team is 6-3, with the Generals getting good play from senior Bill McWilliams and freshman John Baker.

The lacrosse team is suffering at the 5-7 stage of its season, and things will get no better, it seems, this year. Some promising freshmen and sophomores are on hand, but in lacrosse, perhaps more than any other sport, nothing counts so much as experience and the skill that comes with it. A notable win was in an 8-5 victory over the touring team from Oxford-Cambridge Universities in England, the first contest on American soil for the British, whose team was a host to the W. and L. squad which toured England in 1956.

A testimonial dinner was held by 800 friends for I. H. Kempen, in Galveston, Texas, on January 14, 1961. Mr. Kempen, a business and civic leader for more than half a century in Galveston, is still active in the city. He served for thirty-two years as director, vice-president and president of the Galveston Cotton Exchange; mayor, and commissioner of finance of Galveston; advisor to the University of Texas medical branch; chairman of the Medical and Hospital committee for the Galveston Chamber of Commerce; and a member of the board of directors of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railroad. January 14 was proclaimed as "I. H. Kempen Day" in Galveston by the mayor.

1896
Marion W. Ripy, at the advice of his doctors, has retired and moved to Venice, Florida. His address is: Grenada Apartments, P. O. Box 706, Venice, Florida.

1898
Benjamin F. Harlow is 87 years old and is taking life easy on the farm, "Clifton," outside of Lexington. His son, F. Houston Harlow, and family moved into his home, following the death of Mrs. Harlow, December 1, 1960.

1899
J. A. McClure, now living in St. Petersburg, Florida, is approaching with vigor his eighty-ninth birthday this year. Still very active and busy, he writes that his three sons, all graduates of Washington and Lee, are doing well.

1902
Dr. W. T. Ellis has retired from medicine, except for a little office work and a few private calls. He was surgeon to the Bureau of Police and Fire in Philadelphia for thirty-five years. Address: 1115 Lindley Avenue, Philadelphia 41, Pennsylvania.

1903
The Alumni Office has received a communication from B. B. Shively of Marion, Indiana. He attended Washington and Lee between 1899-1902, and has continued through the years to be a loyal member of the alumni association.

1905
William J. Turner has retired to 1717 S. W. Park Avenue, Portland, Oregon, after thirty-five years in Chile, South America, and seventeen years in various parts of the United States.

1908
David Tay Moore, who celebrated his eightieth birthday on February 8, 1961, was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws Degree by Davis and Elkins College last June.

1909
S. Blount Mason, Jr. is retired, and lives in Baltimore, where he keeps busy working in his garden. He says his motto now is "never run when you can walk, never walk when you can sit, and never sit if there is a bed handy."

1910
Robert S. Keebler retired in March, 1959, after twenty-five years of legal service with the government, principally with the Securities and Exchange Commission. He and his wife live in Chevy Chase, Maryland.

Dr. Devall E. Gwathmey, Episcopal minister of Wytheville, Virginia, is still active in visiting and ministering to the church parishes. His most recent visit was in Virginia Beach for five months.

Dr. W. E. Moreland began the practice of medicine in Nicaragua in 1914, but has been practicing in Powhatan, Louisiana, since 1917. At 75, he is still actively engaged in a daytime practice.

Miles Cary Johnston is a partner in an architectural and engineering firm, Carneal and Johnston, in Richmond, Virginia. He is an avid golfer and still loves to play.

The Rev. James N. Montgomery had a part-family reunion during Christmas of 1960. His two daughters, both married to medical doctors, together with nine grandchildren, joined in the celebration. The sons-in-law are doctors in Korea and the Congo.

B. M. Higginbotham is living in Lake-land, Florida. He retired about ten years ago, but has been successful since then as a land surveyor.

After graduation Michael Brown started in the manufacturing and wholesale timber business in Georgia and New York. Between 1917 and 1921 he served in the government building boats. Married in 1926, the Browns make their home in Matawan, New Jersey. He remains active in the timber and security investment business.

Henry Moncure retired in March, 1959, from the Civil Service Commission. He was at the Radford (Virginia) Arsenal, Ordnance Department, as chief of acceptance and assistant chief inspector, powder, explosives, and missiles. This position also included being chief chemist in charge of the Ballistic Range. The Moncares bought "The Custom House" in Tappahannock, Virginia, which was built before 1650 as a tavern, and added to by order of the Crown in 1680 as the first custom house on the Rappahannock River.

Howard A. Doss will receive his fifty-year Masonic pin in April, 1962. He writes that he looks forward to this and to his Golden Anniversary at Washington and Lee.

Francis P. Gardner retired from the U.S. Navy Medical corps in 1946 with the rank of commander, and makes his winter home in Eau Gallie, Florida. In the summer, when the snows are gone and the rock fish begin to bite, he moves back to Matthews, Virginia.

Richard A. Smith, former director of athletics at Washington and Lee, served in February as co-chairman of the fund drive for the Rockbridge County-Buena Vista Mental Health Association.

Harry M. Satterfield writes that he is in the tough and risky salvage business in California. He swims daily all year around in San Francisco Bay where the average temperature is 52 degrees.

Richard W. Johnson was an agriculture graduate of West Virginia University in 1913, after spending one year at Washington and Lee. He got a master's degree in agriculture from Wisconsin University in 1914, and since that time, has run the home farm, producing certified seeds and registered livestock, mostly shorthorn cattle. He was one of the original founders of the Farm Bureau in West Virginia, and served as county chairman. He assisted in establishing a Farm Co-operative, a livestock housing association, and was first chairman of the Agricultural Conservation Program in Monroe county, West Virginia.

C. H. Morrisett is Virginia State Tax Commissioner. During this spring, he has been traveling with the State Capital Outlays Commission to colleges, prisons, and mental hospitals in the state, to assist in recommendations to Governor Lindsay Almond, Jr. the capital needs of the state institutions for the next six years. He spent one night in Lexington during his tour via chartered bus, and was able to see his alma mater again. "I don't get up to Lexington much," he says. "Too busy in Richmond!"

Buford S. Burks has practiced dentistry in Crewe, Virginia since 1923. He settled there after World War I and in 1935 married the former Susie Epes of Blackstone, Virginia.

Walter H. Surrey retired January 1, 1961, from active business but has gone into the field of real estate in Richmond, Virginia.

Warren C. Brown, Jr., says he has enjoyed excellent health in all of his sixty-seven years, in spite of a fight with cancer four years ago, from which he is completely recovered. He is the father of a son and two daughters, and boasts six grandchildren. In past years, he has been president of the Nashville Rotary Club, active in auto and insurance organizations, on the board of the YMCA and Chamber of Commerce. He has been vestryman in the Episcopal church, and recently retired as president of El Paso Council of Churches.

Francis Pickens Miller has finished six years of service on the Central Committee of World Council of Churches. He is a member of the Board of the Southern Regional Council and has been instrumental in organizing the Committee for Religious Freedom. During the 1960 presidential campaign, Mr. Miller organized the Straight Democratic Ticket Committee in Virginia.

Alex M. Hitz after finding retirement "too boring a life" is now an assistant county attorney, trying land condemnation cases in Atlanta. He and his wife plan a trip to Hawaii next fall to visit their son, Capt. James C. Hitz, 54, U.S. Marine Corps.

Colonel Frank Hayne retired from the Army in 1947. After several moves around in the United States, accompanied each time by a house sale, he moved to London, England in 1957. He has been in Europe ever since and writes that the advantage is being able to move about without selling a house. The doctors, he says, advise his giving up wine—he plans to go to Spain since he says it easier to give up Spanish wine than French.

Dr. Wiley Davis Forrest is abroad, serving with the State Department in Surahaja, Indonesia. He will return to this country in December 1963.

Russell S. Rhodes retired in 1959 as a Chamber of Commerce executive in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and has since then been vice-president of Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Tulsa. Mr. Rhodes and his wife were to spend this month touring Europe.

Edd W. Dearmon was a member of the architectural group which restored the White House in Washington in 1947-51. He retired in 1953 as a government architect and now lives in Lincolnton, Georgia. He is an elder in the Presbyterian Church.

E. L. Hix has retired from a forty-four year career with Union Carbide Corporation. At the time of his retirement on January 31, 1961, he was superintendent of the company's plant at Portland, Oregon. He has been active in the Portland Chamber of Commerce, and has served on its board of directors. He served as chairman of the Northwest Industrial Health Conference in 1958. He and Mrs. Hix planned a leisurely trip to Florida after retirement, but will continue to make their home in Portland.

Dr. Charles W. McNitt has moved to Charlottesville, Virginia, and intends to open an office there during the coming year.

WASHINGTON AND LEE'S Gamma of Virginia chapter of Phi Beta Kappa observed its fiftieth anniversary, in day-long activities on April 12.

One of the highlights of the observation was the address in Lee chapel at noon by Dr. Howard F.
Lowry, president of the College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio. He spoke on "Margins of Possibility" at the annual Phi Beta Kappa-Cincinnati convocation. He also spoke at the initiation banquet that night for sixteen new student members and two honorary initiates.

Alumni members of the chapter were invited to come back for the activities, and a number of them responded. Among events scheduled for them were an informal luncheon, and an afternoon reception at the home of Washington and Lee's President Fred C. Cole.
At the reception, a string ensemble played chamber music popular in 1776, the year in which Phi Beta Kappa was founded at the College of William and Mary.

Formal initiation of new members took place at 6:30 o'clock in the Student Union. Among the ini-tiates were: Charles R. McDowell, Jr., '49, columnist for the Richmond Times-Dispatch; Dr. Edward
D. Myers, professor of philosophy;
law seniors John Page Garrett,
Portsmouth, Virginia; Nicholas H.
Rodriguez, Magnolia, Delaware;
Emil J. Sulzberger, Jr., Phoebus,
Virginia; and Hugh V. White, Holland, Virginia; seniors John A.
Broadus, Richmond, Virginia;
Roy Carpenter, Bryan, Texas;
Grayfred B. Gray, Richmond, Virginia; Henry H. Harrell, Sabot, Virginia; David W. Haslett, Hickory, North Carolina; James L.
Hughes, Richmond, Virginia;
Courtney R. Mauzy, Jr., Charlotte,
North Carolina; Stephen H. Paley,
Kensington, Maryland; Milford F.
Schwartz, Washington, D.C.; John
H. Soper, Kansas City, Missouri;
James A. Vann, III, Birmingham,
Alabama; and junior Joseph L.
Goldstein, Kingtree, South Carolina.
LYON W. BRANSON has spent many years in service to community projects and veterans' affairs in Mississippi. A colonel in the National Guard of Tennessee, he served three years as Chief of Gare of the Forty and Eight in Mississippi, Grand Cheminot, Grand Chief of Gare, Cheminot National, Sous Chef de Chemin de Fer, and National Director of Voiture activities. As a member of the American Legion's Special Legislative Committee, he helped draft the "GI Bill" and sponsored it through Congress. He was named a National Director of the United Fuel Gas Company of Mississippi, which he helped to set up 26 years ago.

1920

CARL K. GILCHRIST is assistant vice-president of the United Fuel Gas Company of Charleston, West Virginia. He is also secretary of the Board of Trustees of Morris Harvey College.

1921

JAMES HOWZE BRYAN, having met the prescribed requirements, has been awarded the professional designation, M.A.T., from the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

1922

W. J. L. PATTON, a banker in New York City, has been appointed to the Board of Control of the First National City Bank of New York.

1923

SAUNDERS GUERRANT is still selling insurance for Mutual of New York. He recently qualified for a trip to the Waldorf in New York City, for his sales record.

DR. ANDREW T. ROY is engaged this year in writing a book, The Church on the Rim of East Asia, for the United Presbyterian Church. In September, 1961, he will return to Hong Kong to be vice-president in charge of public relations of Chung Chi College. Dr. Roy has one son who is a second secretary of the American Embassy in Bangkok, and another son who is working for his Ph.D. at Harvard in Chinese Intellectual History.

DR. HERBERT POLLACK is on a round-the-world tour, under the auspices of the Ford Foundation. He is investigating the research potentials of certain research institutions in the Far East and in Western Europe. Dr. and Mrs. Pollack own a farm south of Leesburg, Virginia, where they often escape from the rigors of a New York City existence.

A. H. CROWELL is employee relations coordinator for the Gulf Oil Corporation in Houston, Texas. Prior to his recent appointment, he was manager of employee and dealer relations for Gulf's Southern marketing region in Atlanta, and in the New York marketing division. Address: 1616 Main Street, Houston.

WILLIAM C. WELLS is a member of the six-man board of directors of the West Coast Hospital Association. The association has been responsible for the development and promotion of better medical facilities in Clearwater, Florida, and the surrounding area. Owner of radio station WMOA in Marietta, Ohio, Mr. Wells moved to Florida in 1955.

RABBI DAVID H. WISE has been named a member of the national Committee of Alumni Overseers for Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in New York City. Rabbi Wise, of Congregation Rodeph Shalom, Philadelphia, will serve in Pennsylvania in an advisory capacity for the rabbinic schools, and interpret the program to interested groups.

CHARLES J. HOLLAND retired as an attorney, and now lives in Lake Placid, Florida. He also spends part of the year in Phoenix, Arizona.

After retirement from the USAF Medical Corps as a colonel in November, 1959, N. F. ATRIA became deputy commissioner for the Tennessee Department of Mental Health. He lives in Nashville.

ASA MOORE JANNEY runs the general store in Lincoln, Virginia, which also serves as village post office. His customers are tickled at some of the advertisements he runs for his store such as the sale ad he ran which said, "Shirts are off, pants are down at Janney's." Another time in an ad, he promised written permission to hunt on his farm with every hunting coat bought at his store.

FRED B. KING, JR. was recently elected to the board of directors of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Youngstown, Ohio. He is president of the Youngstown Area Chamber of Commerce. Fred is president and treasurer of the Fred B. King Sons Company of Youngstown, a mortuary.

Bill Washburn outlined the standard procedures and steps in securing a well-rounded, participating Chapter. The meeting closed with a film about Washington and Lee.

CLEVELAND

The Cleveland alumni chapter entertained at a luncheon at the Mid-Day Club on March 21, 1961. Bill Washburn, Alumni Secretary from Lexington, was principal speaker.

Hal Gates, '48, president of the chapter, presided at the luncheon and announced plans for the chapter's next meeting in late summer, when present students and entering freshmen will be on the program. A football movie of the Generals' 1960 undefeated football season was enthusiastically received. The group expressed congratulations to visitor Dave Garver, Jr., who will enter Washington and Lee in September and extended him a welcome to the University.

BIRMINGHAM

Executive secretary Bill Washburn, '40, was introduced and gave a brief report on the current developments now underway on the campus. The group was pleased to recognize several guests whose sons are planning to enter Washington and Lee as freshmen this September. A movie of football highlights of 1960 was shown.

CHICAGO

A group of Chicago alumni, headed by Bill Hillier, '38, and W. C. Baker, '38, met at the University Club on Wednesday evening, March 22, 1961. The meeting was held to discuss the possibility of reactivating the alumni chapter of the Chicago area.

Bill Washburn, Executive Secretary, from Lexington was on hand to suggest ways and means to carry out this program. Several suggestions were made and a committee appointed to study them. Further notice of other developments in this area will be mailed to the alumni.

MEMPHIS

Alumni in the Memphis area met March 16, 1961, for a stag dinner at the University Club. Presiding at the meeting was J. Hunter Lane, Jr., '51, president of the chapter, who presented the guest speaker, football coach Lee McLaughlin. In his review of the University's athletic program, McLaughlin showed some football films and praised the performance of local area players Graham Fulton, Lanny Butler, and Tommy Keesee. The coach noted that high hopes were held next year for freshmen Sid Butler and Jimmy Sylvestre. Bill Washburn, executive secretary of the Association was also introduced.

President Lane announced plans for a future meeting in April when Dr. James G. Leyburn from Washington and Lee was to be a visiting lecturer at Southwestern University at Memphis.

CHATTANOOGA

Alumni of the Chattanooga area met for a stag dinner March 14, 1961, at the Chattanooga Golf and Country Club.
Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn addressed the group with a synopsis of current campus and alumni activities. He also showed a movie film of the football season’s highlights. Presiding at the meeting was Gerry U. Stephens, ’50, president of the chapter, which has sixty-nine members in the immediate area.

NORFOLK

The Planters Club in Portsmouth was the scene for the Norfolk chapter meeting on April 6, 1961. Following a social hour, a banquet was held for a large number of alumni, wives, and dates. Several boys from the area whose applications have been accepted for the school term of September, 1961, were on hand with their parents. Henry I. Willett, Jr., ’52, presided over the affair and announced his successor as president of the chapter, Ferdinand Phillips, Jr., ’51. Earle Cadmus, ’26, was elected as vice-president and secretary.

Bill Washburn and Coach Lee McLaughlin were guest speakers from the University. A football movie film was shown, followed by comments and predictions for next year by Coach McLaughlin.

TRI-STATES

Washington’s birthday occasioned the meeting of the Tri-States alumni chapter in Huntington, West Virginia. The banquet was held in the Crystal Room of the Hotel Frederick and was preceded by a fine social hour. Alumni from Ashland, Kentucky, and Chesapeake, Ohio, joined the well-attended meeting to hear Bill Washburn, ’40, Executive Secretary, give a short address on the developments at the University.

Seldon McNeer, Sr., ’16, presided during the brief business session, at which the following officers were elected for the forthcoming year: president, Joseph W. Dingess, ’21; vice-president, Richard O. Parmelee, ’32; and secretary-treasurer, Noel T. Copen, ’57.

After a short discussion of plans for the future, a moving picture of the 1960 football season was shown.

LOUISVILLE

The Louisville alumni chapter met on January 19, 1961, for a business meeting at the Pendennis Club. After a fine program, the chapter elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Robert W. Vaughan, ’50, president; W. Temple Lewis, ’40; vice-president; and Ernest Woodward, II, ’40, secretary-treasurer.

DANVILLE

A stag alumni banquet for the Danville chapter was held in Martinsville, Virginia, on March 9, 1961, at the Lynwood Country Club.

Alumni from Bassett, Chatham, Danville, Halifax, Martinsville and South Boston gathered to hear the principal address by Bill Washburn, ’40, Executive Secretary.
Annual Alumni Meeting Will Be June 1
2:00 p.m. in Lee Chapel

PROPOSED CHANGES IN ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION AND BY-LAWS

Pursuant to the authorization given at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association in June of 1960, the Alumni Board of Trustees has recommended that certain changes be made in the Articles of Incorporation and the By-Laws. Notice of the proposed amendments to the Articles of Incorporation has been published as required by the laws of Virginia. Amendments provide for enlargement of the board of trustees, longer tenure of office for members of the board of trustees, and flexibility therein as the needs of the corporation may develop.

Proposed changes in the By-Laws include: (a) putting in proper form previously approved changes regarding the title and duties of the executive director; (b) the redefinition of an alumnus in accordance with actual practice; and (c) provision for the transition procedure for the enlargement of the Board of Trustees.

The above mentioned proposed changes are to be acted upon by the membership of the annual Alumni Association meeting on June 1, 1961, at 2 p.m. in Lee Chapel.
